Matters drifted along smoothly, even merrily, for several days. They were all young and full of the joy of living. They laughed in secret over the mishaps and perils. They whiffed and enjoyed the spice that filled the atmosphere in which they lived. They visited the gardens and the hofs, the chateau at Schonbrunn, the imperial stables, the gay "Venice in Vienna;" they attended the opera and the concerts, ever in a most circumspect "trinity," as Brock had come to classify their parties. Like a dutiful husband, he always included his wife in the expeditions.

"You are not only a most exemplary wife, Mrs. Medcroft," he declared, "but an unusually agreeable chaperon. I don't know how Constance and I could get on without you."

But the day of severest trial was now at hand. The Rodneys were arriving on the fifth day from Berlin. Despite the fact that the Seattle "connections" had never seen the illustrious Medcroft, husband to their distant cousin, there still remained the disturbing fear that they would recognize—or, rather, fail to recognize him!—from chance pictures that might have come to their notice. Besides, there was always the possibility that they had seen or even met Brock in New York. He lugubriously admitted that he had met unfortunate thousands whom he had promptly forgotten, but who seldom failed to remember him. It is not surprising, then, that the Medcrofts, ex parte, were in a state of perturbation—a condition which did not relax in the least as the time drew near for the arrival of the 5 o'clock train from the north. Constance strove faithfully, even valiantly, to inject confidence into the souls of the prime conspirators.

"You have done so beautifully up to this time," she protested to the dolorous Brock, "why should you be afraid? I once read of an Indian chief whose name was Young-Man-Afraid-of-His-Wife. He was a very brave fellow in spite of all that. You are afraid of Edith, but can't you be like the Indian? He"—

"That's all very nice," mourned Brock. "But he could cover his confusion with war paint. Don't forget that, my dear. Think of the difference in our disguises—war paint in daubs versus spats and an eyeglass! Besides, he didn't have to talk west end English. And, moreover, he lived in a wigwam and didn't have to explain a sky bedroom to strangers who happened along."

"That is a bit awkward," she confessed thoughtfully. "But can't you say that you have insomnia and can't sleep unless you are above the noise of the street?"

He looked at her with an expression that made a verbal reply to this suggestion altogether unnecessary.

"Nurse says that Tootles has forgotten the real Roxbury," she went on after a moment. "See how cleverly you have played the part."

Still he stared moodily, unconvinced at the roadway ahead. They were driving in the Haupt Allee.

"I hope I haven't got Roxbury into trouble by that interview I gave out concerning the new method of fireproofing woodwork in office buildings and hotels. It occurred to me afterward that he is violently opposed to the system I advocated. He'll have a—I might say a devil of a time explaining his change of front."

As a matter of fact, when Medcroft, hiding in London, saw the reproduced interview in the Times, together with editorial comments upon the extraordinary attitude of a supposedly conservative Englishman of recognized ability, he was tried almost beyond endurance. For the next two or three days the newspapers printed caustic contributions from fellow architects and builders, in each of which the luckless Medcroft was taken to task for advocating an impractical and famous New York hobby in the way of construction, something that staid old London would not even tolerate or discuss. The social chronicllings of the Medcrofts in Vienna as dispatched by the correspondents of this unhappy "Noll" to some extent in so far as Medcroft's peace of mind was concerned, but nothing could have drawn attention to the fact that he was not in London at that particular time so decisively as the Vienna interview and its undefended front. Even his shrewdest enemy could not have suspected Medcroft of a patience which would permit him to sit quiet in London while the attacks were going on. He found some small solace in the reflection that he could make the end justify the means.

On their return to the Bristol, Brock and Miss Fowler found the fair Edith in a pitiful state of collapse. She declared over and over again that she could not face the Rodneys. It was more than should be expected of her. She was sure that something would go wrong. Why—oh, why was it necessary to deceive the Rodneys? Why should they be kept in the dark? Why wasn't Roxbury there to counsel wisely, and more, ad infinitum, until the distracted pair were on the point of deserting the cause. She finally dissolved into tears, and would not listen to reason, expostulation or persuasion. It was then that Brock cruelly but effectively declared his intention to abdicate, as he also had a reputation to preserve. Whereupon, with a fine sense of distinction she flared up and accused him of treachery to his best friend, Roxbury Medcroft, who was reposing the utmost confidence in his friendship and loyalty. How could she be expected to go on with the play if he, the man upon whom everything depended, was to turn tail in a critical hour like this?

"How can you have the heart to spoil everything?" she cried indignantly. He looked at her in fresh amazement. "Roxbury would never forgive you. We have both placed the utmost confidence in you, Mr. Brock, and"—

"'Sh! Say, 'Roxbury, dear,'" interposed the practical Constance. "The walls may have ears, my dears."

Then Mrs. Medcroft plaintively implored his forgiveness and said that she was miserable and ashamed and very unappreciative. Brock, in deep humility, begged her pardon for his unnecessary harshness, and promised not to offend again.

"The first quarrel," cried Constance delightedly. "How nicely you've made it up. And you've been married less than a week!"

"Roxbury and I didn't have our first quarrel until we'd been married a year," said Edith reflectively.

"Oh, I say, Edith," exclaimed Brock, with a dark frown, "I'd rather you wouldn't be forever extolling the good qualities of my predecessor. It's very bad taste. Very much like the pies mother used to make."

"Silly!" cried Medcroft's wife, now in fine humor.

"Besides, Rox is an Englishman. It would take him a year to produce a quarrel. The American husband is not so confounded slow. I won't live up to Roxbury in everything."

It was decided that Constance should greet the Rodneys upon their arrival. The Medcrofts were not to appear until dinner time. Afterward the entire party would attend the opera, which was then in the closing week. Brock with splendid prodigality had taken a box for the final performance of "Tristan und Isolde." It is not out of place to remark that Brock loathed the Wagnerian opera. He was of "The Mikado" cult. He took the seats with a definite purpose in mind to cast the burden of responsibility upon his wife, who would be forced to extend herself in the capacity of hostess, giving him the much needed opportunity to secure safe footing in the dark area of uncertainty. He believed himself capable of diverting the youthful Miss Rodney and his discreet sister-in-law, but he was consumed by an unholy dread of Rodney pere. Something told him that this shrewd American business man was not the kind who would have the wool pulled over his eyes by any one. Brock felt that the support of Constance was of greater value than that of Edith at any stage or in any emergency.

Besides, he was now quite palpably in love with her. "I've got it bad!" he reflected in sober consideration of his plight; "but," came the ironic justification, "I'm able to confine it to the immediate family. That's more than most husbands can say."

CHAPTER VI.

Freddie Ulstervelt.

THE Rodneys descended upon the Bristol at 5 o'clock, rushing down from the Nord-Bahnhof as if there were not a minute to spare. Constance pursued Katherine to her room, where they revelled in the delights of a reunion, gradually coming out of its throes as the hour for dressing approached.

"We dine early, dear," said Constance, "with supper after the opera. I must be off to dress."

"I am so eager to meet Mr. Medcroft. Is he nice?"

"Curley" Cassidy Trafficed in Supreme Judgships.

NEW YORK—It took a court jury just fifty minutes to convict "Curly" Joe Cassidy and his right man, Louis T. Walter, Jr. The verdict was brought in to Justice Jaycox in the supreme court in Brooklyn at 10:55.

The charge is conspiracy in having sold to William Willetts, Jr., his nomination to the supreme court bench in 1911. The maximum penalty is two years imprisonment and $3,000 fine.

SIEGEL STORE IS BANKRUPT

U. S. Court Takes Charge of Concern Already in Receiver's Hands.

BOSTON, MASS.—Henry Siegel & Co., of Boston, one of the Siegel corporations for which receivers were appointed a month ago, was adjudicated bankrupt in the United States district court.

Immediately after the receivership proceedings last month local creditors filed an involuntary petition against the company, which was opposed by the receivers, William A. Marble and John S. Sheppard, Jr. The receivers later withdrew their objections and the company was declared bankrupt.

Baker sued his brother, Howard W. Baker, trustee of the estate; Henry D. Baker, United States consul at Bombay, India; A. M. Baker and Mrs. Bertha V. W. Alling, the other heirs and children of Baker, who was once president of Chicago board of trade.

SHELBY M. CULLOM CALLED BY DEATH

Former Illinois Senator Passes Away in Washington.

WASHINGTON — Shelby M. Cullom, former senator from Illinois, is dead after a long and courageous fight for his life. He practically slept away. At the last, kept alive only by oxygen, the ex-senator was unable to recognize his friends.

One of the most pleasant of his last moments was when the announcement was made that the government had decided to use Colorado instead of Georgia marble in the construction of the Lincoln memorial. He was one of the commissioners in charge of the memorial.

For fifty-seven years Shelby M. Cullom was a prominent figure in the politics of Illinois. From a young lawyer he jumped into politics as a Republican. He served as city attorney of Springfield, state representative, congressman, governor, United States senator and frequently as a national commissioner on various governmental affairs.

GOETHALS IS PANAMA HEAD

President Wilson Makes Canal Zone a Permanent Government.

WASHINGTON. — The President Wilson signed an executive order putting into operation on April 1 a permanent government for the Panama canal zone and naming Colonel Goethals as the first civil governor.

The permanent government of the zone, headed by a civil governor, eliminates the commission now in charge. Members of the commission are to be retained, however, until the opening of the canal, as a committee in charge of arrangements for the celebration incident to the opening, though without any administrative functions.

Bases Damages On Wages.

DETROIT, MICH.—A man that is working at the Ford plant has a right to collect more damages if injured by a street car than a man employed elsewhere is the contention of John Tilly. His ground is that Ford employes are getting more for a day's work and their loss while idle is greater.

Tilly alleges he was knocked off a motorcycle and injured by a car in Detroit.

TO PROBE WRECK

Government Will Investigate Collision at Sea.

DEATH LIST NOW FORTY-ONE

Captain Barry of the Nantucket Criticised for Immediately Backing His Vessel from the Crippled Monroe After the Collision—More Persons Might Have Been Saved Otherwise.

NORFOLK, VA. — An investigation of the fatal collision of the liners Monroe and Nantucket off Chesapeake bay was begun by inspectors of the department of commerce and of the government steamboat service.

Instructions from Washington were that the inquiry be thorough and every effort will be made to fix the responsibility for the disaster and loss of life.

Forty-one persons were drowned, according to the revised figures. Nineteen were passengers and twenty-two were members of the crew of the Monroe.

The steamship I. J. Merritt, with searchlights swathing the waves in every direction, searched all night and is still hunting for bodies.

Ninety-one persons were saved before the Monroe went down. The sixty members of the crew and many of the thirty-nine passengers saved and officers of the Nantucket have been served with summonses to appear before the department of commerce investigators.

Monroe Called Topheavy.

The Monroe was topheavy and in an unseaworthy condition, according to one report which the government will probe.

There is criticism here of Captain Barry of the Nantucket for backing his vessel from the crippled Monroe after the collision.

"If the two steamers had remained wedged together," said one of these critics, "the Monroe would have remained afloat until all the passengers and crew had been rescued."

Captain Barry refused to discuss the collision with the newspaper men on his arrival here. In his report to his superiors Captain Barry insisted that the collision was unavoidable, and could be attributed solely to the dense fog.

A hundred versions of the story have been told, and through the weaves of exaggeration, facts and fancies, the truth appears to stand out plainly for the investigators.

Facts All Agree Upon.

Both ships were going slowly and sounding their sirens in a dense fog. The Monroe was seen so suddenly and so close at hand that Captain Barry of the Nantucket had time only to reverse his engines. Despite the reversed engines the steel bow of the Nantucket tore such a hole in the Monroe that the old Dominion liner sank in ten minutes.

The fact that the Nantucket's engines were reversed when she struck accounts for her immediately backing off after ramming the Monroe. This precaution perhaps cost many lives.

There were eight life boats on the Monroe, enough to care for every passenger and member of the crew. The peculiar nature of the accident destroyed the usefulness of five of the boats, leaving three to accommodate all.

List of Passengers Lost.

A list of passengers lost from the steamer Monroe corrected and compiled by the old steamship company is as follows:

First class: Mrs. W. L. Bolton, Newark, N.J.; Lieutenant L. B. Curtis, U. S. army, died aboard life boat; J. Edward, U. S. navy; Mrs. D. Gibson, New York; J. Haskell, Cortlandt, N. Y.; Mrs. T. R. Harrington, Bridgeport, Conn., died aboard Nantucket; W. H. Ingram, Sumter, S. C.; Mr. Jelleff, Macarria Theatrical company; Mr. Lewis, Macarria Theatrical company; J. Okakamato, Japanese; Mrs. C. W. Poole, Gray, Va.; Infant Poole, child, Gray, Va.; J. F. Ray, New York; O. Wagner, U. S. marine corps.

Steerage: J. Gilbert, New York; M. Bolen, New York; C. Roper, New York; I. Wilson, New York, and an unknown Italian, New York.

"May 1 will be the twentieth anniversary of the Coxey army march to Washington," said Mr. Coxey. "On that day I shall be in Washington with 500,000 men to urge the government to establish a bank in each town of 1,000 people or more to lend money direct to the people."

WANT SUFFRAGE

Workers from Ten Eastern States Visit White House.

SUFFRAGIST DEMONSTRATION

President Wilson Is Urged to Assist the Movement for Votes for Women by Lending His Influence in the Effort to Establish House Committee on Suffrage—The Parade.

WASHINGTON — Clad in frocks of simple creation, representative of their trades, 400 women workers from ten eastern states, intent upon enlisting the support of the nation's chief executive for the votes for women cause, were received by President Wilson at the White House.

They were led by Miss Marguerite Hinchey, laundry worker of New York, and Miss Rose Winslow, a Pennsylvania weaver, who, as designated speakers, appealed to the president to assist the movement for woman suffrage by lending his influence to the effort to establish a house committee on suffrage.

It was the second time the president had been brought face to face with the suffrage question in an official way, and his attitude toward the petition of the women was already known. He holds he cannot urge legislation upon congress that has not been the subject of "organic party consideration."

This was what he told the officers of the National American Woman's Suffrage association two months ago. He made it clear he had expressed himself as personally in favor of the creation of a house committee on suffrage and had so informed a member of the house rules committee who had asked him his personal opinion.

When his personal opinion was asked by those who were co-operating with him the president said he freely gave it, but as the spokesman of the Democratic party he felt that he could not speak officially until there had been "organic" consideration."

The suffragist-toilers marched upon the White House from the public library with banners and streamers flying, after holding a meeting at which speakers aroused their enthusiasm to a high pitch. Represented in the line were New York, Massachusetts, Connecticut, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Virginia, West Virginia, Maryland, Rhode Island and the District of Columbia.

PINDELL DECLINES POST

Will Not Be United States Ambassador to Russia.

WASHINGTON — Henry M. Pin Washington, Feb. 3.—Henry M. Pindell of Peoria, Ill., has declined the ambassadorship to Russia.

His declination has just been made public at the state department.

Mr. Pindell wrote President Wilson that although the senate had investigated accusations in connection with his appointment he felt, nevertheless, that no controversy of any kind should surround the appointment of any ambassador, as it might be misunderstood abroad. The president, in a letter of regret, accepted Mr. Pindell's declination.

Gives Blood to Save Son.

FLINT, MICH.—Christopher Westran, the former city fireman and now steward of the Eagles' club here, gave up five ounces of his blood in a last attempt to save the life of his six-year-old son, William.

The boy has been suffering from nose bleed for several weeks and lost so much blood that several complications arose. He was taken to Hurley hospital and the blood transfusion operation was decided on by the physicians.

DEPUTY SHERIFF ON TRIAL JUMPS BOND

Judge Who Heard Roosevelt Case Is Presiding.

HOUGHTON, MICH. — When the case of the six deputy sheriffs charged with the second degree murder of two striking copper miners of Seeberville last August was called in the circuit court Thomas J. Raleigh, one of the defendants, failed to appear and his bond of $5,000 was declared forfeited. John A. Mann and F. W. Denton of Houghton are the bondsmen.

The other defendants are James Cooper and Arthur Davis, employes of the Waddell-Mahon corporation; Harry James and Edwin Polkinghorne, employes of Houghton county. It is said that the defense will be self-defense. Judge Flannigan of Norway, trial judge in the Roosevelt libel case at Marquette last spring, will preside at the trial.

Frank Novak, a striker, was dangerously wounded in a gun fight with James Jensen and Exel Strang, nonunion miners. Jensen and Strang were arrested, charged with the shooting. The accused men said they were returning home from Houghton in company with two other nonunion men when they were accosted on the road by Novak. After abusing them Novak, they declared, drew his revolver and fired twice, neither shot taking effect. The fire was returned and Novak was wounded in the arm and leg.

JURY GIVES UP MURDER QUIZ

Killing of Nonunion Men in Calumet Still Unsolved.

HOUGHTON, MICH. — After devoting two days to an investigation of the Painesdale murders, in which three nonunion men were the victims, the special grand jury which has been inquiring into disorders growing out of the copper mine strike, was discharged from further service.

Although no indictments were found in the Painesdale case, the jury recommended that a further investigation should be made by the sheriff's office. It was not willing, however, to fix responsibility for the death of the men in the "shooting up" of the house of one of the victims.

GOOD FELLOW TO "GRANNY"

Youth Makes Her Present of $10 of Her Own Money.

PORT HURON, MICH. — Arthur Duffield was arraigned in police court on a charge of stealing $170 from his grandmother, Mrs. Julia Hoffman.

It is charged that after stealing the money Duffield spent part of it in this city and then went to Cheyboygan to call on a young lady friend. When the officer arrived in Cheybogan young Duffield had succeeded in spending all but $[illegible] of the $170 bank roll which he admits stealing from his grandmother's trunk. To show his generosity young Duffield handed his grandmother $10 of her own money, before he left on his trip.

HIS FORGERIES ARE SQUARED

Young Man Has "Champagne Taste and Rain Water Income."

LANSING, MICH. — Leo H. Skillman, arrested several weeks ago charged with forgery, was released when his uncle, John Skillman, of Hastings, appeared and settled for the worthless checks issued by the boy. Skillman secured about $1,100 by means of his bad checks. He was married only a few months ago to a Lansing girl, and it was after the marriage that the worthless paper began to increase.

The prosecutor, in scoring Skillman, said he had a "champagne taste and a rain water income."

FERRIS HAS HIS OWN IDEAS OF EDUCATION

Pedagogue Governor Would Cut Out Some Things.

LANSING, MICH. — In an address before the Ingham county teachers' institute Governor Ferris, himself a pedagogue, said:

"If I had my way there would be no formal number work in the school until the pupils reached the fourth grade. I would have supplemental number work, but I would have it in connection with other work.

"We cannot change the present system, however. Public opinion stands back of the teacher and says 'You must do this,' just as public opinion stands back of the politician and says, 'You must do so-and-so.' Formal number work in the first, second and third grades is a positive injury to the child. The child is not ready for it."

The governor scored the teaching of domestic science and manual training in the schools. He said: "The public will learn sometimes that you can't turn out blacksmiths and cooks from the public schools. I'm for domestic science and manual training, but only in connection with the home."

MAN MEETS DEATH ON TRACK

Supposed He Was Hit by Train While Walking on Rails.

PORT HURON, MICH. — The body of Alfred G. Papineau was found on the railroad tracks at Tappan Junction, a few miles west of here, by railroad men. It was some time before his identity was known, owing to the condition of the body, which was strewn along the tracks for forty rods.

How Papineau met death cannot be learned, but it presumed while he was walking along the rails he was struck by a fast train.

USE FERRETS IN HUNT; FINED

Wexford Party Gives Up $80 for Violation of Law.

CADILLAC, MICH. — William C. McGinn, Harrison Hulbert, Peter Mooney, Chan Freeman, John Maybee and I. W. Rhodes, all residents of the northern part of Wexford county, near Mesick, were hunting rabbits with ferrets and were caught in the act by Deputy Game Warden Kidder, of Tustin.

STRICKEN NURSING BROTHER

Paralysis Seizes Two in Family Within Few Days.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH. — Frank B. Fee, aged fifty years, for more than fifteen years municipal truant officer, suffered a stroke of paralysis and died the same day.

A week ago John Fee, a brother, was stricken with paralysis and the truant officer had spent most of his time caring for him. John Fee is now in a serious condition and will not be advised of his brother's death.

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

He writes: "Dr. King's New Discovery ought to be in every family, it is certainly the best of all medicines for coughs, colds or lung trouble." Good for children's coughs. THE HUSBANDS OF EDITH

By

GEORGE BARR M'CUTCHEON

Copyright by Dodd, Mead & Co.

"He's the dearest thing in the world!" cried the other, her cheeks aglow.

"I'm so glad, on Edith's account. Most of these English matches turn out abominably," commented Miss Rodney, who was twenty, very pretty and very worldly. "Oh, did I tell you that Freddie Ulstervelt is with us?"

"No."

"We came across him in Berlin, and dad asked him to join us if he had nothing better to do, so he said he would. He was with us in Dresden and Prague and—don't you think he's awfully jolly?"

"Ripping!" said Constance with deplorable fervor.

"How awfully English! He said he'd seen you in Paris this spring."

"Yes," said Miss Fowler, her cheeks going red suddenly. "I told him you'd asked me to be with you in June." She could have cut out her tongue for saying this, but it was too late. Katherine laughed a trifle hardly after a stiff moment; then a queer light flitted in to her eyes—the light of awakened opposition. Constance was saying to herself: "She's in love with Freddie. I might have known it." Back in her brain lay the memory of Freddie's violent protestations of love, uttered during those recent days in Paris. He had threatened to throw himself into the Seine; she remembered that quite well—and also the fact that he did nothing of the sort, but had a very jolly time at Maxim's and sent her flowers by way of repentance. Knowing Freddie so well, it would not have surprised her in the least to find that he had become engaged to Katherine. His heart was a very flexible organ.

"Oh," said Katherine, "I believe he did say that you had mentioned us." Of herself she was asking, "I wonder if she is in love with him?"

And thus it transpired that Freddie Ulstervelt—addlepated, good looking, inconstant Freddie, just out of college—was transformed into a bone of contention, whether he would or no.

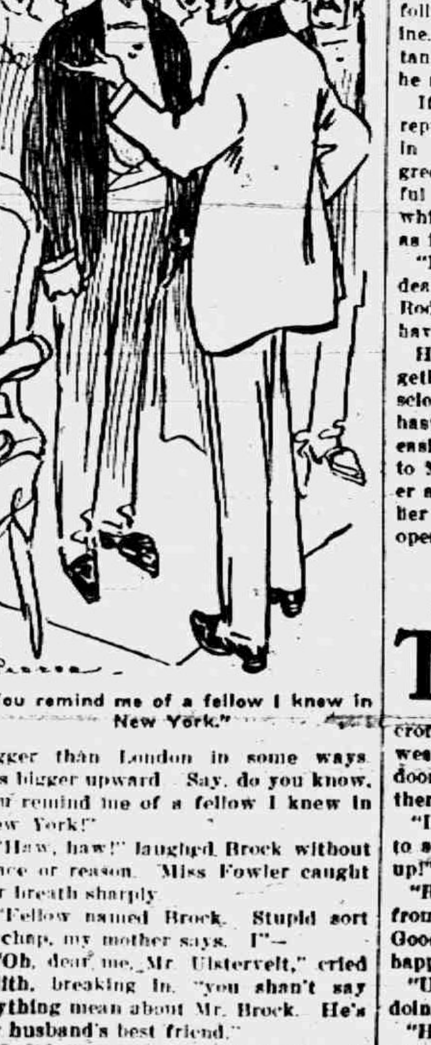
He was of the kind who love or make love to every new girl they meet, seriously enough at the time, but easily passed over if need be. Rebuffs may have puzzled him, but they left no jagged scar. He belonged to that class which upsets the tranquillity of inexperienced maidens by whispering intensely, "Heavens, it's grand!" And he means it at the moment.

Katherine Rodney was in love with him. He belonged to a fashionable New York family of wealth, and he had been a young lion at Pasadena during the winter just past. He owned automobiles and a yacht and an extensive wardrobe. These notable assets had much to do with the conquest of Mrs. Rodney. She looked with favor upon the transitory Mr. Ulstervelt, and believed in her heart that he had something to do with the location of the shining sun. But of this affair more anon, as the novelists say.

Brock was presented to the Rodneys just before the party went in to dinner. He managed his eyeglass and his drawl bravely and got on swimmingly with the elder Rodneys, until Constance appeared with Katherine and Freddie Ulstervelt. It was not until then that it occurred to Miss Fowler that Freddie, being from New York, was almost certain to know Brock either personally or by sight. She experienced a cold chill, the distinct approach of catastrophe. Brock had just been told that young Ulstervelt of New York was to be of the party. His blood ran cold. He had never seen the young man, but he knew his father well. He had even dined at the mansion in Madison avenue. There was every reason, however, to suspect that Freddie knew him by sight. Even as he was planning a mode of defense in case of recognition the young man was presented. Brock's drawl was something wonderful.

"I—aw—knew your family, I'm sure—aw, quite sure," he said. "You know, of course, that I lived in your—aw—delightful city for some years. Strange we never met, 'pon my soul."

"Oh, New York's a pretty big place, Mr. Medcroft," said Freddie good naturedly. He was a slight young fellow with a fresh, inquisitive face. "It's bigger than London in some ways. It's bigger upward. Say, do you know, you remind me of a fellow I knew in New York!"



"You remind me of a fellow I knew in New York."

"Haw, haw!" laughed Brock without grace or reason. Miss Fowler caught her breath sharply.

"Fellow named Brock. Stupid sort of chap, my mother says. I"—

"Oh, dear me, Mr. Ulstervelt," cried Edith, breaking in, "you shan't say anything mean about Mr. Brock. He's my husband's best friend."

"I didn't say it, Mrs. Medcroft. It was my mother." Brock was hiding a smile behind his hand. "She knows him better than I. To tell the truth I've never met him, but I've seen him on the Fifth avenue stages. You do look like him, though, by Jove!"

"It's extraordinary how many people think I look like dear old Brock," said the false Roxbury. "But, on the other hand, most people think that Brock looks like me, so what's the odds? Haw, haw! Ripping! Eh, Mr. Rodney?"

"Ripping? Ripping what? Good heavens, am I ripping anything?" gasped Mr. Rodney, who was fussy and fat and generally futile. He seemed to grow suddenly uncomfortable, as if ripping was a habit with him.

Dinner was a success. Brock shone with a refulgence that bedimmed all expectations. His wife was delighted. In all of the four years of married life Roxbury had never been so brilliant, so deliciously English (to use her own expression). Constance tingled with pride. Of late she had experienced unusual difficulty in diverting her gaze from the handsome impostor, and her thoughts were ever of him—in justification of a platonic interest, of course, no more than that. Tonight her eyes and thoughts were for him alone, a circumstance which, could he have felt safe, would have made him wildly happy instead of inordinately furious in his complete misunderstanding of her manner toward Freddie Ulstervelt, who had no compunction about making love to two girls at the same time. She was never so beautiful, never so vivacious, never so resourceful. Brock was under the spell; he was fascinated; he had to look to himself carefully in order to keep his wits in the prescribed channel.

His self esteem received a severe shock at the opera. Mrs. Medcroft, with malice aforethought, insisted that Ulstervelt should take her husband's seat. As the box held but six persons, the unfortunate Brock was compelled to shift more or less for himself. Inwardly raging, he suavely assured the party—Freddie in particular—that he would find a seat in the body of the house and would join them during the entr'acte. Then he went out and sat in the foyer. It was fortunate that he hated Wagner. Before the end of the act he was joined by Mr. Rodney, horribly bored and eager for relief. In a nearby cafe they had a whisky and soda apiece and, feeling comfortably re-enforced, returned to the opera house arm in arm, long and short, thin and fat, liberally discoursing upon the intellectuality of Herr Wagner.

"Say, you're not at all like an Englishman!" exclaimed Mr. Rodney impulsively, even gratefully.

"Eh, what?" gasped Brock, replacing his eyeglass. "Oh, I say, now, 'pon my word, haw, haw!"

"You've got an American sense of humer, Medcroft—that's what you have. You recognize the joke that Wagner played on the world. Pardon me for saying it, sir, but I didn't think it was in an Englishman."

"Haw, haw! Ripping, by Jove! No, no! Not you. I mean the joke. But then, you see, it's been so long since Wagner played it that even an Englishman has had time to see the point. Besides, I've lived a bit of my life in America."

"That accounts for it," said the tactless but sincere Mr. Rodney.

Brock glared so venomously at the intrusive Mr. Ulstervelt upon the occasion of his next visit to his own box that Mrs. Medcroft smiled softly to herself as she turned her face away. A few minutes later she seized the opportunity to whisper in his ear. Her eyes were sparkling, and something in her manner bespoke of bated breath.

"You are in love with my sister," was what she said to him. He blushed convincingly.

"Nonsense!" he managed to reply, but without much persuasiveness.

"But you are. I'm not blind. Any one can see it. She sees it. Haven't you sense enough to hide it from her? How do you expect to win?"

"My dear Mrs.—my dear Edith, you amaze me. I'm confusion itself; but," he went on eagerly, illogically, "do you think I could win her?"

"That is not for one's wife to say," she said demurely.

"I'd be tremendously proud of you as a sister-in-law. And I'd be much obliged if you'd help me. But look at that confounded Ulstervelt! He's making love to her with the whole house looking on."

"I think it might be polite if you were to ask him out for a drink," she suggested.

"But I've had one, and I never take two."

"Model husband! Then take the girls into the foyer for a stroll and a chat after the act. Don't mind me. I'm your friend."

"Do you think I've got a chance with her?" he asked with a brave effort.

"You've had one wife thrust upon you, why should you expect another without a struggle? I'm afraid you'll have to work for Constance."

"But I have your—I can count on your approval?" he whispered eagerly.

"Don't, Roxbury! People will think you are making love to me," she protested, willfully ignoring his question.

He returned to the box after the second act and proposed a turn in the foyer. To his disgust, Ulstervelt appropriated Constance and left him to follow with Mrs. Rodney and Katherine. He almost hated Edith for the tantalizing smile she shot after him as he moved away, defeated.

If he was glaring furidly at the irrepressible Freddie, he was not alone in his gloom. Katherine Rodney, green with jealousy, was sending spiteful glances after her dearest friend, while Mrs. Rodney was sniffing the air as if it were laden with frost.

"Don't you think Connie is a perfect dear? I'm so fond of her," said Miss Rodney, so sweetly that he should have detected the nether flow.

He started and pulled himself together. "Aw, yes—ripping!" He consciously adjusted his eyeglass for a hasty glance about in search of the easily disturbed Mr. Rodney. Then to Mrs. Rodney, his mind a blank after a passing glimpse of Constance and her escort: "Aw—er—a perfectly jolly opera, isn't it?"

CHAPTER VII.

The Would Be Brother-in-law.

THE next morning, bright and early, Mr. Alfred Rodney, a telegram in his hand, charged down the hall to Mrs. Medcroft's door. With characteristic far west impulsiveness he banged on the door. A sleepy voice asked who was there.

"It's me—Rodney. Get up. I want to see Medcroft. Say, Roxbury, wake up!"

"Roxbury?" came in shrill tones from within. "He—isn't he upstairs? Good heaven, Mr. Rodney, what has happened? What has happened?"

"Upstairs? What the deuce is he doing upstairs?"

"He's—he's sleeping! Do tell me what's the matter!"

"Isn't this Mr. Medcroft's room?"

"Ye-es—but he isn't in. He objects

What Happened to Billy Fisher?

Instead of driving in his automobile to the gravel pit Wednesday, Billy decided to make the trip with one of the Garlinghouse horses and cutters. What happened to him after he arrived will be best told by himself, as he did not drive the rig back but came in the old reliable way, by auto. His friends say that he is wearing a slightly bruised eyebrow but is otherwise no worse for wear.

DEATH OF MRS. W. T. BABBITT WIFE OF A FORMER TECUMSEH PASTOR OF THE PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.

January 20, 1914.

Nendham, N. J.
Jan 23, 1914.

Dear Mrs Slayton:

Our dear aunt. Mrs. Wm. H. Babbitt, passed away from us on Tuesday of this week. Today we had a farewell service in our home before sending her precious body on its long journey to Cleveland. It was very sad to think that no one could accompany her. The only one that could possibly have gone was a victim of an attack of grippe and could not take the journey.

Our pastor gave a loving tribute to her blessed presence and sweet influence among us. I know of no one who has made such an impression upon our community in so short a time as she has. Very soon after she came she took the superintending of the Cradle Roll connected with our Sunday School, and her loving attention to mothers and children was and is greatly appreciated.

On her birthday in December she received while very weak and ill, postals from all the babies and from other young people in Sunday School. These with the remembrance from friends in Cleveland and others made her very happy.

I feared that so much at one time would tire her but she wished me to read them all.

"Well," she said, "I think this is the best birthday I ever had." It seemed to do her a world of good. Her strength has been failing for the past year. We have especially noticed it since spring. But she kept herself up by sheer force of will when most people would have given way to weakness. We were very thankful that she did not suffer pain.

Your letter written partly on the way to California was one of the last that she was able to enjoy to the full. We shall miss her from our home sadly and our church and community have lost a loving tactful friend. Pardon my long letter, I almost feel that I know you having heard so much of you from one who loved you devotedly.

Very sincerely yours,
Mary J. Babbitt.

Rough Training at Eton.

Early in the last century many boys at Eton, England, had to undergo a rough training. An old Etonian who left the school in 1834 describes his experiences there as "worse than that of many inmates of a workhouse or jail. To get up at 5 on freezing winter mornings; to sweep their own floors and make their own beds; to go two by two to the pump for a scanty wash; to eat no mouthful of food until 9 a. m.; to live on an endless round of mutton, potatoes and beer, none of them too plentiful or too good; to sleep in a dismal cell without chair or table—such was the lot of boys whose parents could not afford to pay for a private room. Some of these underwent privations that might have broken down a cabin boy and would be thought inhuman if inflicted on a galley slave."

How to Use Peruna for Coughs and Colds

If Peruna were used at the beginning of every cold, coughs would generally be prevented.

After the cough begins Peruna will generally stop it just as quickly as it ought to be stopped. To stop a cough before all of the expectoration has been removed is to do great injury. After the expectoration has been properly removed the cough will stop itself. That is the only proper way to stop a cough.

Occasionally a cough depends upon an irritable condition of the larynx or bronchial tubes, in which there is little or no expectoration.

The problem of stopping such a cough is a slightly different one. Even in those cases Peruna ought to be taken, but sometimes it is necessary that local treatment be added.

Every one who has a troublesome cough or a lingering cold should write the Peruna Company, Columbus, Ohio, for a free copy of the "Ills of Life." There is no free pamphlet distributed to-day of more real value to the sick and afflicted than the new "Ills of Life." It is filled from cover to cover with actual cases of cough, colds and other climatic diseases in all stages and complications. You could scarcely fail to find your case exactly described in this book.

To neglect to do everything possible to get rid of a stubborn cold or chronic cough is very unwise indeed. Peruna has enjoyed a great reputation as a remedy in such cases for thirty or forty years. As a rule, a person who uses one bottle of it is always afterwards an enthusiastic advocate of Peruna. Peruna itself is a means of selling more Peruna than all advertisements put together.

Those who object to liquid medicines can now obtain Peruna Tablets.

REACHING THE SPOT

It Has Been Done, So Scores of Tecumseh Citizens Say.

To get rid of an aching back,
The sharp twinges,
The tired-out feelings,
You must reach the spot—get at the cause.
In many cases 'tis the kidneys.
Doan's Kidney Pills are for weak kidneys,
Tecumseh citizens testify

Henry Kempf, carpenter, Kilbuck St., Tecumseh, Mich., says: "My kidneys were not doing their work as they should and I was suffering from a lame and aching back. I got a supply of Doan's Kidney Pills at Wright & Son's Drug Store and it did not take them long to remove the trouble."

"If your back aches—if your kidneys bother you, don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—ask distinctly for Doan's Kidney Pills, the same that Mr. Kempf had—the remedy backed by home testimony. 50c all stores. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y. adv

A CURIOUS LOVE SCENE.

Rochefort Sprang a Surprise on the Troubled Couple.

Rochefort could be very democratic on occasions. I remember an amusing incident which occurred when Rochefort was in London. His French chambermaid fell in love with his English coachman, and they were engaged to be married. John, who never spoke of Rochefort otherwise than as "the marquee," gloomily informed Charlotte that their project must be kept a profound secret, for it was a custom in aristocratic houses in London that when servants in the same household became engaged to be married they were promptly dismissed. Charlotte could hardly believe this, but John assured her that it was so.

At last Charlotte took her courage in two hands and, dragging the trembling John behind her, advanced into the awesome presence of "the marquee" while he was taking coffee after lunch. I was present and witnessed the scene. "Monsieur Rochefort," said the chambermaid boldly, "I have something to tell you."

Rochefort—Tell me, my child.

Charlotte—John loves me, and I love John, and we want to be married. (John went as pale as a sheet.) Does monsieur see any objection?

Rochefort (his great blue eyes dancing with fun, his arms raised in the air)—Objection, my children, objection? What earthly objection can I have? Venez donc que je vous embrasse! (Come and let me embrace you.)

And, to the utter amazement of John, he heartily kissed both young lovers on both cheeks.—Westminster Gazette.

Can't Escape Lime Salts.

In answer to a communication from a lay correspondent, who expressed his belief that "the lime in common water has much to do with bringing on old age," the London Lancet says that while that opinion is common, it is, of course, fatuous. To those people who believe that water is the only possible channel by which lime salts are conveyed to the organism the writer says, "Lime salts are inseparable from the common, everyday articles of food, so that if hard water were left out of the dietary there would still be secured a large intake of lime salts, which could only be avoided by a hunger strike."

Stockwell's Ghost Story.

Stockwell was at one time famous for its ghost, which set all London in an uproar in 1772. Making the furniture dance and the crockery fall was the ghost's specialty, though by way of variety an egg once flew across the room and hit the cat. Having excited London and frightened Stockwell, the ghost retired, leaving behind a firm belief in his supernatural origin, until many years later a servant admitted that long horsehairs attached to the crockery and wires to the furniture had enabled her to play the ghost so successfully that frightened beholders never even detected such open feats as throwing the egg at the cat.—London Answers.

That Weak Back

accompanied by pain here or there—extreme nervousness—sleeplessness—may be faint spells—or spasms—all are signals of distress for a woman. She may be growing from girlhood into womanhood—passing from womanhood to motherhood—or later suffering from that change into middle life which leaves so many wrecks of women. At any or all of these periods of a woman's life she should take a tonic and nervine prescribed for just such cases by a physician of vast experience in the diseases of women.

Miss Elizabeth Lordahl of Berkeley, Cal., in a recent letter to Dr. Pierce said: "I was completely broken down in health, I was aching and had pains all over my body and was so nervous that I could scream if anyone talked to me, but I had the good fortune to meet a nurse who had been cured by Dr. Pierce's Prescription. I have never had an occasion to consult a physician since—am in excellent health."

MARRIAGE BY FORCE.

Greenland Youths Have a Rough Way of Showing Their Love.

The courtship and marriage customs among the Greenlanders were in early times simple and unceremonious. When a lovelorn youth made up his mind as to the girl he wanted to adorn and be useful in his hut of ice or snow he went to her house and dragged her forcibly to his own domain, where she was expected to stay without any further marriage ceremony.

If an affluent bridegroom he would perhaps soothe her lacerated feelings by presenting her with a new lamp or some other article of household utility. No matter how willing and even eager the bride was to marry a young man, Eskimo etiquette demanded that she should resist every attempt to drag her to her new home, and she must weep and wail bitterly once she was there. Indeed, she must continue to weep and wail for some days, run to her own home, only to be dragged back again.

It is said that this extremely simple marriage ceremony is the only one still in use on the east coast of Greenland, and the laws governing divorce are as informal as the laws of marriage.—London Telegraph.

TEA AS A MEDICINE.

Freshly Made and Taken in Moderation It Helps the System.

The use of tea, as opposed to its abuse or misuse, is highly beneficial to the system. There is no remedy equal to it for a tired headache. It washes out the stomach and gives it a fresh start for the next meal. A cup of tea in the early morning will often enable a better breakfast to be taken, and one in the afternoon between 4 and 5 o'clock helps to complete the digestion of the midday meal.

Furthermore, it serves a good purpose in making the blood circulate more freely and in dilating the vessels of the skin, thus assisting in the elimination of waste matter. In this respect it is much better adapted than cold drinks in hot weather, particularly for those engaged in active outdoor games, such as tennis, for it makes a more efficient thirst quencher and by flushing out the tissues helps to prevent the onset of fatigue. Have it freshly made, take it in moderation, and it will never do any harm. Especially is this the case with China tea.—From "Nervous Breakdowns."

Homer and Humbug.

I do not mind confessing that for a long time I have been very skeptical about the classics. I was myself trained as a classical scholar. It seemed the only thing to do with me. I acquired such a singular facility in handling Latin and Greek that I could take a page of either of them, distinguish which it was by glancing at it and, with the help of a dictionary and a compass, whip off a translation of it in less than three hours.

But I never got any pleasure from it. I lied about the pleasure of it. At first, perhaps I lied through vanity. Any scholar will understand the feeling. Later on I lied through habit, later still because, after all, the classics were all that I had and so I valued them. I have seen a deceived dog thus value a pup with a broken leg and a pauper child nurse a dead doll with the sawdust out of it.—Stephen Leacock in Century.

Operating Under Difficulties.

[illegible] a trip in Little Tibet, Dr. [illegible] his book "Thirty Years In [illegible] tells how three importunate [illegible] with cataract arrived at [illegible] Shayok imploring treatment. [illegible] box of instruments, but [illegible] sterilize them, and how [illegible] a fire? I told the Ladakis [illegible] tried to strike sparks [illegible] and steel, but the tinder [illegible]. One of them produced [illegible] gunpowder and placed it on a [illegible] a rag from his shirt and, laying it out, laid it by the powder, then with flint and steel ignited it. Then a cooking pot was produced, and soon water was boiling. What an anachronism between the aseptic surgery aimed at and the primeval method of fire production!

"While the instruments were being boiled I cleaned the eyes and instilled cocaine; then, kneeling in the sand, removed the three cataracts, completing the operations just before a gust of wind came, laden with dust and grit, which would have put a stop to the work. The gratitude of the people knew no bounds."

to the noise. Oh, has anything happened to Roxbury?" She was standing just inside the door, and her voice betrayed agitation.

"My dear Edith, don't get excited. I have a telegram from"—

She uttered a shriek.

"He's been assassinated! Oh, Roxbury!"

"What the dev— Are you crazy? It's a telegram from"—

"Oh, heavens! I knew they'd kill him; I knew something dreadful would happen if I left"— Here she stopped suddenly. He distinctly heard her catch her breath. After a moment she went on warily, "Is it from a man named Hobart?"

"No. It's from Odell-Carney. Hobart? I don't know anybody named Hobart." (How was he to know that Hobart was the name that Medcroft had chosen for correspondence purposes?) "We're to meet the Odell-Carneys today in Munich. No time to be lost. We've got to catch the 9 o'clock train."

"Oh!" came in great relief from the other side of the door. Then in sudden dismay: "But I can't do it! The idea of getting up at an hour like this!"

"What room is Roxbury in?"

"I don't know!" in very decided tones. "Inquire at the office."

Alfred Rodney was a persevering man. It is barely possible that he occupied a lower social plane than that attained by his wife, but he was a man of accomplishment, if not accomplishments. He always did what he set out to do. Be it said in defense of this assertion he not only routed out his entire protesting flock, but had them at the West-Bahnhof in time to catch the Orient express—luggage, accessories and all. Be it also said that he was the only one in the party save Constance and Tootles who took to the situation amiably.

"Dash the Odell-Carneys!" was what Freddie Ulstervelt said as the train drew out of the station. Brock looked up approvingly.

"That's the first sensible thing I've heard him say," he muttered, loud enough to be heard by Miss Fowler. "I say, who are the Odell-Carneys? First I've heard of 'em."

"The Odell-Carneys? Oh, dear, have you never heard of them?" she cried in surprise. He felt properly rebuked. "They are very swell Londoners. It is said"—

"Then, good heavens, they'll know I'm not Medcroft," he whispered in alarm.

"Not at all, my dear Roxbury. That's just where you're wrong. They don't know Roxbury the first. I've gone over it all with Edith. She's just crazy to get into the Odell-Carney set. I regret to say that they have failed to notice the Medcrofts up to this time. Secretly, Edith has ambitions. She has gone to the lord mayor's dinners and to the Royal Antiquarians and to Sir John Brodney's and a lot of other functions on the outer rim, but she's never been able to break through the crust and taste the real sweets of London society. My dear Roxbury, the Odell-Carneys entertain the nobility without compunction, and they've been known to hobnob with royalty. Mrs. Odell-Carney was a Lady Somebody-or-other before she married the second time. She's terribly smart, Roxbury."

"How, in the name of heaven, do they happen to be hobnobbing, as you call it, with the Rodneys, may I ask?"

"Well, it seems that Odell-Carney is promoting a new South African mining venture. I have it from Freddie Ulstervelt that he's trying to sell something like a million shares to Mr. Rodney, who has loads of money that came from real mines in the far west. He'd never be such a fool as to sink a million in South Africa, you know, but he's just clever enough to see the advantage of keeping Odell-Carney in tow, as it were. It means a great deal to Mrs. Rodney, don't you know, Roxbury, to be able to say that she toured with the Odell-Carneys. Freddie says that Cousin Alfred is talking in a very diplomatic manner of going to London in August to look fully into the matter. It is understood that the Rodneys are to be the guests of the Odell-Carneys while in London. It won't be the season, of course, so there won't be much of a commotion in the smart set. It is our dear Edith's desire to slip into the charmed circle through the rift that the Rodneys make. Do you comprehend?"

They were seated side by side in the corner of the compartment, his broad back screening her as much as possible from the persistent glances of Freddie Ulstervelt, who was nobly striving to confine his attentions to Katherine. Brock's eyes were devouring her exquisite face with a greediness that might have caused her some uneasiness if there had not been something pleasantly agreeable in his way of doing it.

"Yes—faintly," he replied after an almost imperceptible conflict between the senses of sight and hearing. "But how does she intend to explain me away? I'll be a dreadful skeleton in her closet if it comes to that. When she is obliged to produce the real Roxbury, what then?"

"She's thought it all out, Roxbury," said Constance severely, but almost inaudibly. "I'm sure Freddie heard part of what you said. Do be careful. She's going to reveal the whole plot to Mrs. Odell-Carney just as soon as Roxbury gives the word, treating it as a very clever and necessary ruse, don't you see. Mrs. Odell-Carney will be implored to aid in the deception for a few days, and she'll consent, because she's really quite a bit of a sport. At the psychological moment the Rodneys will be told. That places Mrs. Odell-Carney in the position of being an abettor or accomplice. She's had the distinction of being a sharer in a most glorious piece of strategy. Don't you see how charmingly it will all work in the end?"

"What are you two whispering about?" demanded Freddie Ulstervelt noisily, patience coming to an end.

"Wha-what the devil is that to"— began Brock furiously. Constance brought him up sharp with a warning kick on the ankle. He vowed afterward that he would carry the mark to his grave.

"He's telling me what a nice chap you are, Freddie," said she sweetly. Brock glared out of the window. Freddie sniffed scornfully.

"I'm getting sick of this job," growled Brock under his breath. "I didn't calculate on"—

"Now, Roxbury, dear, don't be a bear," she pleaded so gently, her eyes so full of appeal, that he flushed with sudden shame and contrition.

"Forgive me," he said, the old light coming back into his eyes so strongly that she quivered for an instant before lowering her own. "I hate that confounded puppy," he explained lamely, guarding his voice with a new care. "If you felt as I do you would, too."

She laughed in the old way, but she was not soon to forget that moment when panic was so imminent.

"I—I don't see how any one can hate [illegible] Freddie," she said without actually knowing why. He stared hard at the Danube below. After a long silence he said:

"It's all tommyrot about its being blue, isn't it?"

She was also looking at the dark, brown, swollen river that has been immortalized in song.

"It's never blue. It's always a yellow ocher, it seems to me."

He waited a long time before venturing to express the thought that of late had been troubling him seriously.

"I wonder if you truly realize the difficulty Edith will have in satisfying an incredulous world with her absolutely truthful story. She'll have to explain, you know. There's bound to be a skeptic or two, my dear Constance."

"But there's Roxbury," she protested, her face clouding nevertheless. "He will set everything right."

"The world will say he is a gullible fool," said he gently. "And the world always laughs at, not with, a fool. Alas, my dear sister, it's a very deep pool we're in." He leaned closer and allowed a sudden, half bantering, wholly diffident smile to cross his face. "I—I'm afraid that you are the only being on earth who can make the story thoroughly plausible."

"I?" she demanded quickly. Their eyes met, and the wonder suddenly left hers. She blushed furiously. "Nonsense!" she said and abruptly left him to take a seat beside Katherine Rodney. He found small comfort in the whisperings and titterings that came willy nilly to his burning ears from the corner of the compartment. He had a disquieting impression that they were discussing him. It was forced in upon him that being a brother-in-law is not an enviable occupation.

"Wot?" he asked almost fiercely after the insistent Freddie had thrice repeated a question.

"I say, will you have a cigarette?" half shouted Freddie, exasperated.

"Oh! No, thanks. The train makes such a beastly racket, don't you know."

"They told me at the Bristol you were deaf, but—Oh, I say, old man, I'm sorry. Which ear is it?"

"The one next to you," replied Brock, recovering from his confusion. "I hear perfectly well with the other one."

"Yes," drawled Freddie, with a wink, "so I've observed." After a reflective silence the young man ventured the interesting conclusion, "She's a stunning girl, all right." Brock looked politely askance. "By Jove, I'm glad she isn't my sister-in-law!"

"I suppose I'm expected to ask why," frigidly.

"Certainly. Because if she was I couldn't. Do you get the point?" He crossed his legs and looked insupportably sure of himself.

They reached Munich late in the afternoon and went at once to the Hotel Vier Jahreszeiten, where they were to find the Odell-Carneys.

Mr. Odell-Carney was a middle aged Englishman of the extremely uninitiative type. He was tall and narrow and distant, far beyond what is commonly accepted as blase. Indeed, he was especially slow of speech, even for an Englishman, quite as if it were an everlasting question with him whether it was worth while to speak at all. One had the feeling when listening to Mr. Odell-Carney that he was being favored beyond words. It took him so long to say anything that if one were but moderately bright he could finish the sentence mentally some little time in advance of the speaker and thus be prepared to properly appreciate that which otherwise might have puzzled him considerably. It could not be said, however, that Mr. Odell-Carney was ponderous. He was merely the effectual result of delay. Perhaps it is safe to agree with those who knew him best; they maintained that Odell-Carney was a pose, nothing more.

His wife was quite the opposite in nearly every particular except height and angularity. She was bony and red faced and opinionated. A few sallow years with a rapid, profligate nobleman had brought her, in widowhood, to a fine sense of appreciation of the slow going though tiresomely unpractical men of the Odell-Carney type. It mattered little that he made poor investment of the money she had sequestered from his lordship. He had kept her in the foreground by associating himself with every little venture that interested the ubiquitous smart set. Notwithstanding the fact that he never was known to have any money, he was looked upon as a financier of the highest order, which is saying a great deal in these [illegible] days of pounds and shillings.

Of course Mrs. Odell-Carney dressed as all rangy long limbed Englishwomen are prone to dress—after a model speculatively not her own. She looked ridiculously out of place beside the smart, chic American women, [illegible] one of them, but would have given her boots to be able to array herself as one of these. There was no denying the fact that Mrs. Odell-Carney was a "regular tiptopper," as Mr Rodney was only too eager to say. She had the air of a born leader—that is to say, she could be gracious when occasion demanded, without being patronizing.

In due course of time the Medcrofts and Miss Fowler were presented to the distinguished couple. This function was necessarily delayed until Odell-Carney had time to go into the details of a particularly annoying episode of the afternoon. He was telling the story to his friend Rodney, and of course everything was at a standstill until he got through.

It seems that Mr. Odell-Carney felt the need of a nap at 5 o'clock. He gave strict injunctions that there was to be no noise in the halls while he slept and then went into his room and stretched out. Any one who has stopped at the Hotel Four Seasons will have no difficulty in recalling the electric hall bells which serve to attract the chambermaids to given spots. If one needs the chambermaid he presses the button in his room and the—

MANY WOMEN WANT TO PATROL A BEAT

Mayor of Elkhart, Ind., Plans Dress Reform Crusade.

Laporte, Ind., Feb. 9.—Mayor Smith, of Elkhart, is confronted by the task of selecting a woman officer who will patrol a beat and who will be charged with the special duty of bringing before the mayor, for reprimand, the young women whose style of dress does not meet with approval.

The mayor is taking radical measures to suppress what he terms an evil by compelling women to wear less suggestive gowns on the street or in social gatherings. He believes that he will be able to mitigate this evil by having a woman especially detailed for the purpose, and with more than 100 willing to go on the city pay roll he has only the difficulty of selecting the most efficient.

CHAMPAIGN BRIDE IS DEAD

Mrs. Edith Rucker, Bride of Army Officer, Expires in Manila.

Champaign, Ill., Feb. 9.—Mrs. Edith Rucker, bride of a few months of Lieutenant W. H. Rucker, United States army, and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Hatch of Champaign, in Manila, Philippine Islands, is dead after a brief illness.

Mrs. Rucker was a graduate of Smith college and a social leader. Her father is owner of the Hotel Beardsley. She was married to Lieutenant Rucker last summer, making a hasty trip to San Francisco to wed him when a sudden transfer to Manila necessitated the giving up of an elaborate home wedding planned.

WOMAN IS SHOT IN THE BACK

Police Have Name of Suspect but Won't Reveal It.

Laporte, Ind., Feb. 9.—Mrs. Dora McLaughlin, fifty-five years old, who has managed a grocery store for several years, was found in the street with a bullet wound in her back. Her condition is serious.

Mrs. McLaughlin said she was on her way home when shot. Police believe she was wounded by some person whose name they have but whose identity there will not reveal

HOOSIERS TO CHANGE ANNUAL DINNER WAY

New York, Feb. 9.—The annual dinner of the Indiana society and the Daughters of Indiana at the Hotel Astor on Feb. 19 will be toastmasterless and speechless. The gentleman who hems and haws over the great honor and privilege of addressing "who's who" among the Hoosiers will be missing along with the person who is gratified "that we have with us tonight—."

Horace Hurd, secretary of the men's society, said that the Indianans want the [illegible] of being the first state society to substitute dancing, auction bridge and vaudeville for long hours of dreary speechmaking. After the 500 or more former residents of Indiana furnish a $2.50 dinner, they will have several big rooms in the Astor at their disposal. There will be a room for dancing, a room for auction bridge, a room for vaudeville and a room for allaying thirst. In the vaudeville will be an exhibition of mind-reading, a chapeaugraphist, who, with the assistance of a hat, only makes up to resemble twenty-five well-known people, singers and special dancing—an up-to-date cabaret.

An effort has been made to induce James Whitcomb Reilly to come to New York to sit with former neighbors.

BECOMES THIEF FOR WIFE

Woman Afterward Flees With Affinity and Husband Gets Cell.

Milwaukee, Wis., Feb. 9.—Becoming a thief that his wife might dress in silk and live like a woman of wealth, Peter Hengstler, aged twenty years, was committed to the Green Bay reformatory for three years and six months. In 1912, he testified, his wife ran away with an affinity.

The sentence was imposed after the prisoner confessed the theft of eight trunks and suitcases from the baggage room of the Union depot. The plunder was valued at $3,000.

ORGANIZE FOR ATLANTIC RACE

American and British Clubs Consider Project.

SAFETY AND SUCCESS IS AIM

Individual Flights Said to Present Serious Disadvantages—Six Efforts to Win Large Prizes Have Been Uncovered—Three Are from France and Three from New York.

New York, Feb. 9.—The Aero Clubs of America and Great Britain have under consideration now the proposition of organizing an aeroplane race from Newfoundland to Ireland as a result of the Rodman Wanamaker's announced plan of co-operating with Glenn H. Curtiss to build a machine for trans-Atlantic flight. The fact that numerous other attempts, both here and abroad, are under way to make a satisfactory water-flying machine to capture the Lord Northcliff prize of $50,000 has made this plan necessary to secure the safety of the aviators and the success of the venture.

Six Efforts Uncovered.

Since the first announcement of Mr. Wanamaker's intention, at least six other serious efforts have been uncovered. In New York City three large water-flying machines have been financed and actual construction on them is either already under way or contemplated for the immediate future. In France, it was announced, three more are under construction to compete with the trans-Atlantic expedition planned by Mr. Wanamaker. It is the belief of airmen here that still others are being considered but kept secret for the present.

The intention of the three French aviators, Roland Garros, Marc Poupre and Brindejonc des Moulinais, to build machines for a flight across the Atlantic was announced in a letter to the Aero club from Garros.

The letter has been translated and turned over to Wanamaker and the Aero Club of America is now waiting for suggestions from him as to the organization of the race itself. There is little doubt but that he will acquiesce in the proposition to have the flight sanctioned by the Aero Clubs of America and Great Britain. The plan is to permit no one to compete for the Daily Mail prize except under rules laid down by those two bodies. This will eliminate one of the most objectionable features of individual efforts to capture the award held out for the first successful flight from here to Europe.

Favor Organized Race.

The opinion of experienced airmen favors an organized race in preference to single projects. It is held that government co-operation for a number of scattered attempts could scarcely be expected. Many persons are willing to finance such attempts but the advantage of a race arrangement have been shown to be great. The principal one, according to the belief of the members of the Aero Club of America, is the elimination of the chance that some contestants in order to beat others for the prize would start without first making every reasonable test and precaution for their safety. A sanctioned event would secure this, and make for the success of the flight.

SLASHES WIFE AND HIMSELF

Peoria Distillery Employe and Spouse Dying of Wounds.

Peoria, Ill., Feb. 9.—Emil Kutz, a distillery employe, and wife are dying in a local hospital as the result of the husband's attempt to murder his wife and then commit suicide by cutting his throat with a razor. Domestic trouble is said to be the cause of the affair.

Kutz's attack on his wife culminated a bitter argument over domestic affair. He slashed her throat with a razor, which he grabbed from a table, and then tried to end his own life in a similar manner. Neighbors who heard the woman's screams called the police.

MURDERESS WANTED TO MARRY HUSBAND

"Veiled Woman" Explains Motive of Shooting.

Newark, N. J., Feb. 9.—Hazel Herdman, twenty years old, infatuated with Charles F. Manning, was the veiled woman who shot and killed Mrs. Harriet Manning in her home here, according to the announcement made by the police. They declared she confessed after having taken poison. The girl died at 3:10 o'clock in the afternoon.

Miss Herdman entered the home of Mrs. Manning, telling the person who opened the door that she was "a friend from Philadelphia." While Mrs. Manning was lighting the gas in the parlor the woman shot her. Mrs. Manning fell on a couch and the woman shot her again. The assailant escaped after firing at Mrs. Manning's mother and sister, whose attention had been attracted by the previous shots. She declared that Manning had failed to keep a promise to get a divorce, so she could marry him.

Manning remains in jail here while the detectives attempt to verify a theory of their own that he met Hazel Herdman after the shooting and assisted her to Bloomfield. Manning asserts his innocence and has denied that he met Miss Herdman. An eighteen-months-old boy, Manning's and Miss Herdman's child, is being cared for in Bloomfield by people with whom the mother placed the baby. Manning has never denied its paternity.

CHICAGO WOMAN LOSES SUIT

Claim for $6,000 Against Chicago Banker Disallowed.

Oshkosh, Wis., Feb. 9.—That the plaintiff failed to prove that the signatures on two promissory notes aggregating $6,000 were genuine and that the claim of the plaintiff be disallowed was the decision given by Judge Deglinger in the county court in the case of Miss Harriet Deckert of Chicago against the estate of the late R. C. Russell, a wealthy Oshkosh banker.

The woman, who was Mr. Russell's bookkeeper, produced notes which experts testifying for the defendant alleged were forgeries.

DEMOCRATS DESERT "WETS"

Muncie County Commissioners Extend Date for the Election.

Muncie, Ind., Feb. 9.—The county commissioners set Monday, March 9, as the date for the "wet" and "dry" election in Muncie. The commissioners held that the law reads that the election shall be held within thirty days, and not sooner than twenty days, after the order for an election is made by the commissioners. Accordingly they extended to the limit of the law and set the date for the election thirty days off.

Prominent Democratic politicians, who three years ago carried the burden of the option campaign of the "wets" on their shoulders, are said to be with the "drys" this year, thus leaving the saloon men by themselves to carry on the fight.

WIFE CHARGES SHE'S SLAVE

Milwaukee, Wis., Feb. 9.—Asserting she had been a slave to her 250-pound husband in shaving, bathing and dressing him, Mrs. George Pfeiffer has sued for divorce after thirty years of married life.

Her husband is an iron-worker. Five of the couple's ten offspring are living and three are married. The husband earns $15.13 a week

CUMBRE TUNNEL SEARCH BEGINS

Rescue Party Has Difficulty in Reaching Coaches.

HIGH ROAD OFFICIALS KILLED

Searchers Are at Work at Both Ends of Underground Way—Engine and Tender Uncovered—Fire Interferes with Workers—Forty Believed to Have Been on Train.

El Paso, Tex., Feb. 9.—Rescuers from El Paso and Juarez have reached Cumbre tunnel to join in the search for the forty passengers who are thought to have lost their lives on the Mexican-Northwestern train wrecked in the tunnel last week. Several high officials of the road are included among the missing.

The El Paso rescuers are at work from the north end of the tunnel while the men from Madera, under Superintendent F. C. Clark, are at work from the south end of the tunnel. In the south end of the tunnel, the rescuing party has already uncovered the locomotive and express car of the passenger train which dashed into the freight train that the bandits had already destroyed by fire in the south mouth of the tunnel.

The locomotive of the passenger train is damaged, but not badly injured, indicating that the crew had abandoned it when the train ran in, and the steam had been shut off and the brakes applied. Owing to the muck and dirt that has fallen on the wreckage in the south end of the tunnel, the workmen have not been able to reach any of the coaches, where the dead passengers would be if they were on board the train when it was wrecked and had not been taken off by the bandits as first reported.

The rescuing party at the north end of the tunnel is fighting the flames and smoke with steam from the locomotive. Caveins are beginning to occur in the tunnel as the wooden cribbing is eaten away by the flames and the work of rescue is becoming more dangerous and difficult according to advices received in El Paso.

To add to the horror of the situation, the earth slides may fill the tunnel so completely as to prevent recovery of all bodies for many days.

Conductor Reaches Madera.

Another dispatch from Madera to Mr. Thede said that the conductor and engineer, both Americans, of the cattle train which had first been charged by the bandits and sent blazing into the tunnel had reached there. They were unable to give any information concerning the fate of the passenger train or its passengers, but said that the bandits after seizing the cattle train and setting fire to it said they were going around the tunnel to meet the passenger train and treat it in the same way.

Seven witnesses were heard in the Seeberville murder case. Stanko Stepech, one of the men shot, described how he was wounded. He did not witness the killing of Stephen Putrich, for the alleged murder of whom two deputy sheriffs and three Waddell-Mahon guards are on trial.

LIQUOR ISSUE IS LOOMING UP

Leaders in Congress Deeply Impressed by Rum Foes.

PROHIBITION IS SPREADING

Member sof Both Houses Believe That Time Is Approaching for Constitutional Amendment to Be Submitted—Two Important Developments Are Seen in Recent Legislation.

Washington, Feb. 9.—The spread of the prohibition sentiment in the United States in the last year has made a deep impression on leaders in congress. The events of that period when viewed in the light of the ambitious program that the temperance advocates have seen for themselves in the immediate future are causing a lot of serious thinking and some anxiety on the part of members of congress who look beyond their noses.

Looms as National Issue.

In fact many of the leaders in the national legislature believe they already see the prohibition question looming as a national issue. They fear the time is nearing when a constitutional amendment providing for national prohibition will be submitted by congress to a referendum of the states. Such an amendment is now pending in both the house and the senate and the promotion of it through congress is the accomplishment toward which all the anti-rum forces are looking most hopefully.

It has long been a matter of comment in Washington that the only way in which temperance legislation can be prevented in congress is by holding the bills in committee and keeping them from the floor of the house or senate. When the average congressman is face to face with the liquor question and a delegation of W. C. T. U.'s he may drink like a fish himself but he will promptly record his vote in favor of the "drys."

That at least was the history of the two most important developments of the last year in congress. The passage of the Jones-Works excise law for the District of Columbia and the enactment of the Webb-Kenyon law to prohibit the shipment of liquor into prohibition territory for sale were regarded by the temperance crusaders as red letter events on their last year's calendar.

Congress Impressed.

The ease with which the passage of these laws has been obtained has left its impression on congress too. Few members dared to oppose them in the open and both went through by overwhelming votes. The Webb-Kenyon measure over the veto of President Taft.

FIRE BURNS MOOSE BUILDING

Orphans Sleep Undisturbed While Adjacent Building Burns.

Aurora, Ill., Feb. 9.—Fifty orphan children, wards of the Loyal Order of the Moose, whose national headquarters and industrial school are at Mooseheart, seven miles from Aurora, slept undisturbed as fire destroyed a large frame building ten rods away from their quarters, also a frame structure.

Custodians of the children were prepared to march their charges out of the dormitory in case of danger. The building destroyed was a temporary school structure. It cost $10,000. The Aurora fire department went by train to fight the blaze.

Wilson Ends Vice District.

Washington, Feb. 9.—President Wilson signed the Kenyon bill abolishing Washington's segregated vice district.

THE HUSBANDS OF EDITH

By
GEORGE BARR M'CUTCHEON

Copyright by Dodd, Mead & Co.

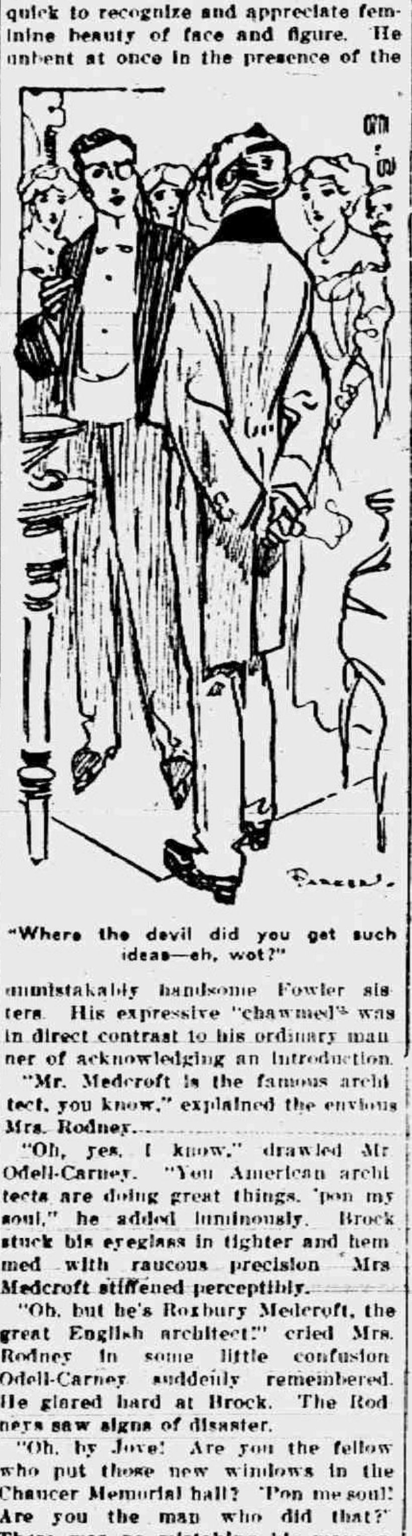
The bell in the hall tinkles furiously until she responds and shuts it off. In that way one is sure that she has heard and is coming, a most admirable bit of German ingenuity. If she happens to be taking her lunch at the time, the bell goes on ringing until she returns. It is a faithful bell. Coming back to Odell Carney: the maid on his floor was making up a room in close proximity when a most annoying thing happened to her. A porter who had reason to dislike her came along and turned her key from the outside, locking her in the room. She couldn't get out, and she had been warned against making a sound that might disturb the English guests. With rare intelligence, she did not scream or make an outcry, but wisely proceeded to press the button for a chambermaid. Then she evidently sat down to wait. To make the story short, she rang her own call bell for two hours, no other maid condescending to notice the call, which speaks volumes for the almost martial system of the hotel. The bell was opposite the narrator's door. Is it, therefore, surprising that he required a great deal of time to tell all that he felt? It was not so much of what he did that he spoke at such great length, but of what he felt.

"'Pon me soul," he exploded in the end, twisting his mustache with nervous energy, "it was the demdest nap I ever had. I didn't close my eyes, c'nfend me if I did."

CHAPTER VIII.

The Odell-Carneys.

While Odell Carney was studiously adjusting his eyeglass for a final glare at an unoffending bus boy who almost dropped his tray of plates in consequence, Mr. Rodney fussily intervened and introduced the Medcrofts. Mrs. Odell-Carney was delightfully gracious. She was sure that no nicer party could have been "got together." Her husband may have been excessively slow in most things, but he was quick to recognize and appreciate feminine beauty of face and figure. He unbent at once in the presence of the unmistakably handsome Fowler sisters. His expressive "chawmed" was in direct contrast to his ordinary manner of acknowledging an introduction.



"Where the devil did you get such ideas—eh, wot?"

"Mr. Medcroft is the famous architect, you know," explained the envious Mrs. Rodney.

"Oh, yes, I know," drawled Mr. Odell-Carney. "You American architects are doing great things, 'pon my soul," he added luminously. Brock stuck his eyeglass in tighter and hemmed with raucous precision. Mrs. Medcroft stiffened perceptibly.

"Oh, but he's Roxbury Medcroft, the great English architect!" cried Mrs. Rodney in some little confusion. Odell-Carney suddenly remembered. He glared hard at Brock. The Rodneys saw signs of disaster.

"Oh, by Jove! Are you the fellow who put those new windows in the Chaucer Memorial hall? 'Pon me soul! Are you the man who did that?" There was no mistaking his manner. He was distinctly annoyed.

Brock faced the storm coolly for his friend Medcroft's sake. "I am Roxbury Medcroft, if that's what you mean, Mr. Odell-Carney."

"I know you're Medcroft, but, hang it all, wot I asked was, did you design those windows? 'Gad, sir, they're the laughing sensation of the age. Where the devil did you get such ideas—eh, wot?" His wife had calmly, diplomatically intervened.

"I hate that man," said Mrs. Medcroft to her supposed husband a few minutes later. There was a dangerous red in her cheeks, and she was breathing quickly. Brock gave an embarrassed laugh and mentioned something audibly about a "stupid ass."

He was very sorry and all that, and he hoped they'd be friends; but the windows were atrocious, there was no getting around that. His wife smoothed it over with Edith by confiding to her the lamentable truth that poor Odell-Carney hadn't the remotest idea what he was talking about half of the time. After carefully looking Edith over and finding her valuably bright and attractive she cordially expressed the hope that she would come to see her in London.

"We must know each other better, my dear Mrs. Medcroft," she had said amiably. Edith thought of the famous drawing rooms in Mayfair and exulted vastly. "And Mr. Medcroft too. I am so interested in men who have a craft. They always are worth while really, don't you know. How like an American Mr. Medcroft is! I daresay he gets that from having lived so long with an American wife. And what a darling baby! She's wonderfully like Mr. Medcroft, don't you think? No one could mistake that child's father—never!"

Edith may have gasped and looked wildly about in quest of help, but her agitation went unnoticed by the new friend. From that momentous hour Mrs. Medcroft encouraged an inordinate regard for the circumspect. She decided that it was best never to be alone with her husband. The future was now too precious to go unguarded for a single moment that might be unexplainable when the triumphal hour of revelation came to hand. She impressed this fact upon her sister, with the result that, while Brock was never alone with his prudent wife, he was seldom far from the side of the adorable lieutenant. As if precociously providing for an ultimate alibi, the fickle Tootles began to show unmistakable signs of aversion for her temporary parent.

Mrs. Rodney, being quite an old fashioned mother, could not reconcile herself to this unfilial attitude and gravely confided to her husband that she feared Medcroft was mistreating his child behind their backs.

"Well, the poodle likes him anyway," protested Mr. Rodney, who liked Brock; "and if a dog likes a man he's not altogether a bad lot. If I were you I wouldn't spread the report."

"Spread it!" she sniffed indignantly. "Are they not my own cousins? Twice removed," she concluded as an afterthought. "Do you imagine that I would spread it? He may be an unnatural father, but I shall not be the one to say so. Please bear that in mind, Alfred."

"Well, let's not argue about it," said Mr. Rodney, departing before she could disobey the injunction.

Of course there was no little confusion at the Hotel Tyrol when it came to establishing the Medcrofts. For awhile it looked as though Brock would have to share a room with Tootles, relegating Burton to an alcove and a couch, but Constance, in a strictly family conclave, was seized by an inspiration which saved the day—or the night, more properly speaking.

"I have it, Roxbury," she cried, her eyes dancing. "You can sleep on the balcony. A great many invalids do, you know."

"But, good heaven, I'm not an invalid," he remonstrated feebly.

"Of course you're not, but can't you say you are? It's quite simple. You sleep in the open air because it does your lungs so much good. Oh, but I know! It isn't necessary to expand your chest like that. They're perfectly sound, I daresay. I should think you'd rather enjoy the fresh air. Besides, there isn't a room to be had in the hotel."

"But suppose it should rain!" he protested, knowing full well he was doomed.

"You poor boy, haven't you an umbrella?" she cried with such a perfectly entrancing laugh that he would have slept out in a hailstorm to provide recompense. And so it was settled that he was to sleep in the small balcony just off the baby's luxurious room, the hotel people agreeing to place a cot there at night in order to oblige the unfortunate guest with the affected lung.

"You are so dear and so agreeable, Roxbury," purred Mrs. Medcroft, very much relieved. "If ever I hear of a girl looking for a nice husband I'll recommend you."

"It's all very nice," said he with a wry grin, "but I'm hanged if I ought to be expected to remember all of my accomplishments." They were sitting in her room, attended by the faithful duenna, Constance. "First, the eyeglass, then the English language, with which I find I'm most unfamiliar; then a deafness in one of my ears—I can't remember which until it's too late, and now I'm to be a tubercular. You've no idea how hard it is for me to speak English against Odell-Carney. I'm an out and out amateur beside him. And it's horribly annoying to have Ulstervelt shouting in my ear loud enough for everybody in the dining room to hear. It's rich, I tell you, and if I didn't love you so devotedly, Edith, I'd be on my way at this very instant. There! I feel better. 'On my way' is the first American line I've had in the farce since we left Stuttgart.

"And, by the way, Edith, I'm afraid I'll have to punch Odell-Carney's confounded head before long. He's getting to be so friendly to me as Roxbury Medcroft that I can't endure him as Brock."

"I—I don't understand," murmured Edith plaintively. Constance looked up with a new interest in her ever sprightly face.

"Well, you see, he's working so hard to square himself with Medcroft for the break he made about the windows, that he's taking his spite out on all American architects. Confound him, he persists in saying I'm all right, but God deliver him from those demmed rotters, the American builders. He says he wouldn't let one of us build a hencoop for him, much less a dog kennel. Oh, I say, Connie, don't laugh! How would you like it if"— But both of them were laughing at him so merrily that he joined them at once. Burton and O'Brien, who had come in, were smiling discreetly.

"Come, Roxbury, what do you say to a good long walk?" cried Constance. "I must talk to you seriously about a great many things, beginning with egotism." He set forth with alacrity, rejoicing in spite of his numerous limitations.

Upon their return from the delightful stroll along the mountain side, she went at once to her room to dress for dinner. Brock, more deeply in love than ever before, lighted a cigar and seated himself in the gallery, dubiously retrospective in his meditations. He was sorely disturbed by her almost constant allusion to Freddie Ulstervelt and his "amazingly attractive ways." Was it possible that she could be really in love with that insignificant little whipper snapper? He seemed to be propounding this doleful question to the lofty, sphinxlike Waldraster-Spitze, looming dark in the path of the south.

"Hello!" exclaimed a voice close to his ear—the fresh, confident voice that he knew so well. "I've been looking for you everywhere." Freddie drew up a chair and sat down at his "good side." The young man appeared to have something weighty on his mind. Brock shifted uneasily. "I want to put it up to you, Mr. Medcroft, as man to man. You are Connie's brother-in-law and you ought to be able to set me straight."

"Ah, I see," said Brock vaguely.

"You do?" queried the other, surprise and doubt in his face.

"No, I should say I don't, don't you see," substituted Brock.

SHAW, THE ECCENTRIC.

His Personality Compels Him to Wear Cocoa Colored Clothes.

"I love order in all things," said George Bernard Shaw at a public meeting some time ago. "For this reason I am not content with ordering my life; I also order my personality. I have cocoa colored hair, so I wear cocoa colored clothes and drink cocoa." Shaw today has reached the position of becoming a public institution. For more than twenty years he has succeeded in fulfilling his boast that every day some leading paper would have something to say about him.

George Bernard Shaw is the jester at the court of King Demos. When years ago he was appointed dramatic critic to a well known journal he refused to obey the ironclad regulation that occupants of the stalls must wear evening dress. The first night he was stopped at the door of a theater by an attendant. "What do you object to?" inquired Shaw. "My cocoa colored jacket?" The attendant assented. "Very well then," said the critic, "I will remove it." And the next moment he was strolling up the aisle in his shirt sleeves.

"That won't do, sir!" shouted the attendant, running after him.

"Won't do?" exclaimed Shaw with a fine assumption of indignation. "Do you think I'm going to take off any more?" The nonplussed attendant handed him his jacket and Shaw took his seat in the stalls triumphantly.

During the first nine years this brilliant man was in London his earnings from literature brought him the princely sum of £6. Now he has an income of several thousands a year. Of that period which he spent in want he says with his characteristic candor: "My mother worked for my living instead of preaching that it was my duty to work for her; therefore, take off your hat to her and blush. I did not throw myself into the struggle for life; I threw my mother into it. I was not a staff to my father's old age; I hung on to his coat tails."—London Life.

Fallibility of the Eyewitness.

When Professor F. C. Dockeray, in the psychological department of the University of Kansas, got into an altercation one day with the janitor, who entered the classroom and insisted on sweeping while Dockeray was lecturing, a number of students rushed to his rescue. The affair grew into a free for all fight, during which the janitor, who had drawn a revolver, was overpowered and disarmed. As a burly student grasped the pistol a shot was fired. As soon as order was somewhat restored the frightened and fleeing students reassembled and accounts were taken from them of the affair. All the students swore they had heard the shot, and several told of seeing the smoke from the revolver. Then Professor Dockeray told them it was an experiment, a fight had been planned carefully, and the shot of the revolver was from the outside of the building by a student posted there. The purpose of the experiment was to show the unreliability of information, even when furnished by an eyewitness.

One of the Family.

Boarding round, as the old time district school teacher did, was not always an unmixed joy, but occasionally, writes Sophie E. Eastman in her book, "In Old South Hadley," teachers were able to administer needed discipline by reason of their intimate knowledge of the family life of their pupils.

There were some teachers who did not need the usual injunction to "make yerself to hum." Miss Mary N. one day called to her desk a boy with whose widowed mother she was then boarding. She gave him what she called "a good ferruling," although he had no idea for what offense he was being punished.

"There," she said when she had finished, "now we'll see whether you will make up faces at your mother the next time she tells you that you are to have hasty pudding and milk for breakfast!"

Pasteur's Modesty.

In 1882, when the international congress of medicine first met in London, Pasteur was the most distinguished of the foreign delegates present. With his usual anxiety to avoid publicity, he came over accompanied only by his son and son-in-law and took rooms in Clarges street. For ten days before his arrival invitations were addressed to the famous Frenchman at the bureau of the congress, but no one called for these, and he was not seen till he entered St. James' hall to attend the opening meeting. One of the stewards was leading him to the place reserved for him on the platform when he was recognized, and immediately cheers rang through the hall. Quite unconscious that these were meant for him, he said apologetically: "No doubt the Prince of Wales is arriving. I ought to have come sooner."

Bargain Hunting.

An amusing story is told in connection with the early days of Sir J. B. Robinson, the South African millionaire. He was crossing the Vaal river in 1869, looking for diamonds. He asked the natives if they had seen any "pretty stones," and at last he found a man who had a diamond. It was a small stone, and the prospector offered him £10 for it, but he refused to part with it. He increased his offer to £12, but still the man refused.

"What will you take for it?" he was asked.

"Twenty goats," was the firm reply; "nothing less."

"I sent off to the nearest farm," says Sir J. B. Robinson in telling the story, "and bought twenty goats for £7 10s. and so got possession of my first diamond."—London Globe.

Well Posted.

The old man who acts as postmaster in a small southern town likewise keeps a general merchant's shop. He is often accused of reading the postcards that pass through his hands, but this he strongly denies. A lady called at the shop and ordered, among other goods, a ham and a cheese. Two days later the lady called again and asked why these two articles had not been sent with the other goods. "Oh," replied the merchant calmly, "I saw by the postcard yo' got yestiday that yo' friends wasn't comin', so I nachelly thought yo' wouldn't need them things."—Argonaut.

A Visit to "Monte Cristo's Cell."

Steamboat excursions run from Marseilles out to Isle d'If, where gaping tourists are shown the Chateau d'If and Monte Cristo's cell with as much impressiveness as if he had really existed. It is a wonderful tribute to the realism of Dumas. They even show you the place where Monte Cristo's body struck the water. It is still wet. Monte Cristo is much more of a reality than Mirabeau, who actually was imprisoned there.—From "Three Weeks In France."

MISS CAROL BROWN

What the Press said about Miss Carol Brown who will give an entertainment assisted by local talent at the Presbyterian church Thursday evening Feb. 16. Admission 15 and 25c.

Miss Carol Brown, the reader, won the hearts of her audience by her captivating naturalness and dainty interpolation of confidence across the footlights. She is a mistress of several dialects, and her selections, ranging from grave to mirthful, elicited much applause and many encores.

The entertainment on the whole was very satisfactory and much credit is due to the Ontyesas for securing for Stevens Point an evening with these gifted artists.—Stevens Point Gazette, Wis.

Although a comparative stranger Miss Brown soon won her way into the hearts of her hearers by her charming manner and dramatic eloquence. Altho her forte is undoubtedly tragedy, the lighter selections also met with decided approval.

The entire program was truly artistic in every detail and all who attened speak of it in terms of highest praise.—Plainfield Journal, Wis.

In lighter vein was "Sophia" "Liscodowski," one of the Ben King's claims on a seat in the Hall of Fame, by Miss Carol Brown, who has earned the distinction of being the only reader besides the author of Sophie himself, who could read the production at all.

In this Miss Brown rose supreme to the very tip top of the mountain of mirth and the house laughed until it ached she was so perfectly ludicrously delightful. But she only bowed to the encore which the audience demanded.—Joliet News.

"BABY MINE"

Return Engagement of Last Years Best Comedy.

A LAUGH THAT ROLLS INTO A THOUSAND.

In presenting the Margaret Mayo comedy, "Baby Mine", at the Bradley Opera House, next Tuesday, February 17, Manager William A. Brady, under whose direction it is produced, calls attention to the fact that it not only ran for an entire year at Daly's Theatre, New York, and over a year at Sir Charles Wyndham's Criterion Theatre in London, England, playing to capacity houses nightly, where so much anti Amerian prejudice exists. Still they fairly searched for adjectives of praise for this worthy laugh-provoking American play "Baby Mine," which is sending a gale of laughter around the world.

The plot of "Baby Mine" was suggested to Miss Mayo through the reading of an article in an article in a Chicago newspaper to the effect that married women of that town frequently deceived their husbands by palming off infants from foundling asylums as their own off-spring, and that the husbands would go through life proudly innocent of the deception.

Why shouldn't "Baby Mine" be a big success- a pronounced success- with such genuine material as an utter laugh and fun maker? There is everthing to the play to warrant the general opinion that it is the greatest ever, and this is "going some" when we recall "Charley's Aunt and "Two Much Johnson", and a couple of other comedy plays that earned fame, and made records. But "Baby Mine" is the greatest of them all, and will enjoy a long life and world-wide popularity.

Ask the opinion of anyone who has seen this side-splitting comedy, and who will see it again and then again if possible. Fun! Mirth! There is no end of it. It is continuous riot and scream, and even the young and unmarried couples quickly recognize the possibilities and realism of every situation. It is really educational and an intuition of what the young wife experiences in married life before and after joyous motherhood.

If you saw "Baby Mine" last season don't fail to tell your friends about it, if you didn't see it last year don't miss it this it this time. One of the best attractions that will be played here this winter. A complete car load of special scenery, furniture etc

"EXCUSE ME"

A good house greeted S. T. King's production "Excuse Me" at Bradley Opera House Friday evening

The play is supposed to take place on an Overland Limited train between Chicago and Reno. The play is in three acts and each act staged the interior of a different car. The stag settings were entirely different and attractive.

A merry crowd of about twenty-five people made the trip an amusing one and the audience was kept laughing at the many incidents which took place on the trip. A runaway couple love at first sight affair a holdup by two desperadoes and two marriages on board. All helped to make the trip an enjoyable one for the audience.

Stage Fright.

Very few people are really free from liability to stage fright, and the veteran in public life is just as likely to be affected as is the novice. Attacks, moreover, frequently come when they are least expected. Hence no speaker or artist can face an audience and feel sure that he will not have to suffer from the tortures of this particularly painful form of nervousness.

Musicians, of course, are the worst sufferers. The performer on a stringed instrument is helpless if his hand trembles, while the clear enunciation of a singer can be ruined by that "catch in the throat" or that twitching of the lips which is perhaps the simplest and most common manifestation of stage fright.

Enterprising manufacturers make various articles for the special benefit of left handed people. Besides scissors adjusted for their use, you can buy left handed screws, gimlets and other tools, and, most thoughtful of all contrivances, to minister to their physical peculiarity corkscrews twisted the wrong way, as a right handed person would think, for left handed butlers and waiters.—Exchange.

JOHN L. BURNETT

Washington, Feb. 9.—John L. Burnett, Alabama congressman and author of the immigration bill barring illiterates, believes the senate will pass the measure by such a large majority that President Wilson, who is said to look on the measure with disfavor, will not follow precedents of Presidents Cleveland and Taft and veto it.

Marie Lloyd to Be Admitted.

Vancouver, B. C., Feb. 9.—Marie Lloyd, an English vaudeville actress detained here under a previous ruling that she is an undesirable alien, will be readmitted to the United States, it was announced, upon renewal of her bond of $4,000.

Bulldozing the Bull.

A few years ago I took the short course at our college of agriculture, and, besides learning how to judge calves and so forth, I learned the university yell. During the following summer our neighbor's bull bothered us at times by breaking through the fence and coming up from the pasture with our cows. Finding this breachy bull in the lane one night, my brother, who also knows something about college yells, and I each took a pitchfork and started after him.

The bull took to his heels and ran until he came to a good sized elm tree. Here he wheeled and started pawing up the earth and bellowing and otherwise showing an inclination to fight. To keep up our own courage we started giving the college yell. The bull gave one startled look and then made for home the straightest and swiftest way. It took him through two barbed wire fences, but they did not hinder him any. He did not trouble us again.

The moral of this is: When you go to college learn all you can, for you never can tell what you may have use for.—Country Gentleman.

A Friend In Need.

A speaker in an English election relates the following incident: One night he spoke in the poultry market at Whitchurch. The next morning a young man stopped him in the street and said:

"I was looking well after you last night."

The speaker expressed surprise at the necessity.

The young man continued his story: "I saw a young man come into the meeting with his coat pockets bulging out in a way that made me suspicious. Two of us followed him in. He stood at the back of the room, and we stood one on each side of him. Gently but firmly we pressed against him. There was a crackling sound of breaking eggs, and the man was out of action."

Pearls as Medicine.

Scotland still produces pearls, found mainly in the fresh water mussel. They could no doubt be found in England if the industry were profitable.

Cleopatra was not the only person who swallowed a dissolved pearl. Until comparatively recently pearls were used medicinally in the west and still appear in the materia medica of China. According to one Chinese authority, a pearl, after being treated with pumice stone and honeycomb, mixed with the gall of a serpent, "might be drawn out to the length of three or four feet. Make it into pills and swallow them—henceforth food will be unnecessary."

The suggestion is not that the patient would be finished off, but that he would live, foodless, forever.—New York Sun.

"I was wondering how you could have seen. It's a matter I haven't discussed with any one. I've come to have a liking for you, Roxbury. You're my sort; you have a sort of New York feeling about you. I'm sure you're enough of a sport to give me unprejudiced advice. Hands across the sea, see? Well, to get right down to the point, old man—you'll pardon my plain speech—I think Constance ought to marry an American."

Brock sat up very straight. "I think that's—that's a matter for Miss Fowler to determine," he said coldly.

"You don't quite get my meaning," persisted Freddie, crossing his legs comfortably. "I was trying to make it easy for myself."

"You mean, you think she ought to marry you."

"That's it, precisely. How clever you are."

"But you are said to be engaged to Miss Rodney," ventured Brock, feeling his way.

"That's just the point, Mr. Medcroft. We're not really engaged—but almost. As a matter of fact, we've got to the point where it's really up to me to speak to her father about it, don't you know. Luckily I haven't."

"Luckily?"

"Yes; that would have committed me, don't you see. I've been tentatively engaged more than a dozen times, but never quite up to the girl's father. Now, I don't mind telling you that I've changed my mind about Katherine. She's a jolly good sort, but she's not just my sort. I thought she was, but—well, you know how it is yourself. The heart's a d—d queer organ. Mine has gone back to Constance in the last two days. You are her brother-in-law, and you're a good fellow through and through. I want your help. I've got money to burn, and the family's got position in the States. I can take care of her as she should be taken care of. No little old six room flat for her. But, of course, you understand, I can't quite carry the thing through with Katherine still feeling herself attached, as it were. The thing to decide is this: How best can I let Katherine down easily and take on Connie without putting myself in a rather hazardous position? I'm a gentleman, you see, and I can't do anything downright rotten. It wouldn't do. I'm sure in her heart Connie cares for me. I could make her understand me better if I had half the chance. But a fellow can't get near her nowadays. Don't you think you are carrying the family link too far? Now, what I want to ask of you as a friend is this: Will you put in a good word for me every chance you get? I'll square myself with Katherine all right. Of course, you'll understand, I don't want to actually break with Katherine until I'm reasonably sure of Constance. I'm a guest of the Rodney family, you see. It would be downright indecent of me. No, sir; I'm not that sort. I shouldn't think of ending it all with Katherine so long as we are both guests of her father. I'd wait until the end of next week."

Brock had listened in utter amazement to the opening portion of this ingenuous proposal. As the flexile youth progressed amazement gave place to indignation and then to disgust. Brock's brow grew dark; the impulse to pull his countryman's nose was hard to overcome. Never in all his life had he listened to such a frankly cold blooded argument as that put forth by the insufferable Knickerbocker. In the end the big New Yorker saw only the laughable side of the little New Yorker's plight. After all, he was a harmless egoist, from whom no girl could expect much in the way of recompense. It mattered little who the girl of the moment might be, she could not hope to or even seek to hold his perambulatory affections. "He's a single example of a great New York class," reflected Brock. "The futile, priggish rich! There are thousands like him in my dear New York—conscienceless, invertebrate, sybaritic sons of idleness, college bred and underbred little beasts who can buy and then cast off at their pleasure. They have no means of knowing how to fall in love with a good girl. They have not been trained to it. It is not for their scrambled intellects to discriminate between the chorus girl brand of attack and the subtle wooing of a gentlewoman. They can't analyze; they can't feel! And this insipid, egotistical little bounder is actually sitting there and asking me to help him with the girl I love! Good Lord, what next?" He surveyed the eager Ulstervelt in the most irritating manner, finally laughing outright in his face. The very thought of him as Connie's accepted lover! She, the adorable, the splendid, the unapproachable! It was excruciatingly funny!

"Oh, I say, old man," cried Freddie when the disconcerting laugh came, "don't laugh! It's no joke."

"'Pon my soul, Ulstervelt," apologized Brock, with a magnanimous smile, "I haven't said it was a joke. You"—

"Then what are you laughing at? Something you heard yesterday?" with fine scorn. Brock stared hard at the flushed boyish face of the other. It was weak and yet as hard as brass, hard with the overbearing confidence of the spoiled child of wealth.

"See here, Ulstervelt," he said, with sudden coldness, "you're asking my help. That's no way to get it."

"I beg pardon. I don't mean to be rude," apologized Freddie. "But, I say, old man, I'll make it worth your while. My father's got stacks of coin, and he's a power in New York. Odell-Carney's right. American architects can't design good hencoops. What we want in New York is a rattling good up to date Englishman or two to show 'em a few things. They're a lot of muckers over there, take it from me. By Jove, Roxbury, you don't know how I'd appreciate your friendship in this matter. It will simplify things immensely. You'll speak a good word for me when the time comes, now, won't you?"

"You want me to do you a good turn," said Brock slowly. He found himself grinning with a malicious joy. "All right, I'll see to it that Miss Rodney doesn't marry you, my boy. I'll attend to her."

"Just a minute," interrupted Freddie quickly. "Don't be too hasty about that. I want to be sure of Constance first."

"I see. I was just about to add that I'll give Constance a strong hint that one of the most gallant young sparks in New York is likely to propose to her before the end of the week. That will"—

"Heavens!" exclaimed Freddie in disgust. "You needn't do that. I've already proposed to her five or six times."

"And she—she is undecided?" cried Brock, his eyes darkening.

"No, hang it all, she's not undecided. She's said no every time. That's why I'm up a tree, so to speak."

"Oh!" was all that Brock said. Of course she couldn't love a creature of

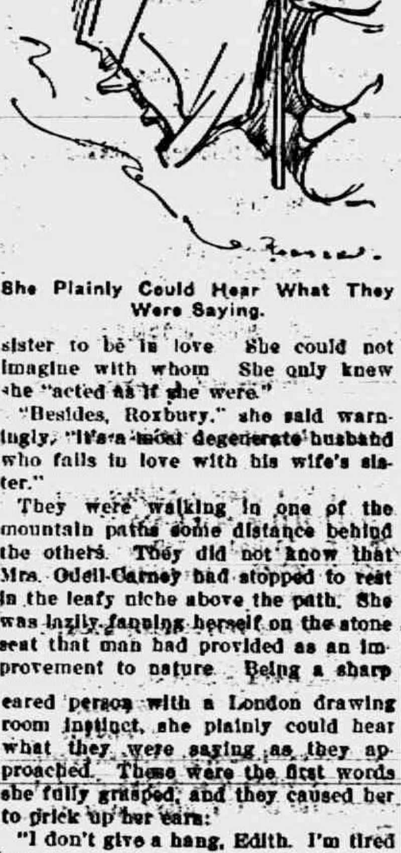
"Gad, you're a lucky dog, Roxbury," went on Freddie enviously. "Money isn't everything. You're married to one of the prettiest and most fascinating women in the world. She's a wonder. You can't blame me for wanting your wife as a sister-in-law. Now, can you? And that kid! You lucky dog!"

CHAPTER IX.

The Friends of the Family.

BROCK discovered in due time that he was living in a lofty but uncertain place, among the clouds of exaltation. It was not until the close of the succeeding day that he began to lower himself grudgingly from the height to which Freddie's ill mannered confession had led him. By that time he satisfactorily had convinced himself that no one but a fool could have suspected Constance of being in love with Ulstervelt, and yet, on the other hand, was he any better off for this cheerful argument? There was nothing to prove that she cared for him, notwithstanding this agreeable conclusion by contrast. As a matter of fact, he came earthward with a rush, weighted down by the conviction that she did not care a rap for him except as a conveniently moral brother-in-law. He was further distressed by Edith's comfortless, though perhaps well qualified, announcement that she believed her sister to be in love. She could not imagine with whom. She only knew she "acted as if she were."



She Plainly Could Hear What They Were Saying.

"Besides, Roxbury," she said warningly, "it's a most degenerate husband who falls in love with his wife's sister."

They were walking in one of the mountain paths some distance behind the others. They did not know that Mrs. Odell-Carney had stopped to rest in the leafy niche above the path. She was lazily fanning herself on the stone seat that man had provided as an improvement to nature. Being a sharp eared person with a London drawing room instinct, she plainly could hear what they were saying as they approached. These were the first words she fully grasped, and they caused her to prick up her ears:

"I don't give a hang, Edith. I'm tired of being her brother-in-law."

"You're tired of me, Roxbury—that's what it is," in plaintive tones.

"You're happy, you love and are loved, so please don't put it that way. It's not fair. Think of the pitiable position I'm in."

"My dear Roxbury," quite severely, "if there's nothing else that will influence you, just stop to consider the child! There's Tootles, dear Tootles, to think of."

Of course Mrs. Odell-Carney could not be expected to know that Edith was blithely jesting.

"My dear Edith," he said just as firmly, "Tootles has nothing to do with the case. You know, and Constance knows, and I know, and the whole world will soon know that I'm not even related to her, poor little beggar. I don't see why she should come between me and happiness just because she happens to bear a social resemblance to a man who isn't her father. Come, now, let's talk over the situation sensibly."

Just then they passed beyond the hearing of the astonished eavesdropper. "Good heaven, what was this? Not his child? Two minutes later Mrs. Odell-Carney was back at the spring where they had left her somnolent husband, who had refused to climb a hill because all of his breath was required to smoke a cigarette.

"Carney," she said sternly, her lips rigid, her eyes set hard upon his face, "how long have the Medcrofts been married?"

He blinked heavily. "How the devil should I know? 'Pon me word, it's"—

"Four years, I think Mrs. Rodney told me. How old is that baby?"

"'Pon me soul, Agatha, I'm as much in the dark as you. I don't know."

"A little over a year, I'd say. Well, I just heard Medcroft say that she wasn't his child. Whose is it?" She stood there like an accusing angel. He started violently, and his jaw dropped. An expression of alarmed protest leaped into his listless eyes.

"'Pon my word, Agatha, how the devil should I know? Don't look at me like that. Give you my word of honor, I don't know the woman. 'Pon me soul, I don't, my dear."

He was very much in earnest, thoroughly aroused by what seemed to be a direct insinuation.

"Oh, don't be stupid," she cried.

INVESTIGATION OF THE COPPER STRIKE

Witness Says Cheap Value Is Put on Human Life.

HANCOCK, MICH — That men and boys toil in a "veritable inferno" in the copper mines of Michigan, with less consideration being given to their lives than to the lives of mules, was one of the charges made at the congressional inquiry into the strike.

After Representatives Taylor, Howell and Casey had listened to an outline of what miners and employers would try to show, William J. Rickard, president of the Calumet local of the Western Federation of Miners, was questioned on the witness stand. He said he began work in the stamp mill when he was eleven years old for $20 a month.

"I worked two years and the first increase I got was a cut of $2," Rickard declared, amid laughter. He later became helper in a blacksmith shop and then a fireman. He went to work in the mines when he was twenty and averaged about $2 for a ten-hour shift.

Reviewing his career as a miner the witness said that the lowest sum he ever made in a month was $4.36 for twe[illegible]-six days' work in the Osceola mine. He thought this was [illegible] rth, 1901.

"Is the contract system the general system?" asked Congressman Howell.

"Yes."

"Why do men take a contract on which they can make so little?" inquired Mr. Howell.

"They have got to take what's offered them or get out," replied the witness.

JURY ROASTS PROSECUTOR

Kalamazoo Body Charges Him With Trying to Defeat Its Purpose.

KALAMAZOO, MICH.—The special grand jury has definitely wound up its investigation in Kalamazoo county by an attack on the prosecuting attorney.

Prosecutor Milo Bennett is made the object of the report of the jury which accuses him of insulting the governor and trying to defeat the purpose of the inquisitorial body, which he refused to assist during the investigations.

GENTLEMEN BY DAY, ROBBERS BY NIGHT

Cual Lives of Two Brothers Exposed by Bullet.

DETROIT, MICH.—The duel lives of Willet and LeRoy Eastwood, both respectable young men by day and bandits by night, were disclosed when a bullet from Patrolman Edward Corbett's revolver probably mortally wounded Willet and the hand of the law whisked his brother to a cell.

Detectives, tracing the movements of the brothers, who were captured in the act of robbing a butcher shop after holding up, it is believed, two other stores, bared the story of their lives of duplicity led by the pair for the last several weeks and declare a number of petty burglaries in the city were committed by the brothers, who showered gifts on their young women friends between felonies.

Posing as musicians, dapper in dress and quiet in manner, the brothers made friends wherever they went and fashioned a shield of respectability about them that was hardly punctured by the news that they had been caught red-handed in a burglary. Numerous letters in their effects testified to their armorous adventures, while new handkerchiefs, revolvers, flashlights and other stolen goods were ample witnesses of their depredations.

Influential Priest of Northeastern Michigan Also Solicits K. of C. Aid.

ALPENA, MICH.—Dean Flannery, the pastor of the St. Bernard's Catholic church, gave out his first utterance on the tango and all other suggestive dances in a sermon. Father Flannery is the most influential priest in northeastern Michigan, and many have been waiting for his opinion on the new dances. The local Knights of Columbus have never permitted the dance at their parties.

DOCTOR FACES A LIBEL SUIT

He Told Merchant In Letter That He Is a Cheat.

BAY CITY, MICH.—H. G. Wendland, one of Bay City's most prominent merchants, has filed a suit against Dr. V. L. Tupper, leading surgeon, alleging slander and libel, and asking $10,000 damages.

The basis of the action is a letter written by Tupper to Wendland, questioning the latter's honesty in connection with the sale of some goods to him in 1909. Among other things the letter contains the charge that Wendland is a "cheat." The plaintiff is head of the firm of H. G. Wendland & Co.'s department store.

WRECK IN TUNNEL

Rescue Party Has Difficulty in Reaching Coaches.

HIGH ROAD OFFICIALS KILLED

Searchers Are at Work at Both Ends of Underground Way—Engine and Tender Uncovered—Fire Interferes with Workers—Forty Believed to Have Been on Train.

EL PASO, TEX. — The rescuers from El Paso and Juarez have reached Cumbre tunnel to join in the search for the forty passengers who are thought to have lost their lives on the Mexican-Northwestern train wrecked in the tunnel last week. Several high officials of the road are included among the missing.

The El Paso rescuers are at work from the north end of the tunnel while the men from Medera, under Superintendent F. C. Clark, are at work from the south end of the tunnel. In the south end of the tunnel, the rescuing party has already uncovered the locomotive and express car of the passenger train which dashed into the freight train that the bandits had already destroyed by fire in the south mouth of the tunnel.

The locomotive of the passenger train is damaged, but not badly injured, indicating that the crew had abandoned it when the train ran in, and the steam had been shut off and the brakes applied. Owing to the muck and dirt that has fallen on the wreckage in the south end of the tunnel, the workmen have not been able to reach any of the coaches, where the dead passengers would be if they were on board the train when it was wrecked and had not been taken off by the bandits as first reported.

The rescuing party at the north end of the tunnel is fighting the flames and smoke with steam from the locomotive. Caveins are beginning to occur in the tunnel as the wooden cribbing is eaten away by the flames and the work of rescue is becoming more dangerous and difficult according to advices received in El Paso.

To add to the horror of the situation, the earth slides may fill the tunnel so completely as to prevent recovery of all bodies for many days.

Conductor Reaches Madera.

Another dispatch from Madera to Mr. Thede said that the conductor and engineer, both Americans, of the cattle train which had first been charged by the bandits and sent blazing into the tunnel had reached there. They were unable to give any information concerning the fate of the passenger train or its passengers, but said that the bandits after seizing the cattle train and setting fire to it said they were going around the tunnel to meet the passenger train and treat it in the same way.

POLITICIAN DRAWS A REVOLVER ON EDITOR

Owner of Denver Post Charges Assault to Kill.

DENVER, COL.—A state warrant charging Thomas J. O'Donnell, prominent Democratic politician of Colorado, with assault upon F. G. Bonfils with intent to kill, was issued from the sheriff's office upon the complaint of Mr. Bonfils, who is one of the owners of the Denver Post.

The alleged assault occurred at the county courthouse, where both men were to attend the Bonfils injunction suit against the Denver Union Water company, in which Mr. Bonfils had petitioned that the company be enjoined from using money for political purposes. Mr. O'Donnell is vice president of a voters' organization which is fighting the position of Mr. Bonfils.

O'Donnell declared he drew a revolver in self-defense and that he had been warned that Bonfils "went ermed."

AIRSHIPS IN CRASH

German Aviator Killed and Two Other Persons Injured.

JOHANNISTHAL, GERMANY — A collision in mid-air between a biplane and a monoplane over the aerodrome here caused the death of one German aviator and serious injuries to two others. Gerhard Sedlmayer, an experienced airman, was flying his biplane and carrying as his passenger Lieutenant Leonhardi of the German army. They were circling the aerodrome at a height of about 100 feet when their machine was struck by a monoplane in which Degnar, a pupil at the flying school, was making his first independent flight.

Both machines fell, and when the men were extricated from the wreckage it was found that Degnar was dead and the other two gravely hurt.

Many Fires in Chicago.

CHICAGO — The firemen responded to 105 fire alarms in Chicago in the twenty-six hours ending at midnight and during the coldest weather for two years. In fighting flames wherever the fire had gained any headway the firemen became encased in each instance in solid suits of ice mail, which numbed their bodies, made work difficult and in several instances froze ears and noses and inflicted frostbites on hands and feet.

Throws $500 in Stove.

ALPENA, MICH.—Abraham Abladella, the proprietor of a local hotel, is out $200 and only by good fortune he prevented the loss of $300 more.

Abraham had $500 in one hand and some scrap paper in the other. He intended to throw the scrap paper into the stove but instead threw in the money. He grabbed for the roll and when he counted it $200 had vanished

DOES TECUMSEH NEED TWO ELECTRIC COMPANIES?

Is There Any Good Reason Why It Should Want a Second Company? Would the Rates be Lower and the Service Better?

These are the first and most important questions for the citizens and their representatives in the City Council to ask themselves at the present time.

The company considers it no more than fair and right to tell the public some things that it can tell more correctly than anyone else.

Eleven years ago when this company took the property, the plant had a total capacity of one 125 H. P. Steam engine serving 178 customers, night current only. Meter rates were 15c per K. W. or flat rates, with no reduction for larger amounts used, no free lamp renewals no 10 per cent discount for prompt payments. From time to time we have made voluntary reductions in our rates as conditions and volume of business would permit and inaugurated a 24 hour or continuous service.

Street lights which were formerly lighted only until midnight and not at all when moonlight, with the old open arc lamp at $65.00 per lamp per year, were replaced with the modern inclosed arc lamp running all night every night for $60.00 per lamp per year.

Depreciation and obsolescence in the eleven years we have operated have been practically complete. All steam and electrical equipment having to be replaced, some of it several times, until now we have a thoroughly modern and efficient plant totalling with water power 1000 H. P., capable of taking care of many more customers than we have and serving a larger population than Tecumseh now has.

We must do a continually increasing and larger volume of business to enable us to make the rates and give the service we now do. No public utility can serve the public satisfactorily unless the company itself is prosperous. A weak company cannot be a source of strength and assistance to the village. Division of the present electric lighting and power business of Tecumseh would weaken our company. It would not enable a second company ever to become strong.

From our experience we know, and we want the people to know this also, that Tecumseh is not a large enough field for two electric companies. It is not large enough for one company unless that one can have the hearty assistance and co-operation of the public in making its business a success.

Referring to the report made by our engineer, Mr. F. F. Van Tyle, Mr. Van Tyle says—"It would not appear to be a good proposition for the Village of Tecumseh to install a lighting plant for street lights only, so long as satisfactory and adequate service can be secured at rates not exceeding those which you are now paying," and further on, "IF you can get as many customers as indicated above, etc., it would then become largely a question of good management and the hearty co-operation of the people to make the enterprise a success." Note that he says nothing about reducing the cost of current to you, neither has he taken into consideration a small matter of $1,000.00 or more for an electrical engineer and superintendent as an item of cost of production.

The manufacture and distribution of electricity is a highly scientific industry. The science of it has developed rapidly in recent years. The operation of a plant today, selling current at low rates demands the highest form of technical skill and experience and the most effective economy. Even with these advantages such an enterprise requires good business opportunities, which would not be possible in a field divided by competition.

The courts and public utility commissions of states where utilities are regulated by commission have firmly established the principle that competition means loss to the public and therefore must be avoided. In its decision in the LaCrosse case the Wisconsin Commission says: "Duplicates of such plants is a waste of capital whenever the services can be adequately furnished by one plant only. It necessarily means that interest and maintenance must be earned on a much greater, if not twice as great an investment, and that the actual cost of operation is certain to be relatively higher, which also results ultimately in higher rates."

The Railroad Commission is the official body through which the state regulates not only railroads but all other public utilities. The commission was established by state law. It is a branch of the government and its duty is to serve the people with absolute justice to all. It is made up of men chosen for their fitness to safeguard the welfare of the people in the operation of public utilities.

If you read the report made by the Michigan State Railroad Commission in response to a letter from the Village Clerk, Mr. F. G. Heesen, you may recall the following: "We have been in correspondence with several villages, etc. It appears that it is a very reasonable rate after comparing the same with different rates that other villages have."

Isn't their opinion worth considering? It would be inconceivable to imagine a private capitalist willing to invest his money in a competing company. Would you like to invest yours?

The new rates as submitted by the Tecumseh Electric Company removes the only excuse the good people of Tecumseh had for complaining of their electric service.

With judicious rearrangement of street lighting units, and the use of Mazda Lamps, the cost of this service may be reduced one third or more. Commercial or store lighting with the new schedule shows a reduction of 12 per cent on the first $5.00 worth of lighting. Residence lighting is cheaper by 10 per cent at all points up to $2.00 worth, and a saving of 30 per cent on the next dollar's worth of current used.

Don't vote to place a mortgage on your town which will take many years for you to pay with no assurance of lower rates for electric current and a certainty of increased taxation.

A letter from Romeo, Michigan, under date of February 10, 1914:

Dear Sir—

In reply to yours of the 7th, regarding electric light would say that our city ran a municipal plant for fourteen years and we had no power or day service, and it was very satisfactory, but the people wanted day service for power, flat irons, cooking devices, etc., and after a thorough investigation by our lighting commissioners they recommended the sale of the same to the Eastern Michigan Edison Co. two years ago, and I have found since that time the lights for residents is cheaper, and I think the business places costs more, but when you take into consideration the extra tax for new machinery and repairs, I think it is far better for lighting to be furnished by a private company than by the municipality. Our fourteen years experience shows that the life of electric machinery is about twelve years, wire construction about the same, pole line about twenty years, power house building same as any other property. Our rates are governed by Detroit rates. If I can give you any further information, advise me.

Yours truly.

A letter from Woodstock, Ill.

Dear Sir—

Replying to yours of the 23d inst., regarding the Electric Light Plant owned and operated by the City of Woodstock, permit me to say, city ownership has proven satisfactory, inasmuch as we have a fine plant and good service, but I am of the opinion that the plant owned and operated by a private company could be run at a much less cost than by the city, the private consumers here are paying to a certain extent for lighting the city. It is a difficult task for the City Council to divide the cost equitably between Private Consumers and Public Lighting, the city each year makes an appropriation for electric lights which with the revenue received from private consumers is supposed to run the plant, but each year there are many expenses for repairs extension to pole lines, new machinery, meters, etc., etc., that the ordinary mortal hasn't thought of and knows nothing about until the requisition is presented by the superintendent, so the result is really a draw on the contingent fund to help out the electric light fund.

Our plant was installed in 1897 while I was Mayor. I had six years' experience trying to operate the plant on a business basis and frankly confess I was unable to get satisfactory results from a financial standpoint. I started in an enthusiastic advocate of municipal ownership and retired from office at end of third term fully convinced that the fewer Public Utilities a city owns and operates the better off the taxpayers will be. In theory it appears fine, but when put into operation under the supervision, and with the limited knowledge possessed of electric plants by the average mayor and council of villages and small cities, it don't pan out.

From our experience I believe a franchise granted to a responsible company (organized and conducted by local capital, if possible) safeguarding the interest of the city and private consumer will prove more satisfactory and much better for all interests than a plant owned and operated by the city.

Very truly yours.

Extract from letter from South Lyon, Michigan, February 10, 1914:

Dear Sir—

In reply to your letter of the 7th, beg to advise in regard to lighting as follows:

We have had till about one year ago, municipal ownership of our lighting plant; at this time we sold our plant to what is known as the Eastern Michigan Edison Co. We consider the present plan more economical than the old plan, besides we have no up-keep charges to meet, no man to pay, and best of all not one dollar invested in the business. We are under contract for a period of ten years. Our rates are the same today as Ann Arbor rates and they are to remain the same as their rate according to contract which we signed. We are more than pleased with the light service, we have constant light and power, several dwellings that are pumping water with electricity, this we think is worth while when you get this service.

A letter from Benton, Ill.

Dear Sir—

Our city owns and operates its electric light plant but is not a success. The City Board changes every year and so often a person is elected who knows nothing and cares less what happens to the plant. Our city would save money each year to pay a company for light rather than try to operate a plant.

Yours very truly.

A letter from Marengo, Ill.

Dear Sir—

The electric plant of this place is owned by the city and has been a "White Elephant" ever since its installation in 1892; running behind annually from $1500.00 to $3400.00 and in fact has never, excepting one year, anywhere near broke even. The street lighting is run on a moonlight schedule and is very unsatisfactory. The incandescent service runs from dusk to 11:00 o'clock and is not satisfactory.

The main trouble seems to be lack of good business management. We have had many good men on the Board, but they have either lacked experience in the management of a business of this kind or would not take the time from their own business to see that it was properly managed. Consequently, this branch of the city's business has been everybody's business and therefore nobody's business and has suffered.

Very truly yours.

In addition to the above published letters. The Tecumseh Electric Co have on file in their office many more personal letters of the same tenor from City and Village officers, where municipal ownership has proven a failure, besides a published list of 68 defunct municipal lighting plants in the United States with reliable and authoritative facts gained mostly from the City and Village officials of these towns.

The NET result is

There is nothing so convincing as practical experience.

Scene from Wm. A. Brady's "BABY MINE" which comes to the Bradley Opera House next Tuesday, February 17, 1914.

AMUSEMENTS

READ WHAT THE 'EVANSVILLE COURIER' SAYS BABY MINE

The laughing hit of several seasons "Baby Mine" was the attraction at the Wells Bijou yesterday and on its former appearance it amused and kept the good sized audience convulsed with laughter. The presentation yesterday was in the hands of an excellent company of players who with good settings left nothing wanting in the enactment.

The pleasing fun produced by the charming little wife who wanted to fool her husband into thinking a baby had arrived during his long absence is immense. How one little fib of the wife grew and grew and developed into a serious affair with the husband's hurried return home made the situation the more complex and not till near the end of the last act were things set right. Many babies were necessarily required and their being obtained by various methods led to more mirth through the appearance of demanding mothers and fathers and policemen who sought the children. Jimmie the big fat friend had a time providing babies and his work produced the more amusement. Miss Donalda O'Neil as the wife is a charming actress, cute and exceptionally well cast, as the cause of all the trouble and with her seeming ignorance of what to do next was the more delightful. Fred Shepherd a jolly big fellow was exceptionally fine as Jimmie. Charles was the husband and gave a good portrayal of the role. Harry Davis did good work as an Irishman, one of the fathers, Beck Ryeord as an Italian mother, Edna Davies in an Irish woman role. C. W. Munnel and Sidney Anderson as policemen were all good as was also Edna Von Buelow as Jimmie's wife and W. C Couch as the husband's secretary.—Evansville Courier, Monday, Jan. 26.

"Baby Mine" comes to the Bradley Opera House, next Tuesday Feb 17, under the same management as when here last season. The same high class scenic production is carried requiring a special car for transportation. The company carries everything used on the stage even to the entire settings of furniture, etc. The same company is playing this week at the Calumet Theatre, Chicago.

Seat sale for "Baby Mine" opens at Hay's Bakery, Monday morning, 8:00.

A STATEMENT FROM THE LENAWEE COUNTY GOOD ROADS LEAGUE

The Lenawee County Good Roads League was organized Nov. 19, 1913, at the rooms of the Adrian Commerce Club, by representative men from the townships of Medina, Seneca, Ogden, Fairfield, Riga, Blissfield, Palmyra, Madison, Dover, Hudson, Rome Adrian, Macon, Raisin, Tecumseh and Franklin and the villages of Morenci, Blissfield, Tecumseh, Clayton and Onsted and the cities of Hudson and Adrian. These men believed they were working for the best interests of the whole county, and believing in organization, banded together and adopted the above name.

Their purpose was for the betterment of the road condition in the whole county, and knowing that under the Michigan law there were only three ways in which to gain this end, (first, by the present plan; second, by the township or district plan; third, by the county system) and knowing that the county system was in operation in 54 out of the 83 counties in this great state, knowing also that none of these 54 counties has ever rescinded the action taken in adopting the county system system, they believed it the most feasible plan that can, under the present law, be adopted, and they decided to ask the voters to adopt the county system at the April election.

The Lenawee County Good Roads League is not a private nor a limited organization, neither was it organized to further the affairs of any one individual or any one community. The 60 men who have gone thus far in this work are asking every voter in this county of Lenawee to become a member of this organization. It is purely a voluntary organization supported by voluntary contributions. Its officers are A. E. Illenden, president; A. D. Billings, vice president; George A. Smith, treasurer, and Fred Lynn Johnson, secretary.

In every great construction work there must of necessity be thoughtful preparation and complete knowledge, not only of things to be done, but the right way to do them, to bring to a successful issue the purpose we have in hand. To bring Lenawee County up to a standard of our sister counties in the best way to build and maintain highways, it means the conversion of our citizens as to the necessity of good roads. It means knowledge to every community as to the terrible loss we are yearly suffering by reason of the condition our roads are in. It means more—it means a conversion and conformation, together with the good roads spirit and enthusiasm. This is the purpose of this organization.

The campaign for the abolition of the mud road is of necessity more or less one of education. An association such as ours has a better advantage than the individual and is in a position to disseminate information regarding the value of the improved roads and to co-operate with you in creating a demand for their improved.

In Michigan the so-called "County Road System" is merely a plan by which the roads of a county are taken over, as fast as circumstances will permit, by a commission, working under the direction of the board of supervisors and improved by means of a tax levied on all the accessable property within the county. Thus the city property and village property, as well as farm property, real and personal, pays its pro rata share of the tax and contributes in an equitable manner towards an improvement which benefits every member of a community. That such a tax rate is just and is willingly paid by the residents of cities is clearly shown by their large majorities given in favor of the county plan whenever this question is brought before the electors of a county.

That the plan is equitable no one can deny for it spreads the cost of constructing main traveled roads over all the taxable property in the county.

We must consider this road question impartially from all angles and discuss it in a friendly way without prejudice, desiring only to reach the right conclusion in order that we may vote intelligently and for the best interest of all concerned. This is not a one man or a one locality question; it is for Lenawee county as a whole.

First of all, Mr. Voter, understand that not one mile of road can be built under the county system unless it has been approved by the county and into their hands and keeping the law very wisely has placed the county system. It is therefore the board of supervisors who say where these roads shall be built. The board of supervisors alone has the entire system in their hands and direct, at the October session each year, where the roads shall be built for the coming year and how, and of what material they shall be built.

The board of supervisors can be safely trusted, and they will legislate for all the people and not a part of them. Each supervisor will see to it that his township has what belongs to it, and will represent his people and their interests.

Above all we want every voter to remember that the board of supervisors controls the whole system, and no road can be built without its approval where the county system is adopted. The board of supervisors alone fixes the tax rate. The commissioners are merely the servants of the supervisors, carrying out their wishes. All county roads end at the corporation lines of villages and cities. The counties which have not adopted the county system are paying for roads in counties where the system has been adopted. Fifty-four counties have already adopted the county system and not a county has ever rescinded its action, although the door to walk out is open to every county that wishes to rescind its action. The farmers in the fifty-four counties where the system has been adopted are equally intelligent and progressive, and that fact and the fact that the system meets the requirements of the people. Under the county system, every mile of road that is taken over by the commissioners, and built, is taken care of at county expense, and the township is relieved of the care of at county expense, and the township is relieved of the care and maintenance of the county expense, and the township is relieved of the care and maintenance of the roads so taken over and is thus enabled to give more time and attention to the cross roads, the roads most neglected under the present plan.

Mr. Voter, the Lenawee County Good Roads League will undertake to give you facts and truths regarding the county road system, and will furnish any information to anyone asking for it.

Study the question, Mr. Voter, and vote in an impartial way, and you will vote for the adoption of the county system.

Lenawee Co. Good Roads League.

Slaytons Heard From Again.

A LETTER TO THE WIT AND WISDOM.

To the members of the Wit and Wisdom Club, greetings from the Slaytons.

Dear friends:—

You cannot tell how much we enjoyed your little notes sent us from Dr. Brown's—do it again please.

We have been in Los Angeles two weeks and have enjoyed the days when it has not been raining, have not minded the rain either for we then read, write letters and rest up for another pilgrimage.

"This is the rainy season" they tell us, "earlier than last year," etc. as they try to excuse the bad taste of the weather man, in thus greeting the thousands of tourists who throng the City at this season of the year.

We don't mind a little rain in Mich. why should we here? We like it better than snow and slush and zero weather and shoveling coal in the furnace on Pottawatamie St. All the fire we have here is in a little gas heater and we don't even have to pay for the gas that is included in the rent.

In order to get even with such a climate the coal men charge $19.00 per ton for hard coal There have been no frosts here this winter to spoil the beauty of the foliage and flowers and the rains have clothed the hills in and around the city with verdure. The roses climb over the porches like wild flowers and the calla lillies and geraniums are common things. Great bunches of violets for five cents —no one need be without flowers.

We get good big oranges for fifteen cents per dozen and red emperor and malaga grapes two pounds for fifteen cents, but we pay 40 cents per pound for butter and 50 cents a dozen for eggs.

We wear the same clothing and wraps as at home so you see there is not the enervating heat to take ones strength as in the South.

I hesitate to write it fearing you will doubt my word, but Charles sleeps calmly through the morning hours, while auto trucks go whizzing by till 7:30 a. m, and I can almost keep up with him on the street. Our first Sunday here we spent with Percy in Whittier at the pleasant home of Mr. Denney. We attended the Congregational church and met the family of Azerial Smith who used to live in Addison, Mrs. Smith leads the choir. Mr. and Mrs. A. B Park and daughter of Adrian are in the city and we spent one day at the beach with them going on a "personally conducted" tour to Santa Monica, Venice, Ocean Park, Redondo, and Soldiers' Home. Here we had our first view of the Pacific, It was peaceful enough that day The great waves that wrecked some of the piers and tore out the beach in many places having subsided. We picked up moonstones at Redondo, and all got wet feet but the writer as the waves come in farther than they expected.

One afternoon we spent with our old pastor Dr. S. E Wisnard, hale and hearty at 88 years a grand old man as ever. He greeted us with a wave of his hat and low salaam. He lives with a daughter in a beautiful little bungalow. Another daughter lives next Mrs. Wishard died a year ago. On Friday last we were invited to spend the day with Laila Knapp Cannell and enjoyed seeing her in her beautiful home at Sunny Slope, San Gabriel. She has three fine boys, seven and six years and 15. Mrs. Knapp went with us and we talked over Wit and Wisdom days of long ago.

On each side of the road all the way out were orange groves so loaded with the golden fruit the branches had to be propped up The English walnuts and fig trees are bare, their season of fruitage past.

Saturday for a change it rained all day and I was not out of the house. Rev. E. Sedwick who used to preach in Tecumseh and member of the W. & W. club invited us to attend church and take lunch with them Sunday so we took the car for Echo Park and arrived for part of the Sunday School and the church service after. Miss Edna Sedwick was organist and sang a solo We spent a very pleasant Sabbath with them. There were several Michigan people in the church.

We called on Bert McNair in his office. He has a son at Amhurst and a daughter at Smith College. Charles has met a number of former Tecumseh people, Ned Cutting, Fred Kempf. Joe Griffith, C. J. Moore. But I'm making this much too long if you have any more program. We would like to be with you, but want more to stay here where the flowers can bloom in January and we are resting (?) up for the grind next Spring of daily duty in old Tecumseh, Mich. Hoping to hear from you all again

Alice M, Slayton.

HOOSIERS TO CHANGE ANNUAL DINNER WAY

NEW YORK — The annual dinner of the Indiana society and the Daughters of Indiana at the Hotel Astor on Feb. 19 will be toastmasterless and speechless. The gentleman who hems and haws over the great honor and privilege or addressing "who's who" among the Hoosiers will be missing along with the person who is gratified "that we have with us tonight—."

Horace Hurd, secretary of the men's society, said that the Indianans want the honor of being the "first" state society to substitute dancing, auction bridge and vaudeville for long hours of dreary speechmaking. After the 500 or more former residents of Indiana furnish a $3.50 dinner, they will have several big rooms in the Astor at their disposal. There will be a room for dancing, a room for auction bridge, a room for vaudeville and a room for relieving thirst. In the vaudeville will be an exhibition of mind-reading, a chapeaugraphist, who, with the assistance of a hat, only makes up to resemble twenty-five well-known people, singers and special dancing—an up-to-date cabaret.

An effort has been made to induce James Whitcomb Reilly to come to New York to sit with former neighbors.

SUFFRAGE IN SENATE

Matter Comes Before Body in Shape of a Resolution.

WASHINGTON.—The big question of equal suffrage confronts the senate. It came before that body in the shape of a resolution proposing an amendment to the constitution extending the right of suffrage to women.

The resolution was first on the calendar of business in the senate and was called up immediately after the routine morning business had been disposed of. When Senator Ashurst of Arizona, who is sponsor for the resolution, called it up there were in the galleries many woman suffrage leaders and many friends of the cause.

PLAIN TALK

From Two Prosperous Housewives, About Peruna.

Mrs. E. T. Gaddie

Mrs. E. T. Gaddis, of Marion, North Carolina, writes to the Peruna Co., Columbus, Ohio: "Before I commenced to take Peruna I could not do any hard work without suffering a great pain. I took Peruna and Manalin, and can say with pleasure they have done more for me than any other medicine I have ever taken. Now I am as well as ever. I do all my own work and it never hurts me at all. I think Peruna is a great medicine for womankind."

Mrs. Sarah Frye, No. 105 Sylvan Ave., Asbury Park, N. J., writes: "I have no words to express my gratitude for the wonderful cure that Peruna has done for me. It is a godsend to all suffering women. Peruna has done wonderful work for me.

"I was sick over half of my life with systemic catarrh. I want this letter published far and wide, as I was a great sufferer, but to-day I feel as well as anybody can feel.

"Nearly all my life I have spent nearly all I could rake and scrape for doctors, but none of them did me any good. But since I started on your Peruna one year ago I have at last found relief in your wonderful Peruna. I had begun to think that I was not going to get well, but thank God I am well to-day.

"I hope and pray you may live long to help others as you have helped me. Instead of being a walking drug store I am growing fat and doing well. I will never be without Peruna."

"Good heavens, can there be a scandal in that lovely woman's life?"

"There's never any scandal in a woman's life unless she's reasonably lovely," remarked he.

"Whose child is she, if she isn't Medcroft's?" she pursued with a perplexed frown.

"Damme, Agatha, don't ask me," he said irritably, passing his hand over his brow. "I've told you that twice. Ask them; I dare say they know."

She looked at him in disgust. "As if I could do such a thing as that! Dear me, I don't understand it at all. Four years married. Yes, I'm sure that's it. Carney, you don't suppose"— She hesitated. It was not necessary to complete the obvious question.

"Agatha," said he, weighing his remark carefully, "I've said all along that Medcroft is a fool. Take those windows, for instance. If he"—

"Oh, rubbish! What have the windows to do with it? You are positively stupid. And I'd come to like her too. Yes, I'd even asked her to come and see me." She was really distressed.

"And why not?" he demanded. "Hang it all, Agatha, it's nothing unusual. She's a jolly good sort and a sight too good for Medcroft. He's a stupid ass. I've said so all along. How the devil she ever married him I can't see. But, by Jove, Agatha, I can readily see how she might have loved the father of this child, no matter who he is. Take my advice, my dear, and don't be harsh in your judgment. Don't say a word about what you've heard. If they are reconciled to the—er—the situation, why the devil should we give a hang? And, above all, don't let these Rodneys suspect." Here he lowered his voice gradually. "They're a pack of cotters and they couldn't understand. They'd cut her, even if she is a cousin or whatever it is. I'd give a year or two of my life to know positively whether Rodney intends taking those shares or not." He said it in contemplative delight in what he would do if it were definitely settled. "I can't stand them much longer."

"What great variety of Americans there are!" she reflected. "Mrs. Medcroft and her sister are Americans. Compare them with the Rodneys and Mr. Ulstervelt. No, Carney, I'll not start a scandal. The Rodneys would not understand, as you say. They'd tear her to shreds and gloat over the mutilation. No, we'll have her to see us in London. I like her."

"And by Jove, Agatha, I like her sister!"

"My dear, the baby is a darling."

"But what an ass Medcroft is!"

And thus is it proved that Mrs. Odell-Carney was not only a dutiful wife in taking her husband into her confidence, but also that jointly they enjoyed a peculiarly rational outlook upon the world as they had come to know it and to feel for the people thereof. It is of small consequence that they could not find it in their power to be in tune with the virtuous Rodneys—the Rodneys were conditions, not effects.

However that may be, it was Katherine Rodney, pretty, plump and spoiled, who pulled the first stone from the foundation of Medcroft's house of cards. Katherine had convinced herself that she was deeply enamored of the volatile Freddie. The more she thought that she loved him the greater became the conviction that he did not care as much for her as he professed. She began to detect a decided falling off in his ardor. It was no use trying to hide the fact from herself that Constance was the most disturbing symptom in evidence. Jealousy succeeded speculation. Katherine decided to be hateful. She could not have helped it if she had tried.

It was very evident, to her at least, that Freddie was not to blame. He was being led on by the artful Miss Fowler. There could be no doubt of it—none in the least, declared Miss Rodney in the privacy of her own miserable reflections.

Just as she was on the point of carrying her woes to her mother an astounding revelation came to her out of a clear sky; an entirely new condition came into the problem. It dawned upon her suddenly, without warning, that Roxbury Medcroft was in love with his sister-in-law.

When she burst in upon her mother half an hour later that excellent lady started up from her couch, alarmed by the excitement in her daughter's face. Mrs. Rodney, good soul, was one of the kind who always think the world is coming to an end, or the house is on fire, or the king has been assassinated, if any one approaches with a look of distress in his face.

"My dear, my dear!" she cried as Katherine stopped tragically in the doorway. "What has happened to your father? Speak!"

"Mamma, it's worse than that! I"—

"Merciful heaven!" The good lady blindly reached for her smelling salts.

"I've made a dreadful discovery," went on Katherine in suppressed tones. "It came to me like a flash. I couldn't believe my own brain. So I watched them from my window. There's no doubt about it, mamma. It's as plain as the nose on your face. He"—

"My darling, what are you talking about? Is my nose—what is the matter with my nose?" She vaguely felt of her nose, in horror.

"He's in love with her. There's no mistake. And, will you believe me, mamma, she is encouraging him! Positively! Why—why, it's utterly contemptible! Oh, dear, what are we to do?"

Mrs. Rodney looked blankly at her daughter, who had thrown herself in a chair. She gasped and then gave vent to a tremendous squeak.

"In love! Your father? With whom—who is she?"

"Father? Oh, Lord, mother, I didn't say anything about father. Don't cry! It's another man altogether."

"Not Freddie Ulstervelt?" quavered Mrs. Rodney, pulling herself together. "After all he has said to you"—

"No, no, mamma," cried her daughter irritably. "Freddie may be in love with her, but he's not the only one. Mamma!" She straightened up and looked at her mother with wide, horror-struck eyes. "Roxbury Medcroft is madly in love with Constance Fowler."

Mrs. Rodney did not utter a sound for fully a minute and a half. She never took her eyes from her daughter's distressed face. The color was coming back into her own, and her lips were setting themselves into thin red lines above her rigid chin.

"I'm sorry, Katherine, that you have seen it too. I have suspected it for several days. But I have not dared to speak—it seemed too improbable. What are we to do?" She sat down suddenly, even weakly.

"She's not only leading Freddie on, but she's flirting with her own brother-in-law—her own sister's husband—her—her"—

"Her own niece's father! It's atrocious!"

"She's a horrid beast! And I thought I loved her. Oh, mamma, it's just dreadful!"

"Katherine, control yourself. I will not have you upsetting yourself like this. You'll have another of those awful headaches. Leave it all to me, dear. Something must be done. We can't stand by and see dear Edith betrayed. She's a happy and trusting. And, besides all that, we'd be dragged into the scandal. I"—

"And the Odell-Carneys too. Heavens!"

"It must be stopped! I shall go at once to Mrs. Odell-Carney and tell her what we have discovered. It will prepare her. She is the best friend I have, and I know she will suggest a way to put a stop to this thing before it is too late. We must"—

"Why don't you speak to father about it first?"

"Your father! My dear, what would be the use? He wouldn't believe it. He never does. I wonder if dear Mrs Odell-Carney is in her room." The estimable lady fluttered loosely toward the door. Her daughter called to her.

"If I were you I'd wait a day or two, mamma." She was quite cool and very calculating now. "It may adjust itself, and—and if we can just drop a hint that we suspect, they won't be so—so—well, so public about it. I know—I just know that Freddie will be disgusted with her if he sees how she's carrying on." Katherine suddenly had realized that good might spring from evil, after all.

In the mean time young Mr. Ulstervelt was having troubles and disappointments of his own. Persistent effort to make love to Miss Fowler had finally resulted in an almost peremptory command to desist. An unlucky impulse to hold her hand during one of his attempts to "try her out" met with disaster. Miss Fowler snatched her hand away and, with a look he never forgot, abruptly left him. "It's all off with her," ruminated Freddie, shivering slightly as an after effect of the icy stare she had given him. "She's got it in for me for some reason or other. Wow! That was a frost! I feel it yet. Medcroft has played the deuce helping me. I wonder if— Hello! There's Katherine."

Freddie did some rapid fire thinking in the next half minute, with the result that Constance Fowler was banished forever from his calculations, and Katherine Rodney restored to her own. So long as he could not possibly win Constance he figured that he might just as well devote himself to the girl he was virtually engaged to marry. Freddie's was a convenient and adaptable constancy. Miss Fowler out of sight was also out of mind. He descended upon Katherine with all of the old ardor shining in his eyes. It was soon after Miss Rodney's conference with her mother, and the young lady was off for a walk in the town.

"Hello, Katherine," called he, coming up from behind. "Shopping? Take me along to carry the bundles. I want to begin now."

It was Miss Rodney's fancy to receive his advances with disdain. She assumed a most unfriendly manner.

"Indeed?" with chilling irony. "And why, may I ask?"

Freddie was taken aback. This was most unexpected.

"Practice makes perfect," he said glibly. "Don't you want me to carry 'em, Kitty?" He said it almost tearfully.

Katherine exulted inwardly. Outwardly she was very cool and very baffling. "Please don't call me Kitty. I hate it."

"It's a dear little name. That's what I'm going to call you when we are—well, you know."

"I don't know. What are you talking about?"

"Oh, come now, Miss Rodney. Don't be so icy. What's up? Never mind—don't tell me. I know. You're jealous of Connie." It was a bold stroke, and it had an immediate effect.

"Jealous!" she scoffed, but her cheeks went red. "Not I, Freddie." She considered for a second and then went on: "She's not in love with you. You must be blind. She's crazy about Mr. Medcroft."

"By Jove!" exclaimed Freddie, stopping short, his eyes bulging. He looked at her for a minute in silence, realization sifting into his face. "You're right! She is in love with him. I see it now. Well, what do you think of that! Her brother-in-law!"

"And he is in love with her too. Now you may go back to her and see if you can't win her away from him. I shan't interfere, my dear Freddie. Don't have me on your conscience. Goodby."

CHAPTER X.
The Disconsolate Freddie.

SHE left him standing there in the street. With well practiced tact he darted into a tobacconist's shop.

"Another shakedown," he reflected ruefully. "They're all passing me up today; but, great hooks! What's all this about Medcroft and Constance?" He bought some cigarettes and started off for a walk, mildly excited by this new turn of affairs. It occurred to him as he turned it over in his mind that Mrs. Medcroft was amazingly resigned to the situation. Of course she

ILLINOIS LED ALL IN CROPS

Surpasses All Others in Value, Census 1910 Report Shows.

Washington, Feb. 16.—Illinois was the banner state so far as the value of all crops produced is concerned. This is the official statement of the bureau of census in a general report on agriculture. The facts were gathered in 1910.

"The relative rank of the first nine states in regard to value of crops," the report says, "shows that Illinois led with a total valuation for all farm crops of $372,000,000; Iowa was second with $315,000,000, Texas third with $298,000,000, followed by Ohio with $230,000,000, Georgia, $227,000,000; Missouri, $221,000,000; Kansas, $215,000,000; New York, $209,000,000, and Indiana, $204,000,000."

SUFFRAGE APPEAL DELAYED

Attorneys Representing Women's Side Combine Their Briefs.

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 16.—A motion was filed in the state supreme court to amend the second brief in the case of Scown vs. Czarnecki. It is proposed to combine the two briefs filed by the attorneys for the women's cause by making important parts of the first brief an amendment to the second. The two briefs filed raised different legal points on which the validity of the Illinois suffrage act could be argued.

Those who have carefully observed the progress of this case are of the opinion the decision will not be handed down until the April term.

Men Fight; One Loses Eye.

DUNNE UPHOLDS DR. JAMES

Sets at Rest Intimations That He Sympathizes with Attacks.

Chicago, Feb. 16.—"I am pleased to learn that an overwhelming majority of the teaching faculty (at the University of Illinois) have expressed their confidence in President James, whom I believe to be a most efficient and competent educator."

In these words Governor Dunne has made clear his position with reference to the controversy over the administration of the state university and set at rest intimations that certain trustees of the big institution felt they had the governor's sympathy in their attack on Dr. James.

"I am expecting a woman," the superintendent says. "She came here a few weeks ago and wasn't quite sure. She said she'd return with others who had been boyhood friends of the man she thinks J. R. R. to be. The woman is Mrs. E. I. Randolph," Mr. Mullenbach said.

COLLEGE ATHLETE HONORED

Oliphant, of Purdue, Gets Portrait in Hall of Fame.

Lafayette, Ind., Feb. 16.—Elmer Q. Oliphant, Purdue's most famous athlete of the last decade, will have his picture placed in the memorial gymnasium, the board of directors of the Athletic association having decided on this. The directors decided that Oliphant's record at Purdue was such as to entitle him to a place in the university's hall of athletic fame. His will be the first portrait to be hung in the gymnasium gallery. A committee was appointed to procure a large portrait and have it suitably framed. It will then be placed in a conspicuous position in the gymnasium lobby.

Oliphant has won four athletic letters, and the fact that this is his last year at the university occasions much regret.

Failure of London Bank.

LONDON, ENGLAND — Coulon, Berthoud & Co., a small foreign banking house in Moorgate street, has suspended payment.

ELEVEN ADRIFT ON FOUR BARGES

Miraculous Escape of Captains and Families.

HEROIC RESOURCE DISPLAYED

Barges Break Loose from Tug When Hawser Parts—As Each Is Deserted It Sinks—Occupants Leave Last One in Small Boat and Picked Up After Drifting Across Sound.

Greenport, L. I., Feb. 16.—A little group of men and women, with two children sleeping in their mother's arms, close around a big fire in the home of B. D. Latham at Orient Point, the end of the northerly arm of Long Island, told of their drift across Long Island sound in a driting barge.

They were the captains and their wives of the four barges that broke adrift from the tug Pliny Fisk early Saturday morning in the storm. There were eleven in the drifting party.

Cut Loose from Tug.

The barges were in a tow of six bound for Providence. They were making for New Londan Friday night when the snowstorm driven by a gale came out of the northeast and beat them back. The Pliny Fisk labored ahead, but was losing ground early Saturday morning when the hawser between the second and third barges snapped, and the last four disappeared in the smother of snow.

The four barges drove down upon each other, bumping viciously in the waves.

Barges Warped Together.

The barges were warped together with hawsers, one at a time and the occupants transferred to the Feeney. Mrs. Towne fell into the water during the transfer, but was extricated just before the barges bumped together. The Feeney and Wood were cut loose from the other barges and locked together. About two miles off shore the Wood began to break up from the pounding and was cut adrift, and soon broke up and sank. The Feeney soon began to break up and the men lowered a small boat in which the entire party reached Orient Point.

Lafayette, Ind., Feb. 16.—Charles Ketcham, seventy-seven years old, an inmate of the State Soldiers' home, was fatally injured by being struck by a traction car while crossing the tracks at the home.

He sustained a fractured skull, broken collar bone and severe bruises. He came to the home from Hammond where a daughter, Mrs. Ella [illegible]mann lives.

DECATUR, ILL., JURY INDICTS R. M. POTTS

Illinois Insurance Commissioner Charged with Conspiracy.

Decatur, Ill., Feb. 16.—Rufus M. Potts, state superintendent of insurance, and Lucius Pfouts, state insurance examiner, has been indicted by the Macon county grand jury on charges of conspiracy.

Potts is charged with having kept examiners here for weeks at a time with the purpose of putting the Assured Mutual Fire Insurance company out of business, for political reasons, and also with having purposely allowed the case to go over until the May term of court in order that the company, in the meantime, would not have an opportunity to prove its innocence and proceed with its business.

Coupled with this indictment is another against State Senator Willis R. Shaw for perjury. Shaw was sued last fall for $50 and scheduled his property as exempt, although at that time, it is asserted, he was drawing $22 a week from the Assured Mutual company and $2,000 a year as state senator.

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 16.—Advised of his indictment at Decatur, R. M. Potts, state superintendent of insurance, said:

"The indictment will not deter me in my efforts to compel insurance companies in Illinois to obey the law. I do not care to discuss the indictment further. There are no grounds for the charges made against me."

TRIBUTE TO DEAD SOLDIERS

Illinois Will Erect a Monument at Kenesaw Mountain.

Bloomington, Ill., Feb. 16.—Illinois will pay a tribute to the valor of her sons. The design has been accepted and the contract let for a monument to the heroes of Kenesaw mountain. The State of Illinois has appropriated $20,000 for the purpose. The design was submitted by James B. Dibelka, state architect, and the members of the commission, appointed by Governor Charles S. Deneen accepted it.

The monument will be located upon an incline at Cheatham Hill, about three miles from Kenesaw mountain and about four miles from Marietta, Ga.

POTTER GIVEN PRISON TERM

Man Who Killed Another, With Chair Guilty of Manslaughter.

Vincennes, Ind., Feb. 16.—William Potter was found guilty of manslaughter by a jury. Potter last fall quarreled with Albert Hall about some fishing tackle and struck him on the head with a chair. Hall died a few days later.

Potter's punishment will be two to twenty-one years in the state prison.

DR. SHAW'S BIRTHDAY IS ONE OF MISHAPS

Among the events of Dr. Shaw's sixty-seventh birthday and hardly less exciting than the accident which resulted in her fractured ankle, was Dr. Shaw's trip by taxicab to have an X-ray photograph taken of the injured member. On the way up Madison avenue, a street car, ploughing through the snow, smashed into the taxicab in which Dr. Shaw was riding throwing her to the bottom of the cab.

Dr Shaw cannot be persuaded that her injuries are at all serious and insists on seeing visitors and answering telephone calls. One of those to visit her apartments was Jane Addams of Chicago.

Herman Horton Drops Dead.

BAY CITY, MICH.—Herman Horton, one of the Bay county's best known farmers, dropped dead at his farm "The Maples" in Merritt township. Heart disease was the cause.

He was born in Oakland county in 1848. He taught school in Oakland and Montcalm counties, and later was in the real estate business in Detroit. He came here in 1894. He was prominent in Republican politics. He leaves a widow and seven children.

Albion Protests Removal.

ALBION, MICH.—The very sudden removal of Otto H. Stecker, local manager of the Commonwealth Power company has produced a storm of protest. W. W. Laraway, recently company manager at Leslie, is Stecker's successor.

Stecker's five years of service here changed the feeling between the company and the city from one of antagonism to friendliness.

Will Examine Borysiak's Mind.

BAY CITY, MICH. — When the case of John Borysiak came up in circuit court Prosecuting Attorney McCormick made a motion to have the prisoner examined as to his sanity. The motion was granted. Borysiak is charged with the morder of his son, and he had since twice attempted suicide.

Tango Spoils Men's Feet.

ANN ARBOR, MICH.—The tango has been attacked from many angles, but a new opening for criticism was found when it was discovered the tango shoes, the rubber-soled footgear with no heels, are making men students of the University of Michigan flatfooted.

TENER HAS POWER TO OUST C. W. MURPHY

Chicago Club Owner Is Without Support in Baseball.

New York, Feb. 16.—Governor Tener of Pennsylvania, president of the National league, has been clothed with absolute authority to settle the case of Charles W. Murphy of the Chicago Cubs. This information comes from a National league source after the statement of Ban Johnson that he, as president of the American league, could discipline any of his club owners with expulsion, if necessary, and that he had asked the National league men to give similar power to Governor Tener

It is known to be true that within the last forty-eight hours Governor Tener has received positive assurances of support in whatever action he may take in the case of the belligerent Murphy from H. N. Hempstead of the New York club, C. H. Ebbets of the Brooklyn club, J. E. Gaffney of the Bostons, W. F. Baker of Philadelphia, Barney Dreyfuss of Pittsburgh, S. P. Britton of St. Louis and August Herrmann of Cincinnati.

In view of the fact that Ban Johnson, backed by the American league, declared war on Murphy last week, Murphy now stands absolutely without support in the ranks of organized baseball. It is believed that serious trouble is in store for him.

JOE CANNON JOINS Y. M. C. A.

Congressman Fordney Induces Former Speaker to Become Member.

Saginaw, Mich., Feb. 16.—Former Speaker Cannon enrolled as a member of the Saginaw Y. M. C. A.

His membership was obtained by United States Representative Joseph W. Fordney of this city, in connection with a local campaign now being make for new Y. M. C. A. members.

JUE MACKIN COUNTY CHARGE

Politician Who Served Prison Term for Perjury Stricken.

Chicago, Feb. 16.—Joseph C. ("Chesterfield") Mackin, known to a former generation as one of the most powerful Democratic politicians in Chicago —a man who made mayors and governors and tried to make a United States senator—has been taken to the county hospital, suffering from paralysis.

In the Cleveland-Blaine campaign of 1884 he was secretary of the Democratic state central committee. Ballot box stuffing with fraudulent votes following the election of Cleveland finally sent Mackin to the Joliet penitentiary for perjury after one of the most sensational cases in the history of American politics. "The election conspiracy case of 1884," as it is known locally, involved the election of a United States senator to succeed General John A. Logan, whose term expired in March, 1885.

THE HUSBANDS OF EDITH

By
GEORGE BARR M'CUTCHEON

Copyright by Dodd, Mead & Co.

was not blind to her husband's infatuation for her sister. Therefore if she were so cheerful and indifferent about it it followed that she was not especially distressed. In fact, it suddenly dawned upon him she was not only reconciled, but relieved. She had ceased to love her husband! She could be a free lance in Love's lists, notwithstanding the inconvenience of a legal attachment. "She's ripping, too," concluded Freddie, with a certain buoyancy of spirit. "If she doesn't love Medcroft she at least ought to love some one else instead. It's customary, I wonder"— Here he reflected deeply for an instant, his spirits floating high. Then he turned abruptly and made his way to the Tirol.

"You little wretch!"

It came to pass in the course of the evening that Mr. Ulstervelt, supremely confident from the effect of past achievements, drew the unsuspecting Mrs. Medcroft into a secluded tete-a-tete. It is not of record that he was ever a diplomatic wooer. One in haste never is. Suffice it to say Mrs. Medcroft, her cheeks flaming, her eyes wide with indignation, suddenly left the side of the indomitable Freddie and joined the party at the other end of the entresol, but not before she had said to him with unmistakable clearness and decision:

"You little wretch! How dare you say such silly things to me!"

The rebuff decisive! And he had only meant to be comforting, not to say self sacrificing. He'd be banged if he could understand women nowadays, not these women at least. In high dudgeon, he stalked from the room. In the door he met Brock.

"For two cents," he declared savagely, as if Brock were to blame, "I'd take the next train for Paris."

Brock watched him down the hall. He drew a handful of small coins from his pocket, ruefully looking them over. "Two cents," he said. "Hang it all. I've nothing there but pfennigs and hellers and centimes."

In the course of his wanderings the disconsolate Freddie came upon Mrs. Odell-Carney and pudgy Mr. Rodney. They were sitting in a quiet corner of the reading room. Mr. Rodney had had a hard day. He had climbed a mountain—or, more accurately speaking, he had climbed halfway up and then the same half down. He was very tired. Freddie observed from his lonely station that Mr. Rodney was fast dropping to sleep, notwithstanding his companion's rapid flow of small talk. It did not take Freddie long to decide. He was an outcast and a pariah and he was very lonely. He must have some one to talk to. Without more ado he bore down upon the couple and a moment later was tactfully advising the sleepy Mr. Rodney to take himself off to bed—advice which that gentleman gladly accepted. And so it came about that Freddie sat face to face with the last resort, at the foot of the chaise-longue, gazing with serene adulation into the eyes of a woman who might have had a son as old as he—if she had had one at all. She had been a coquette in her salad days—there was no doubt of it. She had encountered fervid gallants in all parts of the world and in all stations of life. But it remained for the gallant Freddie Ulstervelt to bowl her over with surprise for the first time in her long and varied career. At the end of half an hour she pulled herself together and tapped him on the shoulder with her fan, a quizzical smile on her lips.

"My dear Mr. Ulstervelt, are you trying to make love to me? You nice Americans! How gallant you can be! I am quite old enough to be your mother. Believe me, I thank you for the compliment. I can't tell you how I appreciate this delicate flattery. You are very delicious. But," as she arose graciously, "I'd follow Mr. Rodney's example if I were you. I'd go to bed." Then, with a rare smile, which could not have been more chilling, she left him standing there.

"By Jove!" he muttered, passing his hand across his eyes as if bewildered. "What was I saying to her? Good Lord, has it got to be a habit with me? Was I making love to—her?" He departed for the American bar.

Mrs. Rodney had but little sleep that night. She went to bed in a state of worry and uncertainty, oppressed by the shadows which threatened eternal darkness to the fair name of the family, however distantly removed. Katherine's secret had in reality been news to her; she had not paid enough attention to the Medcrofts to notice anything that they did, so long as they did not do it in conjunction with the Odell-Carneys. The Odell-Carneys were her horizon—morning, noon and night. And now there was likelihood of that glorious horizon being obscured by a sickening scandal in the vulgar foreground. Inspired by Katherine's dreadful conclusions, the excellent lady set [illegible] for herself. During the entire evening she flitted about the hotel and grounds with all the snooping instincts of a Sherlock Holmes. She lurked, if that is not putting it too theatrically. From unexpected nooks she emerged to view the landscape o'er; by devious paths she led her doubts to the gates of absolute certainty and then sat down to shudder to her heart's content. It was all true! For four hours she had been trying to get to the spot where she could see with her own eyes and at last she had come to it. Of course she had to admit to herself that she did not actually hear Mr. Medcroft tell Constance that he loved her, but it was enough for her that he sat with her in the semi-darkness for two unbroken hours, speaking in tones so low that they might just as well have been whispering so far as her taut ears were concerned.

Moreover, other persons than herself had smilingly nudged each other and referred to the couple as lovers; no one seemed to doubt it, nor to resent it, which is proof that the world loves a lover when it recognizes him as one.

Mrs. Rodney also discovered that Mrs. Medcroft went to her room at 9 o'clock, at least three hours before the subdued tete-a-tete came to an end. The poor thing doubtless was crying her eyes out, decided Mrs. Rodney.

And now, after all this, is it to be considered surprising that the distressed mother of Katherine did not sleep well that night? Nor should her wakefulness be laid at the door of the tired Mr. Rodney, who was ever a firm and stentorian sleeper.

Morning came, and with it a horseback ride for Brock and Miss Fowler. That was enough for Mrs. Rodney, she would hold in no longer. Mrs. Odell-Carney must be told. She, at least, must have the chance to escape before the storm of scandal broke to muddy her immaculate skirts. Forthwith the considerate hostess appeared before her guest with a headful of disclosures. She had decided in advance that it would not do to beat about the bush, so to speak. She would come directly to the obnoxious point.

They were in Mrs. Odell-Carney's sitting room. Mr. Odell-Carney was smoking a cigarette on the balcony, just outside the window. Mrs. Rodney did not know that he was there. It is only natural that he held himself inhospitably aloof. Mrs. Rodney bored him to death. He did not hear all that was poured out between them, but he heard quite enough to cause him something of a pang. He distinctly heard his wife say things to Mrs. Rodney that she had solemnly avowed she would not say—things about the Medcroft baby.

It goes without saying that Mrs. Odell-Carney refused to be surprised by the disclosures. She calmly admitted that she had suspected Medcroft of being too fond of his sister-in-law; but, she went on cheerfully, why not? His wife didn't care a rap for him—she said rap and nothing else. Mrs. Medcroft had an affair of her own, dear child. She was not so slow as Mrs. Rodney thought, oh, no. Mrs. Odell-Carney warmed up considerably in defending the not to be pitied Edith. She said she had liked her from the beginning, and more than ever, now that she had really come to the conclusion that her husband was the kind who sets his wife an example by being a bit divaricating himself.

"I won't hear of a divorce."

Mrs. Rodney fairly screeched with horror when she heard that Tootles was "a poor little beggar," and "all that sort of thing, you know."

"My dear," said Mrs. Odell-Carney, hating herself all the time for engaging in the spread of gossip, but feminely unable to withstand the test, "your excellent cousin, Mrs. Medcroft, receives two letters a day from London—great, fat letters which take fifteen minutes to read in spite of the fact that they are written in a perfectly huge hand by a man—a man, d'ye hear? They're not from her husband. He's here. He cannot have written them in London, don't you see? He"—

"I see," inserted Mrs. Rodney, who was afraid that Mrs. Odell-Carney might think she didn't see.

"Mind you, Mrs. Rodney, I'm terribly cut up about all this. She has"—

"Oh, I knew you would be," mourned Mrs. Rodney, her heart in her boots. "You must just hate me for exposing you to"—

"Rubbish!" scoffed the other. "It isn't that. I've been through a dozen affairs in which my best friends were frightfully—er—complicated. I meant to say that I'm terribly cut up over poor Mrs. Medcroft. She's a dear. Believe me, she's a most delicious sinner. Even Carney says that, and he's very fastidious—and very loyal."

"They are married in name only," said Mrs. Rodney, beginning to sniffle. She looked up and smiled wanly through her tears. "You know what I mean. My grammar is terrible when I'm nervous." She pulled at her handkerchief for a wavering moment. "Do you think I'd better speak to Edith? We may be able to prevent the divorce."

"Divorce, my dear," gasped Mrs. Odell-Carney incredulously.

At this juncture Mr. Odell-Carney emerged from his shell, so to speak. He stalked through the window and confronted the two ladies, one of whom at least was vastly dismayed by his sudden appearance.

"Now, see here," he began without preliminary apology, "I won't hear of a divorce. That's all rubbish—perfect rot, 'pon my soul. Wot's the use?

N. Y. TREASURER CUTS HIS THROAT

John J. Kennedy Suicides Over Graft Quiz Worries.

DUE FOR A SECOND GRILLING

Affairs of His Office Said to Be in Good Shape—Victim was of Sensative Nature—Wife Feared for Him—Relation with Bonding Company Is Questioned.

Buffalo, N. Y., Feb. 16.—State treasurer John J. Kennedy committed suicide by cutting his throat with a razor in a washroom adjoining the ballroom of the Markeen hotel at 1:30 o'clock in the afternoon. The body was found by his son, Wm. H. Kennedy.

In an official statement Michael F. [illegible]berger, Jr., Mr. Kennedy's personal attorney, declared that Mr. Kennedy was temporarily insane when he committed the act and that he had been brooding over the ordeal of the cross-examination at the hands of District Attorney Whitman by whom he had been subpoenaed to appear before the grand jury in New York City.

Crazy, Says Life-Long Friend.

Henry P. Burgard, Democratic state committeeman and barge canal contractor, now residing at Fulton, N. Y., has been a life-long friend of Kennedy. Rumor had it that Mr. Burgard knew the reason why Kennedy should take his life but on the telephone Mr. Burgard said:

"John Kennedy must have been crazy. I don't know why that should have worried him although Mr. Kennedy was a very nervous man. He is in good financial circumstances, had money and property that he accumulated in a long and busy life."

Mr. Kennedy had declared to his attorney as well as to other personal friends that he did not fear that there was anything upon which Mr. Whitman might indict him but that the affairs of the state treasurer's office were so intricate that a shrewd attorney might easily place him in an unpleasant position before the public.

Son Don't Fear Quiz.

That his son does not fear the results of an investigation into the affairs of the state treasurer's office, he sent this telegram to Governor Glynn:

"My father, John J. Kennedy, died suddenly today. I am quite familiar with his affairs as state treasurer and knew that everything connected with his office has been conducted properly and will be found correct. I would, however, suggest that his accounts as state treasurer be examined as expeditiously as possible and that an audit be had so that an official report can be made—WM. H. KENNEDY."

Was of Sensitive Nature.

State Treasurer Kennedy was of a sensitive nature, and it is said brooded over the stories published about him in connection with the graft probe. His wife had become alarmed, and was with him almost constantly.

Stories to the effect that Mr. Kennedy feared an exposure because a bonding company in which he was interested, had been permitted by him to bond state banks are denied.

LIQUOR ISSUE UP

PROHIBITION IS SPREADING

Members of Both Houses Believe That Time Is Approaching for Constitutional Amendment to Be Submitted—Two Important Developments Are Seen In Recent Legislation.

WASHINGTON.—The spread of the prohibition sentiment in the United States in the last year has made a deep impression on leaders in congress. The events of that period when viewed in the light of the ambitious program that the temperance advocates have seen for themselves in the immediate future are causing a lot of serious thinking and some anxiety on the part of members of congress who look beyond their noses.

Looms as National Issue.

In fact many of the leaders in the national legislature believe they already see the prohibition question looming as a national issue. They fear the time is nearing when a constitutional amendment providing for national prohibition will be submitted by congress to a referendum of the states. Such an amendment is now pending in both the house and the senate and the promotion of it through congress is the accomplishment toward which all the anti-rum forces are looking most hopefully.

It has long been a matter of comment in Washington that the only way in which temperance legislation can be prevented in congress is by holding the bills in committee and keeping them from the floor of the house or senate. When the average congressman is face to face with the liquor question and a delegation of W. C. T. U.'s he may drink like a fish himself but he will promptly record his vote in favor of the "drys."

That at least was the history of the two most important developments of the last year in congress. The passage of the Jones-Works excise law for the District of Columbia and the enactment of the Webb-Kenyon law to prohibit the shipment of liquor into prohibition territory for sale were regarded by the temperance crusaders as red letter events on their last year's calendar.

Congress Impressed.

The ease with which the passage of these laws has been obtained has left its impression on congress too. Few members dared to oppose them in the open and both went through by overwhelming votes. The Webb-Kenyon measure over the veto of President Taft.

THE ELECTRIC LIGHT SITUATION

FACTS VS THEORY.

Some new facts relating to the Electric Light situation. The experence of some Michigan Towns.

Grand Ledge, Mich.—In 1895 this city installed a water and electric plant at a cost of $24,000. In 1908, by a vote of 397 to 96, the electric plant was sold to a company. At the time of the sale the mayor wrote: "Reasons for change are cheaper operation, extra service and better service."

Richmond, Mich.—At a special election held on September 16, 1912, the proposition to sell the municipal electric lighting plant to a private company was carried. This plant had been in operation since 1900.

Before considering the company's proposition, the council decided to employ Wreakes and Noyes, electrical engineers of Detroit, to make a thorough investigation, of the condition of the plant. The following extracts are quoted from the engineers' reports.

"In common with almost all municipal plants, the early records are more or less shrouded in mystery. In fact the early accounts are simply a record of receipts and expenditures, and to complicate matters still further, the expenditures usually show only the name of the party to whom the individual order was drawn with absolutely no indication of the purpose of the payment. Money spent for improvements, increased capacity and betterments—charges against the capital account—have probably been paid and charged to expenses. Then it has been impossible to accurately determine how much is invested in the present plant, and to separate the actual operating expenses. The customary station records are conspicuous by their absence. There is no station log, and no totalizing meters upon either water or electric end; therefore no record of station output or hours of operation. For these reasons it was considered advisable to attempt an analysis of the earlier operations of the plant, as owing to the absence of even the simplest records, so much data would have to be estimated that the analysis would be of but little value.

"We consider that the plant as at present operated is not self-supporting, but is a scource of direct expense to the village and is sustained by funds appropriated from the general taxes. This method of operation is an injustice to those taxpayers who do not use the plants product but must contribute to its support.

"Further, there is some $16,000 of the taxpayers money invested in the plant, the operation of which just pays expenses. The same $16,000 properly invested would bring the village an unincumbered income of six or seven hundred dollars a year."

PRACTICAL BAKING LESSONS

COOKIES AND TEA CAKES

In this lesson I will give a few choice recipes for cookies and small tea cakes. There are two kinds of cookies, the rolled cooky and the drop cooky. The rolled cooky is rolled out and cut in shapes for the oven. The dropped cooky is less trouble as they are dropped with a teaspoon into the buttered pan. There is nothing more convenient for children's lunches than cookies or small cakes.

Nevada Briggs

Peanut Cookies

½ cup butter — ½ cup sugar
1 egg, beaten light — 2 tablespoonfuls milk
1 cup flour — ¼ teaspoonful salt
1 level teaspoonful K C Baking Powder
¾ cup shelled peanuts

Sift together three times, the flour, salt and baking powder. Cream the butter; add sugar, egg, milk, the flour mixture and, lastly, the peanuts, chopped and pounded fine in a mortar, or put through the food chopper. Drop on a buttered tin, a teaspoonful in a place well apart in order that the cooky can round out. Put half a nut meat on each bit of dough. Bake in a moderate oven. This will make twenty-four cookies.

These are delicious after the second day and will remain moist for a number of days.

Plain Cookies

½ cup butter — 1 cup granulated sugar
¼ nutmeg, grated — 1 egg, beaten light
3½ cups flour — ½ cup milk
3 level teaspoonfuls K C Baking Powder
Sugar for dredging the cakes

Sift together, three times, the flour and baking powder. Cream the butter, nutmeg, beaten egg, milk, and the flour mixture. Take the dough on a floured board, a little at a time; knead lightly; roll to a scant half inch thickness and cut into rounds. Dredge with sugar by turning top of cooky into a plate of sugar; if desired, a little cinnamon may be mixed with the sugar. Bake in a moderate oven.

Almond Drop Cookies

2 eggs, beaten light — 1 cup sugar
2 ounces chocolate, melted — 1 cup flour
1½ cups blanched almonds, chopped.
1 level teaspoonful K C Baking Powder
½ teaspoonful each, salt and cinnamon
1 teaspoonful vanilla extract

Sift together, three times, the flour, salt, cinnamon and baking powder. To the eggs add the sugar, chocolate, almonds, extract and lastly, the flour mixture. Drop by teaspoonfuls upon a buttered baking pan. Bake in a moderate oven. The recipe makes about three dozen little cakes. Other nuts, as hickory nuts, English walnuts or pecans may be used.

Spiced Tea Cakes

1½ cups flour — ½ teaspoonful salt
2 eggs or 4 egg yolks — ½ cup butter
¾ cup sugar — ½ cup cold water
1 level teaspoonful K C Baking Powder
2 teaspoonfuls cinnamon
½ teaspoonful nutmeg
¼ teaspoonful ground cloves

Sift flour, baking powder, salt and spices three times. Cream butter and sugar. Beat yolks of eggs very light; add these to butter and sugar mixture; alternately add water and flour mixture, beat until smooth then add beaten whites, when whole eggs are used. Bake in muffin pans or patty tins. Bake slowly until the batter has expanded to double its bulk; then increase the heat and bake until brown and will respond to the touch when pressed in the center with tips of fingers. A little fruit may be added such as raisins or currants.

Things to Remember

The softer cookies are mixed the lighter and more moist they will be.

To handle soft dough for rolling and cutting, take only a small amount on the board at a time.

When very soft dough is to be rolled and cut, always add a little baking powder to flour used on the molding board and the rolling pin, as the flour alone will toughen the dough.

To bake cookies use a sheet or a shallow pan and always bake at the top of the oven. Never try to bake cookies in a deep pan. The heat must get directly at the cooky from the sides as well as the top. If one does not have a shallow pan or cooky sheet, invert a dripping pan and use the bottom of it. Have a moderate oven for cookies.

To bake Tea Cakes always use the slow oven until the cakes have doubled in bulk. Then bake until done with the hotter oven. If tea cakes "mountain up" and crack open it is an indication they baked too quickly.

K C Baking Powder is excellent for cookies. It is not always possible to have enough oven room or enough shallow pans to bake all the cookies at one time. With K C it is perfectly safe to mix as much batter as you wish and bake as fast as convenient. The last cookies baked will be equally as nice as the first, due to the nature of K C Baking Powder.

K C is so made that it gives two distinct raises—one out of the oven and one in the oven. This double raise allows food to remain out of the oven for hours and still be light when baked and it also makes the food much lighter than the old fashioned baking powder. Test this statement by making your favorite cake with K C and note the difference in the size of it when baked.

SULLIVAN WILL STAY IN FIGHT

Illinois U. S. Senatorial Candidate Replies to Bryan.

WILLING TO LET PUBLIC JUDGE

Chicago Politician Calls on Bryan to Be More Specific in Charge That Sullivan Does Not Rise to Dignity of Office—Resents Bryan's Interference.

Chicago, Feb. 16.—Roger C. Sullivan will not permit William J. Bryan's opposition to his senatorial candidacy to drive him out of the primary fight next September. There is a note of defiance in the statement issued by Mr. Sullivan in reply to the secretary of state's attack on him.

He calls on the editor of the Commoner to be more specific in his charge that Sullivan does not rise to the dignity of the office. He intimates that he is holding something in reserve in regard to his past political relations with Bryan, should the Nebraskan continue his assault.

Mr. Sullivan did not prepare an answer to Bryan until he received a telegram personally from the secretary of state assuring him, it is said, that he stood sponsor for the Commoner article. Mr. Sullivan declined to make known the contents of the Bryan message.

Respects Bryan's Confidence.

"As he did not make public my telegram to him, it would be discourteous ofr me to reveal the contents of his reply," said the candidate.

Mr. Sullivan's authorized statement follows:

"I have refrained from comment on Mr. Bryan's editorial in the Commoner until I ascertained the authorship of that article. I have just received a confirmatory night message.

"If a Democrat in Illinois has no right to announce himself as a candidate in his home state without the sanction of Mr. Bryan, who has more than once and without success undertaken to control the Democratic party in Illinois, then my candidacy is 'unthinkable'; not, otherwise.

"In reference to his statement that I do not rise to the dignity of the office:

"In the last of the campaigns in which Mr. Bryan rode the Democratic party, including the candidates for congress, to defeat I was of sufficient importance and rose to sufficient dignity after his nomination to sit in the councils of the party at his solicitation and request. I may say further he willingly permitted me to finance the campaign in his behalf, and he tendered me his grateful thanks for my efforts.

Willing to Let Public Judge.

"In passing, I may say Mr. Bryan's conception of the 'dignity of an office' has been so frequenty commented upon by the public press in the last nine months that I am willing to let the public judge whether he is a capable critic of that subject.

"Since 1908 Mr. Bryan has had no controversies in which I was directly or indirectly involved. The basis of his comment is therefore a matter of conjecture. The people of Illinois, I believe, are well acquainted with me, and know me as favorably as the occasion requires. Perhaps Mr. Bryan will make his charges specific.

"I am a candidate for United States senator under new conditions, which I have deliberately chosen to face.

"My candidacy will be submitted to the Illinois Democracy in a statewide direct primary. After that primary my candidacy will be submitted to all the voters of the state. I confidently await the verdict of the people."

A Fable.

A Humorist who journeyed at Night stopped at the House of a Friend.

"Welcome to Thee," said his Friend. "Hast Thou had Aught to relieve Thy Hunger?"

"Verily, I have," replied the Humorist. "I have Fed on the Fat of the Land and the Sky. I stretched forth mine Hand and took the Dipper and filled it with Milk from the Milky Way; I placed it on some Ice from Iceland and set it Down to cool. Then fetched I some Greens from Greenland and a Sandwich from the Sandwich Islands. To this I added a Shank from Turkey, a Greaser from Greece and Butter from Moscow. Such was my Repast."

"Very good," said his Friend. "I need not Disturb my Servants to bring Thee wherewith to Eat."

Moral.—All things are univocal to some people. And a humorist should be serious when there is a meal in it.—Puck.

That Poole Story.

In his book, "My Memories," Lord Suffield, who was considered "the very pink and model of fashion," sets us right about the well known story of Poole, the tailor, which is sometimes attributed to the Prince of Wales:

"As a matter of fact, it was not the Prince of Wales, nor was I the witty author of the repartee. The true story is that Poole went down to Bradgate park to visit Lord Stamford, and on his return he was asked by Alfred Montgomery, the wittiest man of his age, how he had enjoyed his visit and whom he had met. 'Well, sir,' replied Poole, 'the fact is that the company was rather mixed.' 'But, —— it all, my good fellow,' retorted Montgomery, 'surely you did not expect them all to be tailors?'" hang it all, Mrs. Rodney, wot's the odds, so long as all parties are contented? We can stand it, by Jove, if they can, don't you know. We can't regulate the love affairs of the universe. Besides, I'm not going to stand by and see a friend dragged into a thing of this sort"—

"A friend, Carney," exclaimed his wife

"Well, it's possible, my dear, that he may be a friend. I know so many chaps in London who might be doing this sort of thing, don't you know. Who knows but the chap who's writing her these letters may be one of my best friends? It doesn't pay to take a chance on it. I won't bear to it. If Medcroft knows and his wife knows and Miss Fowler knows, why the deuce should we bother our heads about it? Last night I heard the Medcroft infant bawling its lungs out—teething, I dare say—but do I go in and take a hand in straightening out the poor little beggar? Not I. By the same token, why should I or anybody else presume to step in and try to straighten out the troubles of its parents? It's useless interference, either way you take it."

"I think it's all very entertaining and diverting," said Mrs. Odell-Carney carelessly. She yawned.

"Do you really think so?" asked the doubting Mrs. Rodney. "I was so afraid you'd mind. Your position in society, my dear Mrs."—

"My position in society, Mrs. Rodney, can weather the tempest you predict," said Mrs. Odell-Carney, with a smile that went to Mrs. Rodney's marrow.

"Oh, if—if you really don't mind"—she mumbled apologetically.

"Not at all, my dear madam," remarked Odell-Carney, carefully adjusting his eyeglass. "It's quite immaterial, I assure you."

CHAPTER XI.

Other Relations.

It is but natural to presume after the foregoing that the affairs of the Medcrofts were under close and careful scrutiny from that confidential hour. The Odell-Carneys were conspicuously nice and agreeable to the Medcrofts and Miss Fowler. It may be said indeed that Mr. Odell-Carney went considerably out of his way to be agreeable to Mrs. Medcroft—so much so, in fact, that she made it a point to have some one else with her whenever she seemed likely to be left alone with him. The Rodneys struggled bravely and no doubt conscientiously to emulate the example set by the Odell-Carneys, but it was hardly to be expected that they could see new things through old world eyes. They grew very stiff and ceremonious—that is, the Rodney ladies did. It was their prerogative, of course. Were they not cousins of the Medcrofts?

Four or five days of uneasy pretense passed with a swiftness that irritated certain members of the party and a slowness that distressed the others. Days never were so short as those which the now recklessly infatuated Brock was spending. He was valiantly earning his way into the heart of Constance, a process that tried his patience exceedingly, for she was blithely unimpressionable if one were to judge by the calmness with which she fended off the inevitable though tardy assault. She kept him at arm's length. Appearances demanded a discreetness no matter how she may secretly have felt toward the good looking husband of her sister. To say that she was enjoying herself would be putting it much too tamely. She was reveling in the fun of the thing. It mattered little to her that people, her own cousins in particular, were looking upon her with cold and critical eyes. She knew down in her heart that she could throw a bomb among them at any time by the mere utterance of a single word. It mattered as little that Edith was beginning to chafe miserably under the strain of waiting and deception. The novelty had worn off for the wife of Roxbury. She was despairingly in love, and she was pining for the day to come when she could laugh again with real instead of simulated joyousness.

"Connie, dear," she would lament a dozen times a day, "it's growing unbearable. Oh, how I wish the three weeks were ended. Then I could have my Roxbury, and you could have my other Roxbury, and everbody wouldn't be pitying me and cavilling at you because I'm unhappily married."

"Why do you say I could have your other Roxbury?" demanded her sister on one occasion. "You forget father expects me to marry the viscount. I"—

"You are so tiresome, Connie. Don't worry me with your love affairs—I don't want to hear them. There's Mr. Brock waiting for you in the garden."

"I know it, my dear. He's been waiting for an hour. I think it is good for him to wait," said the other, with airy confidence. "What does Roxy say in his letter this morning?"

"He says it will all be over in a day or two. Dear me, how I wish it were over now! I can't endure Cousin Mary's snippishness much longer, and as for Katherine! My dear, I hate that girl!"

"She's been very nice lately, Edith—ever since Freddie dropped me so completely. By the way, Burton was telling me today that Odell-Carney had been asking her some very curious and staggering questions about Tootles and your most private affairs."

"I know, my dear," groaned Edith. "He very politely remarked to me last night that Tootles made him think very strangely of a friend of his in London. He wouldn't mention the fellow's name. He only smiled and said, 'Nevah mind, my dear, he's a c'nfended handsome dog.' I daresay he meant that as a compliment for Tootles. She is pretty, don't you think so, dear?"

"She's just like you, Edith," said Constance, who understood things quite clearly

"Then, in heaven's name, Connie, why are they staring at her so impolitely—all of them?"

"It's because she is so pretty. Goodness, Edith, don't let every little thing worry you. You'll have wrinkles and gray hairs soon enough."

"It's all very nice for you to talk," grumbled Edith. "I'm going mad with loneliness. You have a lover near you all the time—he's mad about you. What have I? I'm utterly alone. No one loves me—no, not a soul"—

"You won't let them love you, Edith," said Constance jauntily. "They all want to love you, all of them."

"I hate men," announced Mrs. Medcroft retrospectively

Developments of a most refractory character swooped down upon them at the very end of the sojourn in Innsbruck. Every one had begun to rejoice that the fortnight was almost over and that they could go their different ways without having anything really regrettable to carry away with them. The Rodneys were going to Paris, the Medcrofts to London, the Odell-Carneys (after finding out where the others were bent) to Ostend. Freddie Ulstervelt suddenly announced his determination to remain at the Tirol for a week or two longer. That very day he had been introduced to a Mlle. Le Brun, a fascinating young Parision stopping at the Tirol with her mother.

All might have ended well had it not been for the unfortunate circumstance of Odell-Carney's making a purchase of the London Standard instead of the Times, as was his custom. His lamentations over this piece of stupidity were cut short by the discovery of an astonishing article upon the editorial page of the paper—an article which created within him a sense of grave perplexity. He read the headlines thrice and glanced through the text twice, neither time with any very definite idea of what he was reading. His fingers shook as he held the sheet nearer the window for a final effort to untangle the incredible thing that lay before him in simple, unimpeachable black and white.

"'Pon me word," he kept repeating to himself feebly. Then he got up and went off in extreme haste to find his wife.

"My dear," he said to her in the carriageway, "I must speak with you alone." She was just starting off for a drive with Mrs. Rodney.

"Bad news, Carney?" she demanded, struck by his expression. She was following him toward a remote corner of the approach. He did not reply until they were seated much nearer to each other than was their wont.

"Read that," he said, slipping the Standard into her hands. "Wot do you think of it?"

"My dear, Carney, I don't know. Would you mind telling me what I am to read?"

"The Medcroft thing. Right there."

She read the article, her husband watching her face the while. Surprise, incredulity, dismay, succeeded each other in rapid changes. She was reading in sheer amazement of the doings of Roxbury Medcroft in connection with the county council's subcommittee—in London! The story went on to relate how Medcroft, implacable leader of the opposition to the "grafters," suddenly had appeared before the committee with the most astounding figures and facts to support his charges of rottenness on the part of the "clique;" his unexpected descent upon the scene had thrown the opposing leaders into a panic; every one had been led to believe that he was sojourning in the east. As a matter of fact, it was soon revealed, he had been in London secretly working on the problem for nearly three weeks, keeping discreetly under cover in order that his influence might not be thwarted. His array of facts, his bitter arraignment of the men who were trying to force the building bill through the council, staggered the whole city of London. At that writing it looked as though the bill would be overthrown, its promoters had been so completely put to rout. The committee would be compelled to take cognizance of the startling exposure. The people would demand a full thrashing out of the obnoxious deal. Roxbury Medcroft's name was on every one's lip. The Standard had profited by securing a great "beat."

The Odell-Carneys looked at each other in wonder and perplexity. "What does it mean?" asked the lady, her eyes narrowing.

"Look here, Agatha, this paper's at least two days old. Now, how the devil can Medcroft be in London and Innsbruck at the same time. He was here day before yesterday, wasn't he? I'm so c'nfended unobserving"—

"Yes, yes, he was here. And this paper"— She paused irresolutely.

"Says he was there. 'Pon my word, it's most uncanny. There's some mystery here."

"I've got it, Carney! This is not Roxbury Medcroft."

"Good Gawd!"

"This explains everything. Heavens, Carney! This fellow is—is her lover! She's running about the country with him. She's"—

"Her lover? 'Gad, my dear, he may have been so at one time, but he's the other one's lover now, take my word for it. I say, 'pon my soul, this is a charming game your friends the Rodneys have let us into. They"—

"My friends! Yours, you mean!" she retorted.

"Oh, come now! But let it go at that. They know, of course that this fellow isn't her husband, and yet, by gad, Agatha, they've gone about deliberately palming him off on us as the real article. They are actually sanctioning the whole"—

"Stop a moment, Carney," interrupted his wife. "The London chap may be the fraud. Let us go slow, my dear."

"Slow? How the devil can we go slow in such fast company? No! This fellow is the fraud. And they knew it too. They all know it. They"—

"Rubbish! You forget that the whole Rodney tribe is up in arms because Medcroft is making love to his wife's sister. They're not assuming anything there, let me tell you. And he's not Edith's lover. If he's not her husband, he's playing a part that she understands and approves. And this—this my dear Carney, may account for the imaginary orphanage of Tootles. Dear me, it's quite a tangle."

"I shall telegraph my solicitors at once for definite news. They'll know whether the real Medcroft is in London, and then—well by Jove, Agatha, I can't tell just wot steps I'll take in regard to these Rodneys."

He went into a long tirade against the unfortunate Seattleites, as he called them. "Understand me, Agatha, I don't blame Mrs. Medcroft. If she's having an affair with this chap and can pull the wool"—

"But she isn't having an affair with this chap," cried Mrs. Odell-Carney, her patience exhausted. "She's having an affair with a chap in London, the one who writes. Good gracious! Of course! Why, what fools we are. The real Medcroft is in London, and it is he who is writing the letters. How stupid of me!"

FOES TRAPPED HIM

Blind Senator Explains Going to Mrs. Bond's Room.

WAS NEVER AT HOTEL BEFORE

Accused Oklahoma Statesman on Stand Charges Accusations Against Him Were Framed Up by Political Foes —Believed He Was Being Taken to Hotel Parlor.

OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLA.—Political opposition was held responsible by Thomas P. Gore, United States senator from Oklahoma, for the damage suit for $50,000, filed against him by Mrs. Minnie E. Bond, who alleges the senator from Oklahoma attacked her in a Washington hotel.

Senator Gore took the witness stand in his own behalf. He denied making an attack on Mrs. Bond and said he believed the charge to have been made to injure him in his campaign for renomination as the Democratic candidate for the senate.

Tells of Meeting in Hotel.

"I had never been there before," he said, speaking of meeting Mrs. Bond at her hotel, "and when I reached the door Mrs. Bond approached me in the lobby. I supposed we were to go to the hotel parlor, but she took me to another room."

"Where did you sit?" Senator Gore was asked.

"I sat in a rocking chair," replied he. "We talked about the appointment of her husband. I told her again there was no chance for him. She seemed to feel that he had lost.

"I arose, remarking that I must go, and Mrs. Bond took hold of my hands. She was remarking that I was going to have a hard race. At that moment the telephone rang and she answered it. Then she came back and sat on the bed.

Says She Restrained Him.

"We talked only a few minutes. I arose and she took hold of my hand, them fell on the bed. I asked: 'What does this mean?' Just then Robertson came into the room and told her to stop that squalling."

"Did you at any time touch Mrs. Bond?" he was asked.

"I did not," the senator replied.

Continuing his testimony Senator Gore said he told Robertson he wanted to see Mrs. Bond again.

"I asked him if she had anything to say about the incident. 'I want to know what this means,' I said.

"She replied she didn't want her husband to know about it. Robertson also said he had nothing to say about it."

The senator said he saw Dr. J. H. Earp of Oklahoma City the next day and discussed the incident.

"I told him," he said, "that if anyone said I did anything improper it was 'an infamous lie.'"

Senator Gore denied that he told Earp to try to get Mrs. Bond out of the city.

GRAFT CHARGES STIR RIOTING TOKYO MOBS

Parliament Is Attacked; Ministers Sustained by Diet.

TOKYO, JAPAN — A wild, riotous mob attacked the Japanese house of parliament. It was driven back by the police only after the entrance gates had been broken down and scores of persons hurt.

The rioting followed a mass meeting at which resolutions were adopted to impeach the cabinet for its attitude in connection with the graft charges against Japanese naval officers, several of whom are accused of receiving commissions for influencing the allotment of admiralty contracts in favor of a German firm.

By a vote of 205 to 165, the diet rejected a resolution of want of confidence. The speaker of the diet ordered the expulsion of a member of the opposition who had interrupted the debate, and a free fight on the floor of the house between the guards and the friends of the deputy ensued.

THIRD SPARLING BOY SLOWLY NEARS DEATH

Last Victim of Alleged Mac Gregor Poisoning Passing.

UBLY, MICH.—Ray Sparling, the brother of Cyril Sparling, for whose death Dr. Robert MacGregor, of Bad Axe, is serving a life sentence in Jackson prison, is slowly wasting away.

His mother, who was charged with being implicated with Dr. MacGregor in causing the oldest son's death has prepared several times to take her only child to Port Huron, but has had to give up the trip because of his weak condition.

The father and brother died after a long illness—slowly fading away. Their deaths were a mystery for many months. Finally Dr. MacGregor was arrested, charged with poisoning the three. Mrs. Sparling, wife and mother, and Paul Woodworth, attorney, were arrested charged with being implicated in the triple death with Dr. MacGregor. Mrs. Sparling and Attorney Woodworth were released recently by Judge Beach.

Dr. MacGregor's trial attracted state wide attention, lasting for several weeks. An attempt was made recently to get him another trial, but the petition was refused by the supreme court. Dr. MacGregor has the sympathy of many people in this vicinity and a movement is on foot now to get him a pardon.

MATHEMATICIAN IS A PAUPER

Can Square Square of 15 Fifteen Times in Half Minute.

PORTLAND, MICH.—The Thomas Carmel O'Neil, mathematical genius, whose figure-juggling has astounded the experts, will enter the Clinton county poorhouse because he cannot earn a living. O'Neil hails from Hubbardstown and is forty-seven years old.

His peculiar talents were discovered thirty-five years ago, when he was twelve years old. After an old-fashioned spelling bee, the teacher asked the pupils to square fifteen. O'Neil did it instantly without using pencil and paper. The amazed teacher ran through a wide range of numbers, from 100 times 100 to 1,000,000 times 1,000,000, and he answered promptly and correctly while the other children were still setting their numbers down.

One of the most remarkable feats which O'Neil has performed is to square fifteen, and the product thus obtained fifteen successive times. In the final answer to this problem there are 41,000 figures, and these he can recite backwards. His answer to this problem occupied a space of 800 feet, on sheets of paper pasted together, the strip being nearly fifty-four rods long. It would take an ordinary man, working ten hours a day, twenty-five years to reach the conclusion of the problem. O'Neil's answer came in less than half a minute.

DUE FOR A SECOND GRILLING

Affairs of His Office Said to Be in Good Shape—Victim was of Sensitive Nature—Wife Feared for Him—Relation with Bonding Company Is Questioned.

NEW YORK — The suicide of State Treasurer John J. Kennedy in Buffalo on the eve of his examination in the John Doe grand jury investigation in this city will not halt the inquiry into his office and affairs. This was indicated by members of the assembly graft investigating committee known as the Sullivan committee.

BUFFALO, N. Y. — State Treasurer John J. Kennedy committed suicide by cutting his throat with a razor in a washroom adjoining the ballroom of the Markeen hotel at 1:30 o'clock in the afternoon. The body was found by his son, Wm. H. Kennedy.

In an official statement Michael F. Dirnberger, Jr., Mr. Kennedy's personal attorney, declared that Mr. Kennedy was temporarily insane when he committed the act and that he had been brooding over the ordeal of the cross-examination at the hands of District Attorney Whitman by whom he had been subpoenaed to appear before the grand jury in ew York City.

Crazy, Says Life-Long Friend.

Henry P. Burgard, Democratic state committeeman and barge canal contractor, now residing at Fulton, N. Y., has been a life-long friend of Kennedy. Rumor had it that Mr. Burgard knew the reason why Kennedy should take his life but on the telephone Mr. Burgard said:

"John Kennedy must have been crazy. I don't know why that should have worried him although Mr. Kennedy was a very nervous man. He is in good financial circumstances, had money and property that he accumulated in a long and busy life."

Son Don't Fear Quiz.

That his son does not fear the results of an investigation into the affairs of the state treasurer's office, is sent this telegram to Governor Glynn:

"My father, John J. Kennedy, died suddenly today. I am quite familiar with his affairs as state treasurer and know that everything connected with his office has been conducted properly and will be found correct. I would, however, suggest that his accounts as state treasurer be examined as expeditiously as possible and that an audit be had so that an official report can be made—WM. H. KENNEDY."

Was of Sensitive Nature.

State Treasurer Kennedy was of a sensitive nature, and it is said brooded over the stories published about him in connection with the graft probe. His wife had become alarmed, and was with him almost constantly.

Stories to the effect that Mr. Kennedy feared an exposure because a bonding company in which he was interested, had been permitted by him to bond state banks are denied.

UNIONISTS GAIN 20 VOTES

Motion to Submit Home Rule to Election, However, Is Defeated.

LONDON, ENG.—The amendment to the king's speech from the throne proposed by Walter Long, calling for the submission of the home rule issue to the country at a general election was defeated—333 to 255.

When Mr. Balfour moved the rejection of the home rule bill at the last session of parliament, the government had a majority of 98. Bonar Law's motion to reject the bill on the third reading was rejected by a majority of 109. The reduced majority of 78 obtained drew cheers from the opposition.

DIDN'T START MONROE PUMPS

Capt. Johnson Said He Knew It Would Do No Good.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—The pumps of the Monroe were not even started following the ramming of the Old Dominion liner by the Merchants and Miners steamer Nantucket on Jan. 30, according to an admission by Captain Johnson of the wrecked vessel.

Captain Johnson declared that he realized on the instant of the collision that the Monroe was doomed to sink in a few minutes and that it would do no good to start the pumps.

One of the charges against Captain Berry is that he violated a rule, the observance of which by Captain Johnson caused the wreck, in the opinion of Captain Johnson.

VILLA CONTINUES TO HANG AROUND JUAREZ

Story Circulates That He Has Broken with Carranza.

EL PASO, TEXAS — Pancho Villa continues to remain in Juarez, with a troop guard of 700 men, and says he will not go back south to attack Torreon until he is satisfied that the mysterious band near Samalyuca, believed to be Castillo's band, has been disposed of.

Meantime, a story is in circulation, apparently well authenticated, that the breach between Villa and Venustiano Carranza is irreparable and that Villa is awaiting at Juarez in anticipation of a plan of Carranza to seize Juarez by force and set up his capital here. Men who have arrived here from the west coast of Mexico, where Carranza was last heard from, declare that Carranza is coming across the mountains accompanied by several thousand men, and that it is his plan to appear suddenly at Juarez and force obedience and real recognition from Villa by force or numbers.

It is also said that Villa knows he can't take Torreon and he fears his own men whom he has sent south will desert.

Villa is not fulfilling any of his boasts to take millions of rounds of ammunition over the river when the embargo was raised. Federals claim that Villa is without funds and that this is one reason he is here waiting.

PANIC ON A STEAMER

Largest Packet on Ohio River Rams Pier Near Louisville.

LOUISVILLE, KY.—One hundred and ten passengers, including many women, were thrown into panic early in the day when the Queen City, the largest packet on the Ohio river, rammed a pier at the head of the Ohio falls, opposite here, after a strong current had nearly carried her over.

When life savers reached the steamer in response to her distress signal they found the rails lined with half dressed, frightened passengers, several of whom threatened to leap into the icy water. All the passengers were taken off and carried to the life saving station.

THE HUSBANDS OF EDITH

By
GEORGE BARR M'CUTCHEON

Copyright by Dodd, Mead & Co.

"Ann," exclaimed he triumphantly. "Of course, she's getting letters from her husband. Why not? That's to be expected. But, by the everlasting shag pat, do you suppose that her husband knows she's off here with another fellow who masquerades as her husband? No!" He almost shouted it. "I've never heard of anything so brazen. Gad, what nerve these Americans have! Just to think of it!"

"I don't believe she is anything of the sort," declared his wife. "She's as good as gold. You can't fool me, Carney. I know women."

"Deuce take it, Agatha, so do I. And wot's more, I know men."

"They're a poor lot, the kind you know. This pseudo Medcroft is not your kind. He's a very clever chap and a gentleman."

"Now, look here, Agatha, don't imagine that I'm going to be such a cad as to turn against 'em in their hour of trial. Not I. I'm more their friend than ever. I'll help 'em to get away from here, and I'll bulldoze these Rodneys into holding their peace forever after. It's the Rodney duplicity that I can't stand."

"Shall we stay here, or shall we find an excuse to leave?" she asked pointedly.

"We'll stay long enough for me to tell the Rodneys wot I think of 'em. I'll have an answer to my dispatch by night. Then I should advise you to have a talk with Mrs. Medcroft. You've invited her to the house, you know. Tell her there can't be two Medcrofts. See wot I mean? We'll see 'em through this, but—well, you understand."

CHAPTER XII.

"I do love you."

MEANTIME a telegram had preceded a lengthy letter into the department of the police, both directed to Herr Bauer, who in reality was James Githens of Scotland Yard. The telegram had said: "Why do you say M. is there? He is in London. Explain. Letter tomorrow." The letter had come, and Mr. Githens as well as the local police office was "bowled over," to express it in Scotland Yard English. He had wired his employers that "M. is still in Innsbruck. Cannot be in London." It was very clearly set forth in the letter that Roxbury Medcroft was in London and that Mr. Githens of Scotland Yard had betrayed his trust. He was virtually charged with playing into the hands of the enemy—"selling out," as it were. It readily may be expected that Mr. Githens was accused of being in the employ of the "opposition." Moreover, it is but reasonable to assume that he took vigorous steps at once to vindicate himself, which accounts for the woe that lurked close behind the heels of a man named Brock.

Brock and Constance had ridden off that afternoon to visit the historic Schloss Ambras. The great castle had been saved for the very last of their explorations. He had just been able to secure permission to visit that part of the duke's residence open on certain occasions to the curious public. Edith had declined to accompany them. In the first place, she was expecting the all important message from her husband. She was "on nettles," to quote her plaintive eagerness. In the second place, she realized that as the crisis was at hand in the affairs of Brock and Constance her presence was not a necessary adjunct. Not only was she expecting a message from Roxbury, but eagerly anticipating an outburst of joyous news from the two who had, it seemed, very gladly left her behind.

The young couple returning by the lower road from the schloss came to a resting place at a little eating house and garden on the hillside overlooking the river Inn. It is a quiet, demure, unfrequented place among the crags, standing in from the white roadway a hundred feet or more, clouded by gorgeous trees and somber cliffs. It was to this charming, romantic retreat that Brock led his fair, now tremulous inamorata. She, too, knew that the hour for decision had come. It was in the air, in the glint of his eyes, in the leaping of her heart. And she knew what she would say to him and what they would say to the world a few hours hence. The mountains seemed to have lost their splendid frown. They were beaming down upon her, tenderly caressing instead of bleak and foreboding as they always had been before.

A rosy cheeked girl came into the garden to serve them. Swift, cool breezes were scurring down the valley, bearing in their wake the soft rain clouds that were soon to drench the earth and then radiantly pass on. They were quite alone, seated in the shelter of a wide, overhanging portico. A soft, green darkness was creeping over the mountain side, pregnant with smell of the shower.

Constance ordered tea and a bite of something to eat for both. Brock's gaze never left her exquisite face while she was engaged in the pretty but rather self conscious occupation of instructing the waitress. After the girl had departed, he leaned forward across the little table and said, a trifle hoarsely and disjointedly:

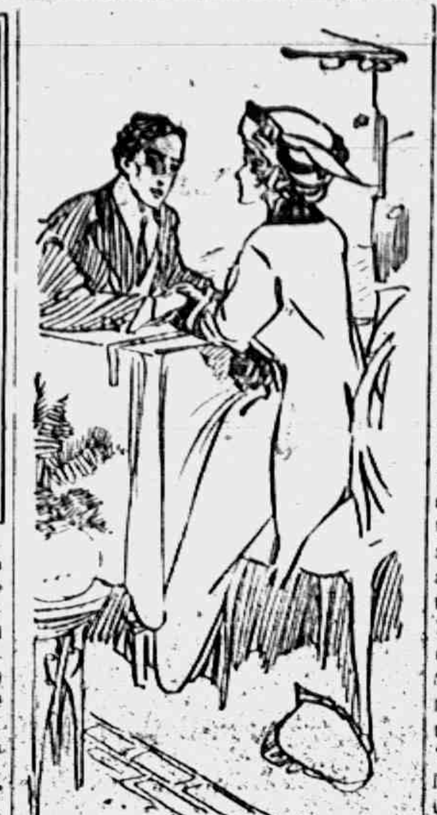
"It was most appetizing to watch you do that. I could live forever on nothing but tea and sandwiches if you were to order them."

"You've said a great many silly things to me this afternoon."

"I wonder"—he stopped and lowered his voice—"I wonder if you would call it silly if I were to tell you that I love you, very, very much." His gloved hand dropped upon hers as she fumbled aimlessly with the menu card; something in the very helplessness of that long, slim hand drew the strength of all his love toward it—all of this confident, arrogant love that had come to be so sure of itself in these last days. His gray eyes, dark with the purpose of his passion, took on a new and impelling glow; she looked into them for an instant, the wavering smile of last resort on her parted lips; then her lids dropped quickly and her lip trembled.

"I should still think you very silly," she said in a very low voice, "unless—unless you do love me."

His fingers closed so tightly upon hers that she looked up, her eyes swimming with tenderness. Neither spoke for a long minute, but words were not needed to tell what the soul was saying through the eyes.



"I do love you," she said simply.

"I do love you—you know I do, Connie. I've loved you from the first day. I cannot live without you. Coquie, darling, you won't keep me waiting? You will be my wife—you will marry me at once? You do love me, I know—I've known it for days and days"—

She whimsically broke in upon his passionate declaration, saying with a pretty petulance: "Oh, you have? What insufferable conceit! I"—

He laughed joyously. "I never was so sure of anything in my life," he said. "You couldn't help loving me, Constance; I've loved you so. You don't have to tell me, dear; I know. Still, I'd like to hear you say, with those dear lips as well as with your eyes, that you love me."

She put her hand upon the back of the broad one which held the other imprisoned; there was a proud, earnest light in her eyes. "I do love you," she said simply.

"God, but I'm a happy man!" he exulted. Forgetful of the time and the place, he half arose and, leaning forward, kissed her full upon the upturned lips.

There was a rattling of chinaware behind them. In no little confusion both came tumbling down from paradise and found themselves under the abashed scrutiny of a very red faced young serving woman.

"Oh, never mind," stammered Gretchen quite amiably. "I am used to that, madam. A great many ladies and gentlemen come here to—to—what you call it?" She placed the tea and sandwiches before them, her fingers all thumbs, her cheeks aglow.

Brock pulled himself together. Very sternly he said, "This young lady is to be my wife."

"Ach," said Gretchen, with a friendly smile and the utmost deference, "that is what they all say, mein herr." Then, giggling approvingly, she bustled away.

Brock waited until she was out of sight. "She seems to be on to us, as Freddie would say. But what do we care? I'd like to stand on top of the Bandjoch and shout the news to the world. Wouldn't you, dearest?"

"The world wouldn't hear us, dear," she said coolly. "Besides, it's raining up there. Just look at it sweeping down upon us. Goodness!"

He laughed hilariously, amused by her attempt to be casual and indifferent. "You can't turn it off so easily as that, dearest," he cried. "Come! While it rains we may plan. You will marry me—tomorrow?"

"No!" she cried, aghast. "How utterly ridiculous!"

"Well, then, day after tomorrow?"

"No, no, nor week after next. I"—

"See here, Connie, we've got some one else to consider as well as ourselves. In order to square it all up for Edith we must be able to say to these people that we haven't been frivoling—that we are going to be married at once. That will let Edith out of the difficulty, and everything will look rosy at the outset. If we put it off the world will have said things in its ignorance that she can never refute, simply because the world doesn't stop long enough to hear two sides of a story unless they are given pretty closely together. Now, Edith is counting on us to put the peeping Tom Rodneys and the charitable Carneys to rout with our own little bombshell. They're saying nasty things about all of us. They're calling you a vile thing for stealing your sister's husband, and they're calling me a dog for what I'm doing. No telling what they'll be saying if we don't step into the breach as soon as it is opened. We can't afford to wait, no matter what Roxbury says when he comes. We've just got to be able to forestall—even dear old Roxbury. Come! Don't you see? We must be married at once."

"Dear me," she murmured softly, "what will papa say?"

"My dear Constance, I will explain it all to your father when he gets back from South America next winter."

It was now raining in torrents. They moved back into the darkest recess of their shelter and blissfully looked out upon the drenched universe with eyes that saw nothing but sweet sunshine and fair weather.

The clattering of horses' hoofs upon the hard mountain road sounded suddenly above the hiss of the rainstorm. It was quite dark by this time, night having been hurried on by the lowering skies. A moment later three horsemen, drenched to the skin, drew up in front of the inn, threw their reins over the posts and dashed for shelter. They came noisily into the arbor, growling and stamping their soggy feet.

"What, ho!" called one of the newcomers, sticking his head through a window of the house. Brock and Miss Fowler looked on, amused by the plight of the riders. Two of them were unquestionably officers of the police, the third seemed to be an Englishman. They were gruff, burly fellows, all of them. For a few minutes they stormed and growled about their miserable luck in being caught in the downpour, ordering schnapps and brandy in large and instant quantities. At last the Englishman, a heavy, sour faced man, turned his gaze in the direction of the lovers, who sat quite close together in the dark corner. His gaze developed into a stare, then a look of triumph. A moment later he was pointing out the couple to his companions, all three peering at them with excited eyes.

Brock's face went red under the rude

GOOD ROADS

It has been said by the opponents of the county system of building roads, that the road law is not what it should be, that it can be amended to fit the farmer's cause. Now, Mr. Voter, stop and consider this; every two years you send two men to Lansing to represent Lenawee County in the House of Representatives and with Monroe County, one man to represent us in the Senate. Now, what can two men, with Lenawee's share of the third, do, arrayed against the representatives of 54 counties, in which the county system has been adopted and in which the people of 54 counties are entirely satisfied? Do you think that two or three men could go to Lansing next January and sway the minds of the representatives of these 54 counties and have them enact a law that would suit your individual taste? What would the statutes of Michigan look like, if there was a law enacted to suit the taste and opinion of every individual.

This is not a question of amending the law, we have the law, it is a question of whether you wish to adopt or reject the county system of building roads. We believe that it should be adopted.

Beware of special interests and special individuals, fathom their motives study their desires and see if they are fair to themselves and you. The Lenawee County Good Roads League is not allied with special interests or special communities or special individual; it is an organization of representative men from the entire county, to further the improvement of the highways. We believe that the county system is the most feasible, and most economical, the most equitable plan of building highways that can be accomplished under the existing laws. We believe that when the residents of villages and cities are public spirited enough and willing to pay 87 per cent of the cost of building the highways, all over this county that this system should be adopted.

If we adopt the county system of road building, all the township officers, including the highway commissioner, are elected just the same every year. The work does not stop in any township. The townships are relieved only of the roads taken over and made county roads. It will take a little time to build all the main roads but two or three miles in every township every year will build and maintain lines during the lifetime of the most of us, while under the old system we will be dead and gone before we know what good roads are. What have we accomplished under the old system? And what assurance have we that conditions will ever be changed under it? The county system makes a continuous road without break at the township lines. There are always two experienced men on the board of commissioners. The three commissioners are elected, one for two years, one for four years, and one for six years. Two men are always therefore on the board that understand and are educated in road building.

The county system means building our highways as they should be built by experienced men whose sole business it is to build and maintain roads. The county plan tends to economize and save large sums in road construction. When we take into consideration this plan as a business proposition no man can gainsay the truth of this proposition. Build good roads and your farm will sell for more money but if you don't want to sell, then it will be a pleasure to live for them.

Good roads will be of more benefit to the farming interest than any other thing that it within the power of the people to bring about. All of these conditions can be obtained and will be attained only (under present conditions) by adopting the county system.

Mr. Taxpayer, if you are in doubt as to the reading of the county road law, step into your lawyer's office and ask him to show you Chapters 4 and 5 of Act No. 283 as enacted by the legislature of 1909 and amended in 1913. You will find that the state pays a reward of $500 a mile for a nine foot gravel road and an additional 10 per cent for every additional foot in width up to 16 feet. That on or before Dec. 1st. of each year a portion of the appropriation for state highway purposes, equal to two per centum of the total state rewards that have been paid at that time, shall be credited to a repair fund.

Thus if a county has drawn $500 for one mile of road, the state will pay $10 per year for the up keep of that road. That the tax for improving roads shall not exceed two dollars on each $1,000 of assessed valuation according to the last preceeding year in counties where such valuation is more than twenty millions and does not exceed seventy five million dollars. So in Lenawee the tax could not exceed $3 on every one thousand of valuation. That under the county system, the commissioners have authority to construct bridges and culverts on the line of such county roads, and to repair and maintain the said roads bridges and culverts; and further that such commissioners shall take over, construct and maintain all bridges upon such highways as may be affected by this act within the county outside the limits of incorporated cities, which now have or should have spans greater than 30 feet.

Mr. Taxpayer, here are a few facts that we want you to consider and remember. First; under the county system of road building we shall be able to build difficult stretches of road that the township in and of itself would be unable to build by reason of the difficulties encountered and the large expense. Second; under the county system the burden of taxation is divided between the state, cities, villages and agriculture properties, whereas, under the present system the burden falls entirely on the farmers. Third; if we are not satisfied with the system after having given it a fair trial we can reject it by the same process by which it was brought into being, but a great deal easier, as the law only requires the signatures of ten free holders residing in the organized townships, incorporated villages and cities to petition the board of supervisors to submit the question. Fourth; the award system is here. It is a law, and all the farmers might as well take advantage of it, because if a county fails to do this, it is paying year after year for the roads that are built in other counties whereby they do things. We have stood this unequal condition long enough. Let us get under the county system and get back what we have paid out to build the other counties' roads. If some legislature should repeal it, it will affect all counties alike and put all counties out of business under the award system. But as long as it is here and is a law, remember that the important fact is that the counties do not adopt it are the counties that are paying for the building of roads in the counties that have adopted it. So we can say again remember that so long as the law is law, adopt the county system and take advantage of it, for under this system we get good roads.

These are facts. Study them carefully and impartially. Dont look at this question with prejudice.

We must consider this road question impartially from all angles and discuss it in a friendly way without prejudice, desiring only to reach the right conclusion in order that we may vote intelligently and for the best interest of all concerned. This is not a one man or a one locality question: it is Lenawee County as a whole.

The subject of good roads is a live one and will not down. Get into the game and vote for the county system, then we will have systematic work done on our highways.

Lenwee Co. Good Roads League

READ THIS ARTICLE FROM A RECENT ISSUE OF THE JACKSON PATRIOT.

THIS, ESSENTIALLY, is of a paternalistic and socialistic nature, and is generally where tried, a failure—unless all men are capable of managing public utilities, municipal ownership and operation in principle is bound to be a failure, because any man may by the votes of his friends be suddenly thrust into an office which will require him to assume the management of enterprises calling for technical skill and experience; and herein lies the danger to public interests, because the staff cannot be any better than its head, and under the withering and degrading influence of partisan politics it often worse than the head. No matter how great the talents of the man appointed or how evident his fitness for the work assigned, the knowledge that his appointment is due to political influence, rather than to recognition of merit, will clog his efforts and weaken his ambition, and the constant feeling of insecurity connected with public office will chill his ardor and shorten his reach.

All public utilities begin with plans and construction work, and here arises the first economy in favor of private ownership. In organizing the staff to design and build, merit and efficiency alone are considered, political considerations do not enter, and each man is selected and each move made to secure the largest, quickest and safest return for the money expended. In private enterprises promises for efficient service can be made and the incentive to active and successful effort can be maintained. Civil service rules, which are often a bar to high achievements, and practical ability in municipal enterprises, seldom find place in private work and there adjustment of the members of the working staff to positions of greatest usefulness is sure and easy.

In organizing a municipal staff the first condition is political service and availability for future political ends. Under it public service is perfunctory, dilatory and inefficient. Its cost is enhanced, and public comfort and convenience are impaired. In organizing a working staff for a private corporation the fewest men possible are selected consistent with what is to be performed, and effort is always made to bind them by feelings of self-interest to the enterprise, and retain them indefinitely, because their experience becomes a valuable working asset of the corporation, which cannot readily be replaced on short notice. In public affairs the man at the top is himself a creature of chance or caprice and his tenure is subject to the whims of the people who elevated him to office. He cannot guarantee a term to his subordinates because of political expediency and his own uncertain base, and the fidelity of service which comes from respect for vested authority, and the skill and command of his superior, can rarely be inspired in employes on municipal work.

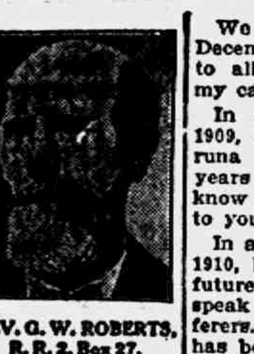
A CLERGYMAN'S STORY

Came Near Losing His Life—How He Escaped

The following letter was received by The Peruna Co., from Rev. G. W. Roberts, R. R. 2, Box 27, Hartsell, Alabama, under date of April 2, 1904, which is exactly nine years ago. He says: "I take pleasure in informing you of what your Peruna has done for me after three years of suffering. I had tried the treatments of several doctors, also home remedies, but they failed and all hope had gone. My friends, like myself, thought I was in the last stages of consumption.



REV. G. W. ROBERTS, R. R. 2, Box 27, Hartsell, Ala.

"My daughter brought me a bottle of Peruna and plead with me to try it. I had got so weak I had lost my voice, and I thought it no use. That was in May, 1902. I began to take it, according to directions. I wrote to you, and you gave me your kind advice.

"I soon felt better, my cough began to give way, and the expectoration lessened. I have taken fourteen bottles. I feel well, eat hearty, sleep soundly, weigh as much as I ever did, do considerable work on my farm, and attend to my other business. My friends seem astonished at my recovery.

"I wish to thank you for your kind advice and the books you have sent me. I shall ever praise your medicine and hope that you may enjoy a long life."

It will be observed that Rev. Roberts waited two years after he began to use Peruna, before he wrote the above letter to The Peruna Co. So that his apparent recovery could not possibly have been temporary relief.

In a later letter to The Peruna Co., dated September 22, 1906, Rev. Roberts says: "I am a great friend of Peruna. By the use of Dr. Hartman's advice I am here to-day, able to be with my family and attend to my business."

We quote from another letter, dated December 10, 1906: "I praise Peruna to all the sick. The people know my case, and they praise it also."

In a letter dated November 22, 1909, we quote Rev. Roberts: "Peruna gave me back my life ten years ago. All my acquaintances know that. I am certainly thankful to you for your kindness."

In a later letter, dated January 13, 1910, he says: "I shall ever in the future, as in the past, be ready to speak in praise of Peruna to all sufferers. I believe my miraculous cure has been the means of many others being cured in this county."

From a letter of September 5, 1911, we quote a few words: "I am still among the living. As to Peruna, I do not feel that I have words to express the faith I have in its merits. I feel that Peruna has been the means, through the kind providence of God, of prolonging my life for more than ten years."

We quote a still later letter, October 31, 1912. He says: "I took a severe cold three weeks ago. I at once sent for Peruna. Have been taking it two weeks. I am now better. I consider that Peruna has carried me over a dozen years of life. I always stand ready to answer any question in reference to Peruna."

We quote from his last letter, dated January 2, 1913: "Dear Friends: I wish this bright New Years to express my thanks to you for your kindness. Trusting that you may have a successful and happy year, and that your medicine may prove a blessing to many as it has to me, I am yours as ever, G. W. Roberts, Hartsell, Alabama, R. F. D. 2, Box 27."

It is not necessary for us to add any words to this story. The eloquence and pathos of these letters are more convincing than arguments or affidavits. Who can doubt the clergyman's story? Who can doubt that Peruna saved his life?

Every home should be provided with the last edition of the "Ills of Life," sent free by the Peruna Co., Columbus, Ohio.

ELECTRIC LIGHT PROPOSITION CONSIDERED

Fourteen business men including representive men from the different places in town met at the office of Atty Rathbun Tuesday evening to consider the Electric Lighting proposition.

The meeting was for the purpose of getting the sentiment of the people in regard to the possibility of reaching a satisfactory compromise contract with the Tecumseh Electric Co. and at the same time such a contract as would satisfy the public without a municipal plant.

The meeting determined upon what they suppose would be such a contract. A committee of three was appointed to confer with the Electric Co. Tuesday morning the committee present the terms of the proposed contracted to the Electric Company and a reply is expected soon.

The principal difference now seems to be over the rate to be paid by private customers. The committee are asking for a rate of 9c per K. W. for the first 40 kilowatts instead of 10c per K. W. as proposed by the Electric Co

How to Detect the Alum Baking Powder

"Which are the alum baking powders; how can I avoid them unless they are named?" asks a housekeeper.

Here is one way: take the can of a low-priced powder in your hand and read the ingredient clause upon the back label. The law requires that if the powder contains alum that fact must be there stated. If you find one of the ingredients named alum, or sulphate of aluminum, you have found an alum baking powder.

There is another and a better way. You don't have to know the names of the alum powders. Use Royal Baking Powder only; that assures you a cream of tartar powder, and the purest and most healthful baking powder beyond question.

"BABY MINE"

Baby Mine was seen again in Tecumseh Tuesday night A fair house greeting the performance.

This play is surely an excellent remedy for the blues A farce comedy full of snappy dialogues and climax surprises.

Funny situations follow each other so rapidly that the laughs brought forth by one tread on the heels of the next, keeping the audience in a continual explosion of merriment and laughter all through the performance.

"BOUGHT AND PAID FOR"

"Bought and Paid For" is perhaps the biggest play George Broadhurst ever wrote. Certainly it has become the most popular. New York thought so much of it that Mr. Brady was able to keep it at the Playhouse long enough to score a record run of 476 performances. And during the hottest days of summer extra matinees were given from time to time. For several weeks ten performances were given from Monday to Saturday and the theatre was usually crowded to its capacity. It enjoyed a season of six months at the Princess Theatre, Chicago, and remained for a like period at the New Theatre in London, England.

The play impresses the spectators with the naturalness of its serious theme while sweeping them with prolonged gusts of laughter at its incisive humorous characterizations and episodes in the lighter passages.

Mr. Broadhurst has received generous credit for having created the character of Jimmy Gilley, the selfish and egotistical barnacle who fastens himself to his millionaire brother in law, and believes he is worth more than the $150 weekly salary he receives even after his employer smilingly assures him that when his value acturlly comes to $20 a week, his income will come to $200

"Bought and Paid For" will be at the Bradley Opera House next Tuesday night, Feb 24.

The company carry a complete car load of special scenery and effects It is another Brady success and can be counted on as having as good a cast and production as anything playing the Bradley this season

Mrs. Kate D. Richardson, of Beasley, Essex Co., Va., says, "I esteem it a pleasure to testify to the wonderful curative qualities of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. For some years I suffered greatly with weakness peculiar to my sex. I was treated by several physicians but gradually grew worse. One of my friends told me of the good results of your 'Favorite Prescription.' I went to the drug store and got a bottle, and after taking it, with the 'Pleasant Pellets,' I commenced to get better. I never knew what happiness was, for I was always sick and complaining and made others as well as myself unhappy. So you see what a debt I owe you!"

FINDS FOUR POLICE GUILTY OF KILLING

Convictions for Manslaughter in Copper Strike Cases.

HANCOCK, MICH. — The jury in the case of John Groff, James Cooper and Arthur Davis, Waddell-Mahon detectives, and Deputies James and Polkinghorne, charged with murder in the second degree in connection with the copper strike shooting, returned a verdict of manslaughter against all the defendants except James, who was declared not guilty by order of Judge Flannigan. Clemency was urged by the jury in the case of Polkinghorne.

The first three were given sentences of fifteen years each and Polkinghorne was sentenced to twelve years by the court.

The five were charged with killing two strikers on Aug. 14. Thomas Raleigh of New York, a sixth defendant, jumped $10,000 bail and escaped.

MICHIGAN MAN IS KIDNABBED

E. L. Mason, of Defunct Corunna Furniture Company, Accused of Fraud.

PONTIAC, MICH.—Edward L. Mason, the former vice president of the Fox and Mason Furniture factory at Corunna, which became insolvent a short time ago, was arrested by Undersheriff Green, at Lawrence, Kan. He is charged with having made false statements in writing to the Citizens bank at Holly, and securing a loan of $2,500 in July, 1912.

He was superintendent of the Corunna schools for years, and was regarded as one of the most brilliant writers and educators in the county. There have been rumors of irregularities with relation to his official connection with the defunct furniture company, whose accounts are in badly tangled condition.

Mrs. Lemble went to Jackson, staying at the Crawford house. Upon her arrival there she sent a special delivery letter to Hill in this city. The letter asks Hill to come to Jackson, Lemble asserts.

Hill returned home Friday, but went back to Jackson the following day. At that time Mrs. Crawford insisted upon the couple registering and this Mr. Hill did, as "Mr. and Mrs. Walter Lemble."

President Snyder has some strong friends on the state board of agriculture and if they make a fight in his behalf, it is believed that President Snyder's opponents will have some difficulty in bringing about his resignation.

stare. He was on the point of resenting it when the Englishman stepped forward. The American arose at once.

"I've been looking for you, Mr. Medcroft—if that is your name," said the stranger, halting in front of the table. "My name is Githens, Scotland Yard. These men have an order for your arrest. I'd advise you to go with them peaceably. The young woman will not be bothered. She is free to go."

"What are you talking about?" demanded Brock angrily. Suddenly he felt a chill of misgiving. What had Roxbury Medcroft been doing that he should be subject to arrest?

"You are masquerading here as Roxbury Medcroft, the architect. You are not Medcroft. I have watched you for weeks. Today we have learned that Medcroft is in London. Your linen is marked with a letter B. You've drawn money on a letter of credit together with a woman who signs herself as Edith F. Medcroft. There is something wrong with you, Mr. B., and these officers, acting for the hotel and the state bank, have been instructed to detain you pending an investigation."

Mr. Githens was vindicating himself. He may have been a trifle disconcerted by Miss Fowler's musical laugh and Brock's plain guffaw, but he managed to preserve a stiff dignity. "It's no laughing matter. Officers, this is your man. Take him in charge. Madam, as I understand it, you are the alleged sister of the woman who is working herself off as Mrs. Medcroft. It may interest you to know that your sister—if she is your sister—has locked herself in her room and was in hysterics when I left the hotel. She will be carefully guarded, however. She cannot escape. As for you, madam, there is as yet no complaint against you, but I wish to notify you that you may consider yourself under surveillance until after your friends have had a hearing before the magistrate tomorrow. As soon as it has ceased raining we will ask you to ride with us to the city. As for Mr. B., he is in charge of these officers."

"My name is Githens, Scotland Yard."

At 8 o'clock that evening a solemn cavalcade rode into Innsbruck. There were tears of expostulation in the eyes of the lone young woman, flashes of indignation in those of the tall young man who rode beside her.

The tall young man was going to jail!

CHAPTER XIII.

The City Prison.

THE anticlimax had struck the Hotel Tirol some hours before it came upon Brock and Miss Fowler. Mr. Githens demanded the person of the man calling himself Roxbury Medcroft. The principal bank in the city was also represented in the company of investigators. Likewise there was a laconic gentleman from the British office.

Mr. Medcroft was out. Then, they agreed, it was necessary to see Mrs. Medcroft, or the lady representing herself to be such. Mr. Githens was permitted to go to her rooms in company with the manager of the hotel. What transpired in those rooms during the next fifteen minutes would be quite impossible to narrate short of an entire volume. Edith promptly collapsed. Subsequently she became hysterical. She begged for time, and, getting it, proceeded to threaten every one with prosecution.

"I am Mrs. Medcroft!" she declared piteously. "Where is the American consul? I demand the American consul!"

"What has the American government to do with it?" gruffly demanded Mr. Githens.

"Mr.—Mr.—the gentleman whom you accuse is an American citizen!" she stammered.

"Oho! Then he is not an Englishman?"

"I refuse to answer your questions. You are impertinent. I ask you, sir, as the manager of this hotel, to eject this man from my rooms." The manager smiled blandly and did not eject the man.

"But, madam," he said, "we have a right to know who and what you are. If Mr. Medcroft is in London this gentleman surely cannot be he, the real Mr. Medcroft. We must have an explanation."

"I'll—I will explain everything tomorrow. Oh, by the way, is there a telegram for me in the office? There must be. I've been expecting it all day. I telegraphed to London for it."

"There is no telegram down there, madam."

At this juncture Mr. Odell-Carney appeared on the scene uninvited, but welcome.

"Wot's all this?" he demanded sternly. Everybody proceeded at once to tell him. Somehow he got the drift of the story. "Get out, all of you!" he said. "I stand sponsor for Mrs. Medcroft. She is Mrs. Medcroft, hang you, sir. If you come around here bothering her again I'll have the law upon you. The Medcrofts are English citizens and"—

"Oh, they are, are they?" sneered Mr. Githens, with a sinister chuckle. "Who the devil are you, sir?"

"I'm from Scotland Yard."

"I thought so. You've proved it, 'pon my soul. I am Odell-Carney. Daresay you're heard of me."

"I know you by sight, sir. But that"—

"Clever chap, by Jove! And there's no but about it. Mr.—Mr.—never mind what it is. I don't want to know your name. Mrs. Medcroft, will you permit me to send my wife up to you? Mr. Manager, I insist that you take this offended rabble down to the office and tell them to go to the devil; don't do it up here; do it down there."

After some further discussion and protests the Scotland Yard man and his party left the room to its distracted mistress. It may be well to remark for the sake of local color that Tootles was crying lustily, while Raggles barked in spite of all that O'Brien could do to stop him.

Odell-Carney sent his wife to Edith. A few minutes later, as he was making his way to the office, he came upon Mrs. Rodney and Katherine, hurrying, white faced, to their rooms.

"Oh, isn't it dreadful?" wailed the former, putting her clinched hands to her temples.

"Isn't wot dreadful?" demanded he brutally.

"About Edith! They're going to arrest her."

"Not if I can help it, madam. Where is Mr. Rodney?"

"He hasn't anything to do with it! We're as innocent as children unborn. It's all shocking to us. Mr. Rodney shouldn't be arrested. His rectitude is without a flaw. For heaven's sake, don't implicate him. He's"—

"Madam, I'm not a policeman," said Odell-Carney with scathing dignity. "I want your husband to aid me in hushing this confended thing."

He started away as Mr. Rodney came puffing up the stairs. Odell-Carney changed his mind and waited.

"Where's Edith?" panted Mr. Rodney.

"Good heavens!" groaned his wife, lowering her voice because three chambermaids were looking on from a nearby turn. "Don't mention that creature's name. Just think what she's got us into. He isn't her husband. Alfred, telephone for tickets on tonight's train. Tomorrow will be too late. I won't stay here another minute. Everybody in the hotel is talking. We'll all be arrested."

But Mr. Rodney, for once, was the head of the family. He faced her sternly.

"Go to your rooms, both of you. We'll stay here until this thing is ended. I don't give a hang what she's done. I'm not going to desert her."

"But—but he isn't her husband!" gasped Mrs. Rodney, struck dumb by this amazing rebellion.

"But she's your cousin, isn't she, madam?" he retorted with fierce irony.

"I disown her!" wailed his wife, sans raison.

"Go to your rooms!" stormed pudgy Mr. Rodney. Then, as they slunk away, he turned to the approving Odell-Carney, sticking out his chest a trifle in his new found authority. "I say, Carney, what's to be done next?"

"We'll have a drink first and then see," he said.

As they were entering the buffet a cheery voice accosted them from behind. Freddie Ulstervelt came up, real distress in his face.

"I say, count me in on this. I'll buy, if I may. I've just heard the news from the door porter. Beastly shame, isn't it? I had Mlle. Le Brun over to hear the band concert—she's related to that painter woman, by the way; I told Katherine she was. Say, gentlemen, we'll stand by Mrs. Medcroft, won't we? Count me in. If it's anything that money can square I'm here with a letter of credit six figures long."

"Join us," said Odell-Carney warmly. "You're a good sort, after all."

They sat down at a table. Freddie stood between them, a hand on the shoulder of each. Very seriously he was saying:

"I say, gentlemen, we can't abandon a woman at a time like this. We must stand together. All true sports and black sheep should stand together, don't you know."

It is possible that Odell-Carney appreciated the subtlety of this compliment. Not so Mr. Rodney.

"Sports? Black sheep? Upon my soul, sir, I don't understand you," he mumbled. Mr. Rodney, although he hailed from Seattle, had never known anything but a clean and unrumpled conscience.

Freddie clapped him jovially on the shoulder. "It's all right, Mr. Rodney. I'll take your word for it. But if we are black sheep we shan't be blackguards. We'll stand by the ship. What's to be done? Bail 'em out?"

Mrs. Medcroft despite Mrs. Odell-Carney's friendly offices refused point blank to discuss the situation. She did not dare to do or say anything as yet. Her husband had not telegraphed the word releasing her from the sorry compact. She loyally decided to stand by the agreement no matter what the cost until she received word from London that he had triumphed or failed in his brave fight against the "bloodsuckers."

"I will explain tomorrow, dear Mrs. Odell-Carney," she pleaded. "Don't press me now. Everything shall be all right. Oh, how I wish Constance were here! She understands. But she's off listening to silly love talk and doesn't even care what happens to me. Burton, will you be good enough to spank Tootles if she doesn't stop that screaming?"

By 9 o'clock that night every one was discussing the significant disappearance of Constance Fowler and the fraudulent husband of Mrs. Medcroft. Just as Mr. Odell-Carney was preparing to announce to the unfortunate wife that the couple had eloped in the most cowardly fashion, Miss Fowler herself appeared on the scene, disheveled, mud spattered and hot, but with a look of firm determination in her face. She burst in upon her sister, a very angry young person indeed.

"Are we alone?" demanded Miss Fowler, not giving Edith time to proclaim her joy at seeing her. "Well, I've arranged a way to get him out," she went on, her lips set.

"Out?" murmured Mrs. Medcroft.

"Of course. We can't let him stay in there all night, Edith. How much money have you? Hurry up, please! Don't stare!"

"In where? Who's in where?"

"He's in jail!" with supreme scorn. "Haven't you heard?"

Mrs. Medcroft began to cry. "Mr. Brock in jail? Good heavens, what

When You
BUILD

No material should be too good for you. We handle only the best; that's the reason we urge you to deal with us.

Don't Make A Mistake

We all make mistakes occasionally But the man who goes on making the same mistake continually is, to say the least, not a very wise man.

One of the easiest mistakes in the world to make is to buy inferior lumber at the same price that the very best would cost you. If you don't know that we are perfect cranks on quality, and that you can buy a much better grade of lumber here at the same price a lower grade material would cost you elsewhere, then you have something yet to learn.

But don't make the mistake of not investigating and getting our prices before you buy again.

STAHL WANTS TRIS TO GET MORE COIN

Thinks Speaker Most Valuable Man in Baseball.

Chicago, Feb. 23.—Jake Stahl, former manager of the Boston Red Sox, declared he was ready to sign a contract to manage the Brooklyn Federal league team. He said he had submitted his terms and although there had been a slight hitch over the contract, he expected it to go through.

He also answered Ban Johnson's attack in which the boss of the American league threatened to drive him out of baseball if he tampered with Tris Speaker of the Red Sox.

Referring to the cable from Paris which stated that he had cabled Speaker and other players not to sign until they reached America, Stahl admitted that he was actuated solely by friendship for Speaker and the others.

"I am of the opinion," he said, "that Speaker, Crawford, Doolan and Winge could do better financially with the new league. They are valuable men but so far have been underpaid. Speaker in my opinion is the most valuable man in baseball, but the Boston owners have never realized this. At any rate they have not paid him accordingly. I do not know whether Tris will sign with the Federal league but he will force Boston to show a lot of money to retain him."

LYONS HIT BY HURRICANE

Model City Exhibition Buildings Are Wrecked with Great Loss.

Paris, Feb. 23.—A hurricane struck the Lyons district and damaged the model city exhibition buildings to the extent of probably $200,000. The wind also demolished six hangars and machines in the military aerodrome at Brou.

$10,000 DEMANDED BY CATHOLIC BISHOP

Accuses Saloon Men of Inciting Church Riot.

South Bend, Ind., Feb. 23.—Damages of $10,000 were demanded by Bishop Herman J. Alerding of Fort Wayne, Ind., in a conspiracy suit filed in the circuit court against Frank Vitucki and George Kajzar, saloonkeepers.

This action is the result of recent trouble in St. Casmir's Polish Catholic church of this city, where Bishop Alerding is attempting to install Rev. Stanislaus Gruza as priest. Vitucki and Kajzar are accused of conspiring against the bishop, inciting St. Casimir members to riot.

The members charge that they allowed members of the church to congregate in their saloons on Sunday, where schemes were hatched to block the plans of the bishop.

SILK STOCKING BANDITS NAILED

One Is Killed and Other Confesses Many Holdups.

LIVED IN FASHIONABLE STYLE

Two Saginaw Brothers, 21 and 18 Years of Age, Did About All Auto Robberies in Detroit for Months—Elder Shot Dead in Third Holdup of Night.

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 23.—The careers of two brothers—silk stocking auto bandits—came to a sudden end at a late hour at night with the shooting and instantly killing of one, and the capture and confession of the younger boy.

The dead bandit was Alphouse D. Moore, twenty-one. His brother, Wesley, nineteen, is locked up in the police station.

One year ago they came here from Saginaw and have since been living in style in fashionable apartments.

Early Saturday evening, after stealing an automobile, they successfully held up two suburban stores and gathered in nearly $200 in cash, but at the third store, a small grocery, the elder brother was shot through the head by Groceryman Me[illegible] [illegible]port.

Confesses All Auto Crimes.

Wesley was captured a few hours after the killing of his brother and his confession includes practically all the auto bandit crimes in Detroit in the last few months, which have been numerous. From hints dropped it is thought the pair were involved in the killing of Patrolman Madden a few weeks ago.

TABOO ON "WEED" REMOVED

Dowie's Tobacco Dictum Is Dissolved by the Court.

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 23.—John Alexander Dowie's dictum against tobacco, which has been the law of the faithful in Zion City, Ill., was overthrown by the Illinois supreme court. The city ordinance of Zion City forbidding the use of tobacco in any form within the city limits was declared unconstitutional.

Attempts to enforce the ordinance have kept Zion City in the throes of intermittent rioting for several years. Frequent clashes between the factions led finally to an appeal to the courts.

Washington, Feb. 23.—"I am not a candidate for the senatorial nomination and it is wholly unlikely that I will become one," said Governor Edward F. Dunne when asked if he would oppose Roger Sullivan for the Democratic senatorial nomination.

Governor Dunne admitted the senatorial situation had been discussed in conferences including one with Secretary of State Bryan, but said the suggestion of his candidacy had not been mentioned.

Philadelphia, Feb. 23.—Joseph Fels, millionaire single tax advocate and social worker, died at his home here. Death was due to pneumonia which succeeded an attack of neuritis.

Marie Lloyd Weds Jockey.

Portland, Ore., Feb. 23.—Matilda Hurley, an English actress, known as Marie Lloyd, was married here to Bernard Dillon, a jockey.

Sitting Cross Legged.

Fully 80 per cent of the men and women who travel in the trains and street cars sit cross legged, and this habit is responsible for many ills, according to a prominent London physician. The prime objection against this habit, he says, is that the return flow of blood from the leg is stopped at the knee, the result being that the veins in the leg swell up. All the weight is thrown on one side of the body, and the under leg goes to sleep owing to the pressure put on the sciatic nerve. The body should be equally balanced. Then there is another danger. Too much crossing of the legs is sure to bring lopsidedness. Let the legs rest limply. In that way the muscles become eased, while the flow into and the return of blood from the legs is naturally done and the body is equally balanced.

WINTERS CHILD IS IN ARKANSAS

Newcastle, Ind., Girl Is Found with Her Kidnaper.

IDENTITY IS ACKNOWLEDGED

Dressed in Boy's Clothes She Is Taken with 50-Year-Old Man Near Huntsville, Ark.—Man Claims He Was Husband of Dr. Winter's First Wife.

Huntsville, Ark., Feb. 23.—Catherine Winters, ten years old, daughter of Dr. W. A. Winters of Newcastle, Ind., who disappeared last March 20 and who has since been the object of a nation-wide search, has been found, it is said.

The child was located at a farmhouse, three miles east of Huntsville by a posse. She was in the custody of a man who gives the name of George Stuart. The man is sixty year sold. He confessed the child's identity, but has not said why he kidnaped her.

Sheriff M. H. Shuster of Huntsville says there is no doubt as to the child's identity. The child herself says. "I'm Catherine Winters and I was carried away from Indiana in an automobile."

Stuart and the girl arrived at Huntsville last Tuesday. Suspicion was aroused when the child was seen in boy's attire, then a day later dressed as a girl. Photographs of Catherine Winters were obtained and the sheriff became convinced that the child was Dr. Winters' daughter, despite the fact that her hair had been cut close like a boy's.

Stuart was followed to a farm house where he had taken lodging with the child. The sheriff and eleven men then went to the place and arrested Stuart. He is in jail here. Stuart says he married Dr. Winter's divorced wife.

Father Leaves for South.

Newcastle, Ind., Feb. 23.—Following receipt of the news that a man had been arrested in Huntsville, Ark., and had confessed to having stolen his daughter Catherine, missing since March 1, last, Dr. W. A. Winters, father of the child, left for Ft. Smith, Ark., where he has telegraphed to have the girl waiting for him.

Dr. Winters received word from Sheriff Shuster of Huntsville of the finding of the girl.

Dr. Winters said that the present clew is the best he has yet received and that he was confident that the girl in possession of Sheriff Shuster is his daughter.

Has Searched Long.

Dr. Winters has traveled country-wide in search of his daughter since her disappearance, and has spent the savings of his lifetime, $6,000, in what has heretofore been a vain hunt. Frequent reports have reached him of the locating of the child, but in each instance the journey to bring her back has ended in heart-breaking failure. He has been wired positive assurance that Katherine is found.

VILLA 'QUEERED' BY BENTON CASE

Constitutionalist Cause Is Given Setback by Slaying.

TURNING POINT IN PROBLEM

No Serious Consequences for United States Are Expected—No Information Has Been Received Concerning Others Believed "Put Away"—Bauch Is Still Unaccounted For.

Washington, Feb. 23.—That the Benton case may prove to be the turning point in the attitude of the United States toward the Mexican problem is the opinion expressed in many quarters here. It is now admitted even by high officials that it is impossible to conceive of the United States government supporting such a man as General Villa in the presidency or other high place in Mexico and that the whole constitutionalist cause has suffered a severe set back as a result of Villa's conduct.

There is no expectation discernible in official quarters that out of the Benton case will come any serious consequences for the United States. The belief is growing that Villa's story will be accepted as approximately the truth and that there will be therefore no pressure brought to bear on the United States to the extent of forcing it to take drastic action in Mexico.

No Information Concerning Others.

The state department has no information whatever concerning the two Englishmen Lawrence and Curtis of whom friends in El Paso say that since they went to Juarez last week they have not been seen and that they believe the two men have been executed by Villa. The British embassy has not requested the state department to make any inquiry regarding the two. According to unofficial reports from the border the reports that the men have been executed are not receiving full credence even in El Paso.

A report that Gustav Bauch, the German-American, who when last seen, was held a prisoner by Villa in Juarez, has been transferred to a prison in Chihuahua has been forwarded to the state department by Consul Edwards. This report was received in response to an inquiry from the department of state. The consul's information, however, is based on what was told him by officers whom Villa left in charge in Juarez and in view of the concealment of Benton's fate for three days officials here are not wholly convinced that the statements of Villa's subordinates can be implicitly relied upon.

Didn't See Bauch.

Unofficial reports from El Paso say that persons who saw Villa and his party en route from the south on Friday declare that Bauch was not among those who made the trip.

Rats as Food.

Rats form a favorite dish in China. Split open, dried, pressed and powdered with a finely ground white bark, they look somewhat like haddocks as they hang in long strings over butchers' stalls. Dr. Arthur Stradling once declared that "rats would be not only wholesome, but very nice, if properly prepared—not common sewer rats, but such as I ate, barn fed animals snared in a hop garden. The flesh, though perfectly white, was dry and tasteless. But then they were only skinned, cleaned and submitted to the fire without any of the et ceteras which make other meats savory. Admiral Beaufort and other arctic explorers speak highly of rats as a wholesome addition to their supply of food in those dreary latitudes."—Chicago News.

VAGRANT INVITATION STRONGLY OPPOSED

Charity Commissioner Opposes Further N. Y. Publicity.

New York, Feb. 23.—Offers to open churches and armories to shelter the homeless poor and unemployed have brought from Commissioner of Charities Kingsbury a protest that there is danger in making a bad situation worse.

"I think it would be unwise to throw open temporary shelters until actually needed," says Mr. Kingsbury. "Already the publicity given to New York's hospitality has flooded our city with vagrants and mendicants who always capitalize a situation of this kind.

"I have suggested to the police commissioner a special detail of men to arrest imposters. I understand Mr. McKay is considering it."

JOY RIDERS HIT STREET CAR

Three Men Fatally Injured and Five More Under Arrest.

Philadelphia, Feb. 23.—Three men are lying in the Womans Homeopathic hospital and five more are under arrest following an automobile crash at Twenty-ninth street and Montgomery avenue. The dying men are: John Beck, twenty-five years old; Martin Flynn, thirty-one; Paul Mansock, twenty-nine. The hospital physicians say there is no hope for the recovery of the injured men.

The accident occurred shortly before 10 o'clock in the morning. The car which belonged to Gus Strobeck, of Atlantic City, young Beck's uncle, had been taken from its garage by the latter contrary to his father's orders. The car skidded into a street car, injuring five persons on the car.

RETRIAL FOR PFANSCHMIDT

Man Convicted of Murdering Four Gets Case Reversed.

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 23.—Ray Pfanschmidt, convicted in the Adams county circuit court of a quadruple murder, won in the supreme tribunal of the the state when the lower court's finding was reversed on a writ of error. Pfanschmidt will have a new trial. One of the points which won a new trial for the defendant was the decision by the upper court that the conclusions of bloodhounds were too unreliable to be accepted as evidence.

In its order sending the case back for a new trial the supreme court directed that a motion for a change of venue from Adams county be granted.

COUPLE WED AFTER 40 YEARS

Courtship Begun in Childhood Finally Results in Marriage.

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 23.—A romance of more than forty years had its culmination here when Mrs. Fanny Nichols, aged fifty-two, and Andrew Brooks, aged fifty-eight, were married.

The couple were sweethearts in childhood, when both lived on adjoining farms in the Ozarks, twelve miles west of here. They will reside on a ranch near Strafford.

TO SERVE TERM FOR ARSON

Conviction of Two Men for Peoria Hotel Fire Sustained.

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 23.—Samuel F. Darr of Quincy and Harvey A. Six of Springfield must serve three years each for burning the Aldine hotel at Peoria.

They were convicted in Peoria. The supreme court sustained the appellate court, which affirmed the Peoria court's conviction.

"Edith Medcroft, stop sniffling and don't think of yourself for awhile. It will do you a great deal of good. Where's your money?"

"I have a little over 4,000 crowns," Edith murmured helplessly.

"Give it me quick. There's no time to waste. I have about 5,000. It's all in notes, thank heaven. It isn't quite enough, but I'll try to make it do. Don't stop me, Edith. I haven't time to answer questions. He's in jail, didn't you hear me say? And I love him."

"But the—the money. Is it to bail him out with?"

"Bail? No, my dear, it's to buy him out with. Sh! Is there any one in that room? Well, then I'll tell you something." The heads of the two sisters were quite close together. "He's in a cell at the—the prison hof, or whatever you call it in German. It's jail in English. I have arranged to bribe one of the jailers—his guard. He will let him escape for 10,000 crowns. We must do it, Edith. Then Mr. Brock will ride over the Brenner pass and catch a train somewhere before his escape is discovered. I expect to meet him in Paris day after tomorrow. Have you heard from Roxbury?"

"No!" wailed Roxbury's wife.

"He's a brute!" stormed Miss Fowler.

"Constance!" flared Mrs. Medcroft, aghast at this sign of lese majesty.

"Don't tell anybody," called Constance as she banged the door behind her.

Soon after midnight a closely veiled lady drove up to a street corner adjacent to the city prison, a dolorous looking building which loomed up still and menacing just ahead. She alighted and, dismissing the cab, strode off quickly into the side street. At a distant corner, in front of a crowded eating house, two spirited horses, saddled and in charge of a grumbling stable boy, champed noisily at their bits. The young woman exchanged a few rapid sentences with the boy and then returned in the direction from which she came. A man stepped out of a doorway as she neared the corner, accosting her with a stealthy deference that proclaimed him to be anything but an unwelcome marauder.

After eager pleading on one side and stolid expostulation on the other, a small package passed from the hand of the young woman into the huge paw of the man. The latter gave her a quick, cautious salute and hurried back toward the jail.

The veiled young woman, very nervous and strangely agitated, made her way back to the spot where the horses were standing. Making her way through the cluster of small tables which lined the inner side of the sidewalk she found one unoccupied at the extreme end, a position which commanded a view of the street down which she had just come.

Half past 1; then 2 o'clock. The merrymakers were thinning out; she was quite alone at her end of the place. By this time a close observer might have noticed that she was trembling violently; there was an air of abject fear and despair in her manner.

Why did he not come? What had happened? Had the plot failed? Was he even now lying wounded unto death as the result of his effort to escape captivity? A hundred horrid thoughts raced through her throbbing, overwrought brain. He should have been with her two hours ago—he should now be far on his way to freedom. Alas, something appalling had happened, she was sure of it!

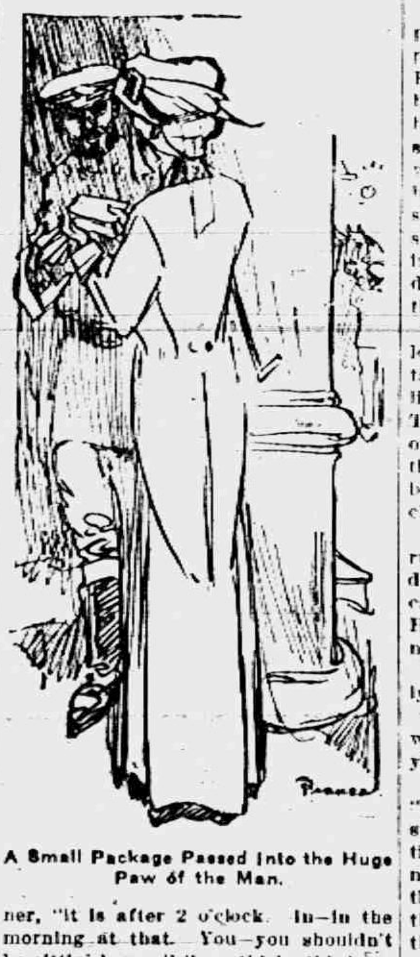
At last there hove in sight, coming from the direction in which lay the prison, a group of three men. It was a jaunty party, evidently under the influence of many libations.

They bore down upon her. The next instant they were solemnly shaking hands with her, much to her dismay.

"Cons'ance, we've been lookin' f-fer you ever'where in town. W-where on earth 've you been?" asked Mr. Rodney thickly, with a laudable attempt at severity.

"Ever sinch 'leven o'clock, Conshance," supplemented Freddie, trying to frown.

"My dear Miss F-Fowler," began Odell-Carney in his most suave manner, "it is after 2 o'clock. In—in the morning at that. You—you shouldn't be sittin' here all 'lone thish—this hour in the morning. Please come home with us. Your mother hash—has ask us to fetch you—I mean your sister. Beg pardon."



A Small Package Passed Into the Huge Paw of the Man.

"I—I cannot go, gentlemen," she stammered. "Please don't insist—please don't ask why. I cannot go"—

"I shay, Conshance, by Jove, tha joke's on you," exclaimed Freddie. "I know who 't ish you're waitin' f-for. Well, he can't come. He's locked in."

"Freddie, you are drunk!" in deep scorn.

"I know it," he admitted cheerfully. "We've looked ever'where for you. We're your frien's. He said it was at 'n eatin' house. We've been ever' eatin' house in Inchbrook. Was here first of all. Leave it to Rodney. Wassen we, Rodney? You bet we was. You wassen here at 'leven o'clock. Come on home, Conshance. 'S all right. He's safe. He can't come."

"But he will come, unless something terrible has happened to him," she almost sobbed in her desperation. "Cousin Alfred, won't you go to the jail and see what has happened?"

"Permit me," interrupted Odell-Carney with grave dignity. "Your friend, Miss Fowler, is not in jail. He is out."

"Not in jail!" she almost shrieked. "I knew it! I knew it could not go wrong. But where is he?"

"He's out on bail. We bailed him out at half past 10— Wot!" She had leaped to her feet with a short scream and was clutching his arm frantically.

"On bail? At half past 10? Good heavens, then—then—oh, are you sure?"

"Poshitive, abs'lutely."

"Then what has become of my 9,000 crowns?"

"You c'n search me, Conshance," murmured Freddie.

"I don' know what you're talkin' 'bout, Cons'ance," said Mr. Rodney in a very hurt tone. "We—we put up security fr five thous'n' dollars, that's what we did. This is all the thanks we getsh for it. Ungrachful!"

Constance had been thinking very hard, paying no heed to his maudlin defense. It rapidly was dawning upon her that these men had secured her lover's release on bail at half past 10 o'clock, an hour and a half before she had given her bribe of 9,000 crowns to the jailer. That being the case, it was becoming clear to her that the wretch deliberately had taken the money knowing that Brock was not in the prison and with the plain design to rob her of the amount. It was a transaction in which he could be perfectly secure; bribing of public officials is a solemn offense in Austria and Germany. She could have no recourse, could make no complaint. Her money was gone!

"Where is Mr. Br—Mr. Medcroft?" she demanded, her voice full of anxiety. "If he were out of jail why had he failed to come to the meeting place?"

"He's locked in," persisted Freddie.

"That's just it, Miss Fowler," explained Odell-Carney glibly. "You shee—see, it was this way: We got him out on bail on condition he'd 'pear tomorrow morning 'fore the magistrate. After we'd got him out he insisted on coming 'round here so's he could run away with you. That wassen a gen'lmanly thing to do after we'd put up our money. We couldn't afford have him runnin' away with you. So we had him locked in a room on top floor of the hotel, where he can't get out 'n' leave us to hold the bag, don't you see. He almos' cried an' said you'd be waitin' at the church or—or something like that baily song, don't you know, an' as a last resort, to keep him quiet like a good ferrer—feller, we said we'd come an' get you an' 'splain everything saffis—sasfac—ahem!—sassisfac'rly."

She looked at them with burning eyes. Slow rage was coming to the flaming point. And for this she had sat and suffered for hours in a street restaurant! For this! Her eyes fell upon the limp horses and the dejected stable boy. Two hours!

"You will release him at once!" she stormed. "Do you hear? It is outrageous!"

Without another word to the dazed trio she rushed to the curb and commanded the boy to assist her into the saddle. He did so, in stupid amazement. Then she instructed him to mount and follow her to the Tirol as fast as he could ride. The horses were tearing off in the darkness a moment later.

CHAPTER XIV.

The Prodigal Husband.

THE unlucky Brock, wild with rage and chagrin, had paced his temporary prison in the top story of the Tirol from 11 o'clock till 2, bitterly cursing the fools who were keeping him in durance more vile than that from which they had generously released him. He realized that it would be unwise to create a disturbance in the house by clamoring for freedom, because, in the first place, there already had been scandal enough, and, in the second place, his distrustful bondsmen had promised faithfully to seek out the devoted Connie and apprise her of his release. He had no thought, of course, that in the meantime she might be duped into paying a bribe to the guard.

Not only was he direfully cursing the trio, but also the addlepated Medcroft and his own addlepated self. It is to be feared that he had harsh thoughts of all the Medcrofts, as far down as Raggles. His dream of love and happiness had turned into a nightmare; the comedy had become a tragic snarl of all the effects known to melodrama.

It occurred to him at 2 o'clock that pacing the floor in the agony of suspense was a very useless occupation. He would go to bed. Morning would bring relief and surcease to his troubled mind. Constance was doubtless sound asleep in her room. Everything would have been explained to her long before this hour. She would understand. So, with the return of his old sophistry, he undressed and crawled into the strange bed. Somehow he did not like it as well as the cot in the balcony below.

Just as he was dropping off into the long delayed slumber, he heard a light tapping at his door. He sat up in bed like a flash, thoroughly wide awake. The rapping was repeated. He called out in cautious tones, asking who was there, at the same time slipping from bed to fumble in the darkness for his clothes.

"'Sh!" came from the hallway. He rushed over and put his ear to the door. "It is I. Are you awake? I can't stay here. It's wrong. Listen. Here's a note—under the door. Good night, darling! I'm heartbroken."

"Thank God, it's you!" he cried softly. "How I love you, Constance!"

"'Sh! Edith is with me! Oh, I wish it were morning and I could see you. I have so much to say."

Another querulous voice broke in: "For heaven's sake, Connie, don't stand here any longer. Our reputations are bad enough as it is. Good night—Roxbury!" He distinctly heard the heartless Edith giggle. Then came the soft, quick swish of garments and the nocturnal visitors were gone. He picked up the envelope and, waiting until they were safely down the hall, turned on the light.

"Dearest," he read, "It was not my fault and I know it was not yours. But, oh, you don't know how I suffered all through those hours of waiting at the cafe. They did not find me un-

ELECTRIC LIGHT QUESTION SETTLED

Saturday the Tecumseh Electric Co. announced their willingness to make a new contact with the Village of Tecumseh giving private consumers a 9c rate for the first 10 k.w. This clause in the contract being the principal difference between the Company and the Citizens.

This being acceptable to the committee representing the citizens, a canvass was make to ascertain the feeling of the signers to the petition asking for a municipal plant. With only a few exceptions the signer expressed a willingness to withdraw their names from the petition.

At the adjourned meeting of the Council held Saturday evening the new contract was presented by the Tecumseh Electric Co. and passed unanimously.

By the terms of the new contract the Electric Co. are to replace all street arc lamps with mazdas and give to the private consumer a rate of 9c per k.w. for the first 10 k.w. The contract runs six years.

DOUBLE BEREAVEMENT

Tuesday evening of last week Miss Loana Stacy received a telegram telling of the death of her cousin Mrs. Wm. Wooden of Battle Creek. Mrs. Wooden, better known to her Tecumseh friends as Minnie Hopkins, spent her girlhood days in Tecumseh, and while her sister Mrs. Franc Stout was living, was a frequent visitor here, and had many friends who will mourn her passing away. A private funeral was held at the home Thursday as Mr. Wooden's mother was very ill with no hope of recovery. On Saturday the word came to Tecumseh that she too had passed away leaving Mr. Wooden bereft of both wife and mother in one short week.

The remains of Mrs. Joseph Wooden were brought to Tecumseh for burial on Sunday morning and laid to rest in the family lot in Brookside cemetery. Mrs. Joseph Wooden will be remembered by a host of friends in Tecumseh, where she lived previous to the removal of the family to Battle Creek.

Late Trial For Witchcraft.

A trial for witchcraft and sorcery occurred in England in 1881. This was the trial of the Fletchers, who were famous clairvoyants, crystal gazers and mesmerists, who gave seances to which the whole fashionable world flocked. They induced a Mrs. Hart Davis to give them jewelry and lace to the value of £10,000 and when proceedings were taken against them fled to America. The husband managed to escape arrest, but Mrs. Fletcher was brought back to England, indicted under the old statute of witchcraft and sorcery and sentenced to twelve months' imprisonment with hard labor.—London Spectator.

Why There Are Bachelors.

It has been computed that our planet is peopled by about 1,700,000,000 living members of the human species and that this very respectable total includes some 5,500,000 more men than women. Supposing all women to be married or assured of marrying, this disproportion signifies 5,500,000 men who are bachelors willy nilly without considering the few who may have had bachelorhood thrust upon them by the unresponsive ladies of their choice.—New York Times.

Farm Worth Your Consideration

Do You Want to Farm on a Large Scale?—Here's Your Proposition.

A 262 acre farm for sale at $75.00 per acre. This farm is located in Lenawee county, Raisin township, Michigan, 1 mile from Holloway, a shipping station on the great Wabash railroad. Has a clear title. The above farm has fair buildings and plenty of them. Very good, large house. Good for hay and all kinds of grain. Excellent for stock, having two small streams fed by living springs that never run dry, and which water nearly every field on the farm. Twenty acres of heavy timber; 20 acres of second growth timber. Not five acres of waste land on the place. Two hundred acres under the plow. The soil is loam, gravel and sand top, clay bottom. Timber is principally white oak, beech, maple, hickory, walnut, whitewood, white ash, elm, etc. Can sit on front porch of house and see all Wabash trains sixty rods distant. A fine sight. Still the farm is all on one side of the railroad. For further particulars address

Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets

are, we honestly believe, the best remedy made for Indigestion, Dyspepsia and all other Stomach Ills

We Know They're Good

Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets, in addition to other ingredients, contain Pepsin and Bismuth, two great digestive aids used by the entire medical profession. They soothe the inflamed stomach, check the heartburn and distress, stimulate a healthy secretion of the gastric juice, aid in rapid and comfortable digestion of the food and help to quickly convert it into rich red blood, and thereby into flesh, bone and muscle. They relieve stomach distress promptly, and, used regularly for a short time, tend to restore the stomach to a comfortable, easy-acting, healthy state. They aid greatly to promote regular bowel action.

Delays Are Dangerous

Don't neglect Indigestion, for it frequently leads to all sorts of ills and complications. The pain and discomfort is not the most unfortunate part. The fact that when the stomach is not acting right, the material needed to repair the wastes that are constantly taking place in the body is not being given to the blood either in the proper condition or fast enough is far more serious. Nothing will cause more trouble than an unhealthy stomach. The blues, debility, lack of strength and energy, constipation, biliousness, headaches and scores of other serious ailments result from the failure of the stomach to properly do its work.

You Risk No Money

Our willingness to have you use Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets entirely at our risk proves our faith in them. We always sell them this way, and it is because we know that they have greatly benefited scores of sufferers to whom we have sold them. There's no red tape about our guarantee. It means just what it says. We'll ask you no questions. You needn't sign anything. Your word is enough for us. We know that when they help you you will consider it money well spent even if they had cost you ten times as much. If they don't help you, the money you paid for them is yours, and we want you to have it.

Sold only at the more than 7,000 Rexall Stores—the World's Greatest Drug Stores. In convenient boxes—three sizes: 25c, 50c, $1.00

CITIZENS MEETING AT COUNCIL CHAMBERS

Citizens and Electric Light People Discuss Their Differences

The Council Chambers were filled Friday evening with citizens called together to meet the Tecumseh Electric Co. for the purpose of discussing and arriving at a possible solution of the Electric Light question.

The meeting was called to order by Atty. Rathbun. On motion John Nyland was made chairman. Chairman Nyland stated the object of the meeting and briefly stated that the committee of three appointed at the citizens meeting held at the office of Atty Rathbun last Tuesday evening had waited on the Electric Co. submitting the compromise proposition and in reply the Electric Co. after considering the matter had asked the privilege of meeting the citizens that they might discuss the points at issue

The contract submitted to the Council by the Electric Co. a few weeks ago was read Mr. Schneider and George Church represented the Electric Co. Mr. Schneider read a communication addressed to the committee of three refusing to allow the 9c rate for the first forty k. w. asked, stated the reasons for not doing so and compared the service in Tecumseh with Clinton, Manchester and Adrian.

The meeting then took up a general discussion of the question. The municipal plant at Marshall was sited as a big money making proposition for that place. After going over the matter and a discussion "pro and con" the meeting adjourned coming no nearer the solution of the disputed point than before.

MURPHY SELLS THE CUBS

Charles P. Taft Has Now Acquired Complete Control of Club.

Chicago, Feb. 23.—Charles Webb Murphy is out of baseball. He has sold his stock in the Chicago National league club (the Cubs) and has resigned as president and director of that organization. His holdings in the Chicago club have been purchased by Charles P. Taft. The manner in which John J. Evers was "bounced" as manager of the team stirred up an unprecedented flood of criticism, which recalled Murphy's earlier action in getting rid of Frank Chance, and there arose a general demand that Murphy get out of the game.

Murphy made the following statement: "I sold out at 7 o'clock over the long distance telephone. Mr. Taft offered me more money for my 53 per cent of Cubs stock than I ever thought was in the world. I accepted without quibbling. I am through with baseball and its controversies and squabbles. I'm the happiest man in the world tonight."

Tax Law Amendment May Prevent Levy on $900,000,000.

Cleveland, Feb. 23.—Tax Commissioners Fackler and Agnew, who have been trying to list $900,000,000 of John D. The tax commissioners will urge Governor Cox to hurry home from Florida, where he has gone on a vacation, and veto the amended tax law.

Some women are weak because of ills that are common

In Girlhood—Womanhood and Motherhood

The prescription which Dr. R. V. Pierce uses most successfully—in diseases of women—which has stood the test of nearly half a century—is

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription

Take this in liquid or tablet form as a tonic and regulator!

Mrs. Kate D. Richardson, of Beazley, Essex Co., Va., says, "I esteem it a pleasure to testify to the wonderful curative qualities of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. For some years I suffered greatly with weakness peculiar to my sex. I was treated by several physicians but gradually grew worse. One of my friends told me of the good results of your 'Favorite Prescription.' I went to the drug store and got a bottle, and after taking it, with the 'Pleasant Pellets,' I commenced to get better. I never knew what happiness was, for I was always sick and complaining and made others as well as myself unhappy. So you see what a debt I owe you!"

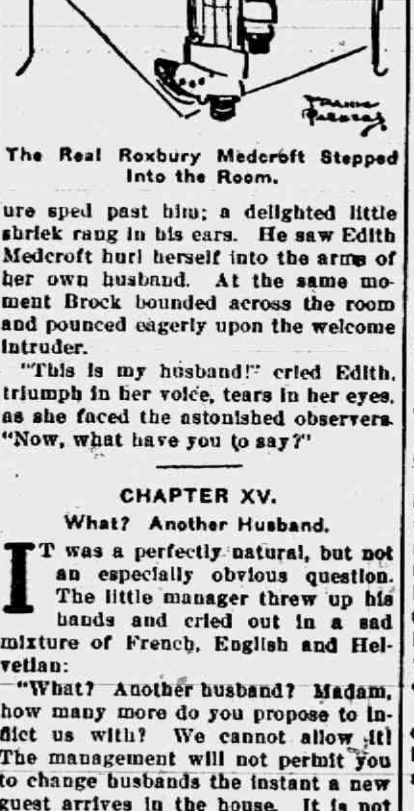
or after 2. They were drunk. They tried to explain. What do you think the authorities will do to me if they find that I gave that horrid man bribe money? Really, I'm terribly nervous. But he won't dare say anything, will he? He is as guilty as I, for he took it. He took it knowing that you were free at the time. But we will talk it over tomorrow. I've just got back to the hotel. I wouldn't go to bed until Edith brought me up to hear your dear voice. I am so glad you are not dead. It is impossible to release you tonight. Those wretches have the key. How I loathe them! Edith says the hotel is wild with gossip about everything and everybody. It's just awful. Be of good heart, my beloved. I will be your grabbed the telegrams from the manager's hand. "Holy mackerel! Give 'em here!" he shouted. Two eager, beautiful young women were hanging to his elbows as he ruthlessly broke one of the seals. "The chump! It's from Rox! They're all from Rox—and they are two or three days old!"

Just then the unexpected happened. The office door opened with a bang, and the real Roxbury Medcroft stepped into the room. He halted just inside the door and looked about in momentary bewilderment.

"This is a private"— began the manager, stepping forward. A flying figure sped past him; a delighted little shriek rang in his ears. He saw Edith Medcroft hurl herself into the arms of her own husband. At the same moment Brock bounded across the room and pounced eagerly upon the welcome intruder.



The Real Roxbury Medcroft Stepped Into the Room.

"This is my husband!" cried Edith, triumph in her voice, tears in her eyes, as she faced the astonished observers. "Now, what have you to say?"

CHAPTER XV.

What? Another Husband.

IT was a perfectly natural, but not an especially obvious question. The little manager threw up his hands and cried out in a sad mixture of French, English and Helvetian:

"What? Another husband? Madam, how many more do you propose to inflict us with? We cannot allow it! The management will not permit you to change husbands the instant a new guest arrives in the house. It is not to be heard of—no, no!"

"Are you afraid that the books won't balance?" asked Brock, with a joyous grin, a great load off his heart. "Ladies and gentlemen, permit me to introduce Mr. Roxbury Medcroft, my friend and fellow conspirator. He is the husband of this lady, not I. I am to be the husband of this lady, thank God!"

There was a moment of absolute silence—it may have been stupor. The two audiences faced each other with emotions widely at variance. It was Mrs. Rodney who spoke first.

"Is this true, Edith?" she quavered.

"Yes, yes, yes!" cried Edith, her eyes dancing.

"Then, what are you doing here with a man who isn't your husband?" demanded Mrs. Rodney, suddenly aflame.

"I can explain everything to you later on, Mrs. Rodney," interposed Mrs. Odell-Carney calmly. She had divined at least a portion of the truth, and she was clever enough to put herself on the right side. Edith cast an involuntary look of surprise at the Englishwoman. "I have known everything from the first. Mrs. Medcroft and I are closer friends than you may have thought." She gave Edith a meaning look and a moment later was whispering to her in a private corner of the private office: "My dear, I don't know what it means, but you must tell me everything as soon as possible. I am your friend. Whatever it all is, it's ripping!"

Medcroft finally waved every one aside in the most degage manner imaginable.

"Don't crowd me! Hang it all, I'm not a curiosity. There isn't anything to go crazy about. My friend, Mr. Brock, has just done me a trifling favor. That's all. The whole story will be in the London papers this morning. Buy 'em. I'm going up to my wife's room to see my baby. I'll come down and explain everything when I've had a bit of a breathing spell. It's annoying to have had this fuss about a simple little matter of generosity on the part of my friend, who, I've no doubt, has been a most exemplary husband. I'll see to it, by Gad, that he receives the proper apologies. And, for that matter, my wife may have something to say about the outrage that has been perpetrated."

"When did you arrive, old man?"

"Last night on the 12:10. I registered as Smith. It was so late that I decided not to disturb Edith. They said in the office that you'd gone to bed, Brock. Now that I recall it, they said it in a very odd way too. In fact, one of the clerks asked if I had it in for you too."

"You were here all night?" murmured Constance in plaintive misery.

"Well, not precisely all night, Connie. Half of it," replied Roxbury.

"Faithful slave until death. With love and adoration and kisses. Your own Constance.

"P. S. Roxbury has not made a sign. Edith is frantic."

Several floors below the relieved and ecstatic Brock, Mrs. Medcroft was soon urging her sister to go to bed and let the story go until daylight. She persisted in telling all that she had done and all that she had endured.

"We must never let him know that we actually gave that wretch nearly $2,500, Edith. He would never forgive us. I admit that I was a fool and a ninny, so don't tell me I am. I can see by the way you are looking that you're just crazy to. It's all Roxbury's fault, anyway. Why should he get up and make a speech in London without letting us know? Just see how it has placed us! I think Mr. Brock is an angel to do what he has done for you and Roxbury. Yes, my dear, you will have to confess that Roxbury is a brute—a perfect brute. I'm sure, if you have a spark of fairness in you, you must hate him. No, no! Don't say anything, Edith. You know I'm right."

"I'm not going to say anything," declared Edith angrily. "I'm going to bed."

"Edith, if you don't mind, dear, I think I'll sleep with you." After a moment of deep reflection she added plaintively: "There is so much that I just have to tell you, deary. It—it won't keep till daylight."

Bright and early in the morning the tired, harassed night farers were routed from their rooms by a demand from the management of the hotel that they appear forthwith in the private office. This order included every member of Mr. Rodney's party, excepting the Medcroft baby. Considerably distressed and very much concerned over the probable outcome of the conference, the Rodney forces made their way to the offices—not altogether in an open fashion, but by humiliatingly unusual avenues. The Rodney family came down the back stairs. Brock was solemnly ushered through the public office by Mr. Odell-Carney and Freddie Ulstervelt. It is not stretching the truth to say that they were sour and sullen, but, as may be suspected, from peculiarly different causes. At last all were congregated in the stuffy office, very much subdued and very much at odds with each other. Mr. Githens was there. Likewise the gentleman from the bank and a prominent person from the department of police.

Miss Fowler glanced about uneasily and was relieved to discover that her treacherous jailer was not there to confront her with charges. It had occurred to her that he might, after all, have tricked her into committing a crime against the government.

It was quite noticeable that Mrs. Rodney and Katherine did not speak to the Medcroft contingent—in fact, they ignored them quite completely. Mrs. Rodney was very pale and very deeply distressed. She cast many glances at the red eyed and sheepish Mr. Rodney—glances that meant much to the further torture of his soul.

"I am sorry to inform you, Herr Rodney, that the rooms which you now occupy and those of your friends are no longer at your disposal. They have been engaged for from some time this day by a"—

"Look here," interrupted Odell-Carney bluntly, "if you mean that we are not wanted here any longer, why not say so? Don't lie about it. We are leaving today, in any event, so wot's the odds? Now, come down to facts. Why are we summoned here like a crowd of school children?"

The manager looked at Mr. Githens and then at the police officer.

"Ahem! It seems that Herr Grabbeta of the police department desires to ask some questions of your party in my presence. You will understand, sir, that the hotel has been imposed upon by—by these people. It seems, also, that the bank insists upon having some light thrown upon the methods by which Mrs. Medcroft secures money on her letter of credit."

"You are welcome to all that, sir," declared Mr. Odell-Carney, "but I am interested to know just why my wife and I are brought into this affair."

"Because you are guests of Mr. Rodney, sir, I regret to state. We have no complaint against you, sir. You are well known here. The—the others are not. They are—what you call it? Humbugs! It may be that they also have swindled you!"

Mr. Rodney at this point leaped to his feet and rushed over to shake his fist in the face of the insulting hotel man. But Edith Medcroft arose suddenly like a tragedy queen and spoke, her clear, determined voice stilling the turbulent spirit of her outraged host.

"One moment, please," she said. "This all can be satisfactorily explained. No wrong has been done. It will all be cleared up in time. We"—

"In time?" interrupted the manager. "Madam, this is the time. You are here with a man who is not your husband, yet who purports to be such."

"It may throw some light on the matter if I announce that the gentleman in question is my affianced husband." It was Miss Fowler who spoke. Every one stared at her as she moved over to Brock's side.

"If you will look in the office you will find a telegram there for me," went on Mrs. Medcroft, pale, but absolutely confident. The manager called out through the door. Absolute silence reigned while the reply was awaited.

"No telegram for Mrs. Medcroft last night or today," announced the manager sternly as he glanced through the slim bunch of blue envelopes. "There are four here for a Mr. Brock, who has not yet arrived in"—

"Brock!" shouted three voices in one.

A tall man, forgetting his English and his eyeglass, sprang forward and "Brock, you ass, I telegraphed you I was coming and asked you to meet me at the station. I telegraphed twice from London and"—

"Don't call me an ass," grated Brock. "Why didn't you send 'em to me as Medcroft? I haven't been Brock until this very morning."

"'Pon my soul, Brock, it was rather stupid of me," he confessed sheepishly. "But, you see," with an inspired smile, "one of 'em was to congratulate you on winning Connie. By Jove, you know, I couldn't very well address that one to myself."

"But—but he hasn't won me," stammered Constance Fowler.

"Edith," said Roxbury, deep reproach in his voice, "you wrote me that a weeks ago." Edith merely squeezed his arm.

Odell-Carney came forward and extended his hand. "Permit me to introduce myself, sir. I am George Odell-Carney. It has given me great pleasure to serve you without knowing you. In my catalogue of personalities you have posed intermittently as a demmed bounder, a deceived husband, a betrayed lover, a successful lover and a lot of other things I can't just now recall. Acting on the presumption that you might have been a friend in distress, I worked hard in your interest. Now I discover, to my gratification, you are a perfect stranger, whom I am proud to meet. Permit me to offer my warmest felicitations and to assure you that Mr. Brock will make a splendid brother-in-law." He hesitated a moment and then went on: "So you are the chap that really put in those c'nfeuded memorial windows. 'Pon me word, sir, they are the rottenest"—

"Carney!" came the sharp reminder from his wife.

"I should have said," revised Mr. Odell-Carney, "you are the chap who played the deuce with the building grafters in the county council. Remarkable!"

"Yes," said Roxbury, striving to grasp something of the situation as it appeared to the other. "We beat them. The bill is lost. It will never go to the council. The subcommittee will not recommend it. Thanks, Brock, old man. You have saved London a good many millions, I daresay. It was you who did it after all."

Before noon the hotel was agog with the full details of the remarkable story. Cabled dispatches in the newspapers gave the gist of the clever trick played by the Medcrofts, and the whole of England was to ring with the stories of Mrs. Medcroft's pluck and devotion.

The management of the Tirol implored the Medcrofts to remain—forever! The bank and the police were profuse in apologies and explanations, and Mr Githens departed by the first train.

Freddie Ulstervelt, killing two birds with one stone, arranged a splendid dinner for that night in honor of the prodigal husband of Edith and also in open compliment to the vivacious Mlle. Le Brun.

Later in the day it occurred to him that he might just as well kill three birds as two, so he planned to announce the betrothal of Miss Fowler and Mr. Brock, the wedding to take place a fortnight hence in Mayfair. The Rodneys were invited to "stop over" for the spread. It is left for the reader to supply the answer to this simple question:

Did they stop over?

Easy Economy.

Speaking of economy in the home, a prominent charity worker said:

"There was a lot of truth in the remark of the poor, harassed east side housewife whose husband complained:

"'I wish you would be more economical, Mary. Look at the boss' wife, how economical she is!'

"'Yes,' Mary replied, 'it's easy enough for the boss' wife to be economical. She's got plenty to be economical with.'"—Exchange.

No material should be too good for you. We handle only the best; that's the reason we urge you to deal with us.

Don't Make A Mistake

We all make mistakes occasionally. But the man who goes on making the same mistake continually is to say the least, not a very wise man.

One of the easiest mistakes in the world to make is to buy inferior lumber at the same price that the very best would cost you. If you don't know that we are perfect cranks on quality, and that you can buy a much better grade of lumber here at the same price a lower grade material would cost you elsewhere, then you have something yet to learn.

But don't make the mistake of not investigating and getting our prices before you buy again.

BRITAIN AROUSED

International Complications Are Likely Through Benton Killing.

GENERAL VILLA IS ACCUSED

Reported That British Subject Was Slain After Quarrel With Mexican Leader—El Paso Citizens Stirred—Bryan Orders Investigation—Other Britons Are Missing From Juarez.

EL PASO, TEX. — William S. Benton was executed in Juarez by "Pancho" Villa, commander of the Mexican insurgents. There are two reports of the manner in which Benton was killed. One is that Villa himself shot him down during a white hot controversy in which Benton resented a vile epithet hurled at him by Villa. The other account is that Villa ordered Benton arrested after their encounter and had him executed after a drumhead courtmartial.

At all events, international complications have developed out of the slaying. Also, the anti-Mexican spirit hereabouts has risen to the boiling point. A massmeeting of protest against the Washington state department was held here in spite of efforts of the authorities to prevent it.

A report gaining circulation in El Paso says that two more Englishmen have "disappeared" in Juarez. It is feared they met the same fate as did Benton.

EL PASO, TEX. — William S. Benton, a Scotchhman and a British subject and one of the richest ranchmen in northern Mexico, who disappeared in Juarez Tuesday night, is dead, according to news brought Mrs. Benton by Thomas D. Edwards, American consul at Juarez. He paid with his life the penalty for having told General Francisco Villa, the rebel leader, that he was a bandit.

Villa, whose act is stigmatized by Benton's numerous friends as wanton murder, left suddenly for Chihuahua Friday. No single act of any of the recent revolutions, not excepting the Cumbre tunnel disaster, has so stirred indignation. When extra editions were placed on the streets they were frantically seized upon and read.

Told by Eye Witness.

A Mexican man who was present with several others in Villa's office when the difficulty occurred between the British citizen and the rebel chief tells the story. For the same reason that has made hundreds of others decline to permit the use of their names in matters Mexican, this man only related the story on promise that his identity would be hidden.

He declared that Benton after being admitted to Villa's presence began speaking rather heatedly, declaring to Villa:

"You and your men are bandits pure and simple. You have taken my horses, destroyed my property and damaged me in every way, yet you pose before the world as civilized warriors, fighting for your country. You are fighting for loot and power."

Villa, according to the man relating the story, arose from behind a desk at which he was sitting and shaking his finger at Benton retorted:

"You are a federal sympathizer, you have aided the assassins of Madero in every possible way. I am going to drive you out of the country."

Then Villa applied an epithet that has always made men fight and slapped Benton in the face.

"Damn you, Pancho Villa, I am as good a man as you are," Benton retorted, according to the Mexican's report of the affair, and then threw himself at the giant rebel leader. Villa struck him with his revolver and felled him. A woman who was present—the Mexican relating the affair says he does not know if it was Mrs. Villa or some other woman—rushed at Villa and begged him not to shoot. The Mexican says she dashed out, with others who were in the room at the time and knows nothing more of the tragedy.

Villa Claims Plot.

Villa, it is understood, in relating his story to Consul Edwards, declared that Benton drew a revolver and that he already had evidence connecting Benton with the conspiracy to assassinate him.

Villa alleges that Benton was tried by a court martial and executed at sunrise the next morning.

A mass meeting was held at the Opera house, at which thousands were turned away for want of room. Former Governor Geo. Curry of New Mexico presided. Resolutions were adopted criticising the action of the Washington government for its leniency toward Castillo, Salazar and other Mexican bandits; denouncing Villa as the most bloody tyrant the world has known, and demanding intervention by the United States in Mexico. Copies of the resolutions were wired to Secretary of State Bryan, President Wilson, the British ambassador and various congressmen and senators.

Bryan Orders Investigation.

British Steamer Ashore.

NORFOLK, VA. — The British steamer Sachem is ashore off Hog Island. A revenue cutter and three tugs have gone to her assistance.

"Wet" Shipments Stopped.

DES MOINES, IA.—The state supreme court declared valid the Webb-Kenyon law prohibiting the shipment of liquor into "dry" territory.

The case was brought by the State of Iowa against the United States Express company, and Judge Hunter of Ottumwa had held the law invalid. His decision was reversed.

Denver Man Seeks Senatorship.

DENVER, COL. — Representative George J. Kindel, of Denver, Col., announced his candidacy to succeed Senator Thomas. He will make his campaign in the Colorado primaries next summer upon transportation rates and commercial equality for Denver and Colorado.

WIFE'S DEATH STIRS MICHIGAN NEIGHBORS

Many Rumors as to Mrs. Alvah Howell's End.

STOCKBRIDGE, MICH.—"An inquest will be held Friday."

That is all Ingham county officers will say as to what course they will follow in bringing to light the circumstances surrounding the death of Mrs. Alvah J. Howell.

The sudden death of this woman, wife of a prominent farmer, reputed to be worth $30,000, and a life-long resident on the farm he now owns seven and one-half miles northeast of this place, has wrought this community into the highest state of excitement it has ever known.

There are all sorts of rumors as to how Mrs. Howell met her end and coupled with these are grave accusations. These are based on the fact there were marks on her throat and her bracelet, broken, was found near her body.

To her mother she had confided that she had endured much from her husband, and wanted to remain at the home of her father, the Rev. E. A. Morrison, living a mile distant.

George May, a Jackson traveling salesman, said he went to the Howell home, knocked for fully ten minutes and when finally admitted was told to have a chair and in a short time Howell rushed downstairs yelling that his wife was dying.

REPUBLICANS TO "WELFARE"

Conference Is Called to Get Together on Governorship.

DETROIT, MICH. — The Republican state central committee will meet here shortly and will undoubtedly call a "welfare conference" of the Republican party for the near future for the purpose of straightening out party affairs and framing things to elect a Republican over Governor Woodridge N. Ferris, Democrat. Governor Ferris is acknowledged by every one in touch with state conditions to be stronger than he was in 1912.

The only hope of the Republicans is in inducing enough Progressives to return to their original affiliation.

STRAITS FISHING IS GOOD

New Law Enables Finny Tribe to Get Past River Mouths.

CHEBOYGAN, MICH.—Fishing has not been as good in years as it has been in the straits this winter. The new law chasing the commercial fishermen away from the mouths of rivers has had a tendency to allow the fish of all kinds to come up the river and also get into Duncan bay and as a result perch fishing has been very good sport all winter, and many fish have been caught.

Many are spearing Mackinaw trout and snatching trout in the straits with good success. They have not been able to catch any in this way here for years.

DEATH RECALLS A ROMANCE

Former Resident of Hillsdale Is Brought There for Interment.

HILLSDALE, MICH. — William C. Campbell, whose body has arrived here from San Diego, Cal., for burial, figured in a romance here in the early forties. His engagement to Miss Isabella Sweetman, of this city, was announced, but there was an estrangement and the wedding did not take place. Their friendship, however, was kept alive through correspondence, and in 1893 they were married in St. Joe, Mo. She survives.

Mr. Campbell lacked but a few days of being ninety years old when he died.

5 DEAD IN STORM

Suffering Intense as Chilling Blasts Sweep Chicago.

HUNDREDS APPLY FOR AID

Too Proud to Beg Aged Couple Starve—Fast Trains Blocked and Mails From One to Five Hours Late—Storm in Central Illinois Worst in Twenty Years.

CHICAGO, ILL.—Cold weather has followed the blizzard in Chicago which took a toll of five lives and caused a score of inurjies. Nearly all mail trains arrived in Chicago late. Delays from one to five hours were reported.

Passenger service also was delayed. The Twentieth Century Limited on the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern Railroad and the Pennsylvania Limited were among the trains to arrive late in Chicago. Each was reported two hours behind schedule.

Aged Couple Starvs.

Too proud to ask for food which would have cheerfully been given them by neighbors, Mr. and Mrs. Frank H Kachelhoffer, an aged couple, died of starvation and the cold in their little home at 1011 Orleans street. A letter offering them aid was found on the dresser in their bedroom. It is thought to have come too late.

Unable to see a Chicago & Western Indiana train plunging its way through the blizzard, Benjamin Ruffano, a switchman, was struck and crushed to death. Two other unidentified men also are victims of the frigid spell.

An unidentified man about forty years old was struck by a south-bound Kedzie avenue car while walking with his head down to shield his face from the wind and was killed and an unidentified man, about sixty years old died in the County hospital after falling on the sidewalk in front of 1530 South Halsted street.

Many Appeals for Help.

Medical assistance was given to hundreds of persons suffering minor injuries in every section of the city. South Park police formed a cordon along Michigan avenue to assist men and women in the streets.

More appeals for help were received by the county agent than at any time this winter. The main office at West Adams and South Peoria streets was thronged with dependents before daylight. Coal and food was distributed to each.

BLOOMINGTON, ILL. — As a result of the blizzard, Central Illinois is snowbound. The worst storm in twenty years is sweeping over this section of the state. Snow commenced falling Sunday afternoon and has shown no abatement. Two passenger trains are tied up near here.

PEACE FLAG ON FIRST SHIP ACROSS PANAMA

Col. Goethals Assures League of Peace of Plans.

NEW YORK — The first ship to pass through the Panama canal will fly the United States peace flag—the stars and stripes with a border of white. Colonel Goethals has again assured Dr. Wm. O. McDowell, president of the League of Peace, of this in the following letter made public:

"The peace flag will be flown on the first ship to make the official and direct passage. The canal is now in shape to pas ships drawing twenty-five feet of water, but it is the intention to delay the first official trip until it can be arranged to have the president, members of his cabinet, and committee representing the two houses of congress present."

The League of Peace has arranged with those in charge of the Panama exposition to present a national and international flag to each country in the world aeroplane race. The winner of the race is to put his flags in the national museum at Washington where the peace flag on the first ship through the canal will also be placed.

ATTACKS PARCEL POST BILL

Congressman Says Amendment Is Worth $50,000,000 to Express Co's.

WASHINGTON. — Representative David J. Lewis of Maryland has denounced the proposed senate amendment to the parcel post act as being worth $50,000,000 to the express companies. The amendment strips the postmaster general and interstate commerce commission of all power to make rates and extensions, vesting such authority in congress.

"Without impugning any man's motives, I say that the repeal of this provision in the parcel post law might well be valued at $50,000,000 by the express companies. It will finally take away from the parcel post service all its power to compete with them, and they will thus be enabled to capture that portion of the postal function which has turned a deficit in the postal revenues of $7,000,000 to a $8,000,000 or $10,000,000 surplus in the first year of its operation.

YOUNG WIFE AN ACCOMPLICE

PITTSBURG, PA. — Mrs. Elmer Anschott, seventeen, confessed the police say, that she had taken part in many burglaries for which her husband, who is eighteen years old, was arrested and held for court.

THE COUNTY SYSTEM

What It Means to the Farmers of Lenawee County

It means that instead of paying all the cost of building roads through the country, as you do under the present system, that the state will pay one third, the cities and villages of this county will pay one third and you will have to pay one third. Good roads are going to come; you can't dodge the issue. Will you build them under the township system and pay all the cost or under the county system, and only pay one third of the cost. That is the question. How will you vote on it?

The county system of building good roads is now in force in 54 out of the 83 counties in this state. No county has rescinded its action and gone back to the old system, the system is here to stay. The people of nearly every other state are thoroughly aroused on this subject and good roads are just as sure to be built in other counties and states as the sun is to rise and set. We will never go back to the old pathmaster system; other counties have adopted and will stick to the county system and receive state rewards. Can the farmers of this county afford to remain under the present sytem, assist other counties in constructing and maintaining good roads and receive no benefit from the state highway fund, the automobile tax, or from the cities and villages of this county which pay over 37 per cent of the taxes of the county?

The average cost of all roads that have been constructed in Michigan under the county system is $1800 a mile. This means the average in 54 counties out of the 83 in Michigan that are under the county system. Those who are familiar with the roads and conditions in Lenawee county can readily see that the roads here can be constructed considerably under the average.

The law relating to the county system of building highways and bridges of this state, its adoption by a county is strictly optional, any county in the state may elect to build or improve their highways under this portion of general law, it is merely a step in progression. In the earlier days the road were built without any definite idea, they merely followed the paths, along the lines of the least resistance or along the lines where it was convenient to construct them; in later years when the country became more populated, they devised a system of highways that would be for the greatest good for the greatest number; these roads were constructed and maintained by a system called the pathmaster system; or a system of small road districts. In later years we have maintained and improved these roads by the township system, we elect a man from the township at large and call him the highway commissioner he is supposed to have charge of all the roads in his township. Now if you have followed this closely you will find that the plan has been to centralize the system of building highways. Now comes the county system which is nothing more or less than more centraling of highway building. The people of to-day generally believe that one man who is well versed in his line of work, can conduct a business with more economy and can gain better results than 20 men trying to do the same work and without a head. So the majority of people in this great state believing that the only feasible and economical way of building highways was by centralization, enacted the county road law, that believed that better results could be obtained, and less money expended, by placing the road improvement in the hands of competent men, who working under the direction of the board of supervisors, would improve and maintain the roads at large throughout the whole county. They very wisely provided that not more than $2.00 on every 1,000 of assessed valuation could be raised in one year.

It has been said that if we adopt the county system of building roads that the taxes will become a burden; now Mr. Taxpayer figure for yourself, In this county there is raised a tax called the Highway Improvement Tax Its purpose is to raise funds to make permanent improvements on the highways it is levied in all townships, the amount levied in 1913 amounted to the large sum of $54,370 70 this does not include the cities of Adrian and Hudson. Now, if we were working under the county system, the cities and incorporated villages would pay an additional sum, which with the reward from the state, would build a good miles of improved roads. Your taxes will not be increased one penny from what they are under the present system

Would it not be more economical to place this Highway Improvement Tax in the hands of the board of supervisors or thier agents, the county commissioners, to expend judiciously over the system. Think this over, for this is the county plan in a nut shell

It has been said that the element of graft will creep into the county system. All men are not dishonest. It will be easier to find men who are honest in this county than most any other place, we have confidence in our fellow men, and feel confident that the people of this county will place men in charge of this road improvement, who are fair, honest, conscientious and will work for the best interests of the whole county.

It has been said by those who oppose the county system of building roads that it is a scheme to build roads into the cities in the county, but inasmuch as out of a total of 29 supervisors in this county only seven of them are from the cities of Hudson and Adrian, it seems safe to expect that the farmers will get the roads where they want them.

In our county the law says that the supervisors shall not levy a tax of more than two mills or $2 on every $1000 of the assessed valuation of the property for the purpose of improving the highways and should the supervisors go to the extreme limit of the law, the amount of tax levied would not be any hardship on any one, and do not forget that this tax is levied on all the taxable property in the county.

The homes, business houses and manufacturing industries in all of our cities and villages are paying just the same rate of tax to build these roads that the farmer pays. At the present time the cities of Hudson and Adrian pay nearly 23 per cent of the entire tax of the county and these two cities together with the incorporated villages pay about 37 per cent, so that for every dollar spent for county roads the cities and villages must pay approximately 37 cents.

Lenawee county has in the last nine years paid into the state treasury highway taxes to the amount of $58,935.19 and has drawn back not one dollar from the state reward fund. Thus we have donated this amount to the other counties toward building their roads. Mr Voter, just read the above again and let those figures thoroughly sink into your mind and then figure out just how much of a philanthropist you have been by donating your portion of this $58,035.19 to our neighbors in adjoining counties that they might have good roads. Don't you think it is time we got into the game and by joining forces and working as a county instead of individual townships, draw from the state highway fund not only the amount we are paying into it, but more, that the other counties are paying in who have not adopted as yet the county system. The reward system is here. It is a law and we might as well take advantage of it as others are doing. Vote for the county system.

Farm Worth Your Consideration

A 262 acre farm for sale at $75.00 per acre. This farm is located in Lenawee county, Raisin township, Michigan, 1 mile from Holloway, a shipping station on the great Wabash railroad. Has a clear title. The above farm has fair buildings and plenty of them. Very good, large house. Good for hay and all kinds of grain. Excellent for stock, having two small streams fed by living springs that never run dry and which water nearly every field on the farm. Twenty acres of heavy timber; 20 acres of second growth timber. Not five acres of waste land on the place. Two hundred acres under the plow. The soil is loam, gravel and sand top, clay bottom. Timber is principally white oak, beech, maple, hickory, walnut, whitewood, white ash elm, etc. Can sit on front porch of house and see all Wabash trains sixty rods distant. A fine sight. Still the farm is all on one side of the railroad. For further prrticulars address

LOCAL WOMEN AGREE WITH STAGE BEAUTIES

Of all women in the world, probably those on the stage are most particular about their personal appearance, and especially in the care of the hair; and when such leading stage beauties as Ethel Barrymore, Elsie Furguson, Natalie Alt, Louise Dresser, Rose Coghlan, Laurette Taylor and many others are so enthusiastic about Harmony Beautifier as to write in praise of it, that is certainly evidence that it does just what they say it does—that is, beautifies the hair. There are many women right in this town, and men, too, who regard it as indispensable, because it makes the hair glossier and more silky, easier to dress and make stay in place. Sprinkle a little on your hair each time before brushing it. Contains no oil; will not change color of hair, nor darken gray hair.

To keep hair and scalp dandruff-free and clean, use Harmony Shampoo. This pure liquid shampoo gives an instantaneous rich lather that immediately penetrates to every part of hair and scalp, insuring a quick, thorough cleansing. Washed off just as quickly the entire operation takes only a few moments. Contains nothing that can harm the hair; leaves no harshness or stickiness.

Both preparations come in odd-shaped, very ornamental bottles, with sprinkler tops. Harmony Hair Beautifier, $1.00. Harmony shampoo, 50c. Both guaranteed to satisfy you in every way, or your money back. Sold only at the more than 1,000 Rexall Stores, and in this town only by us.

MICHIGAN GROUND LIMESTONE
95% LIME

Large areas of soil in Michigan are needing lime badly, and probably every farm in the state could be treated with lime with much benefit and profit.

Drainage is the first fundemental in the improvement of our soils and lime stands second in importance.

A positive indication of the need of lime is the increasing difficulty farmers find in growing clover and another very significant indication is the difficulty in securing a proper seeding and growth of Alfalfa.

We expect a car of Ground Limestone in 100 pound sacks about the middle of March and are taking orders now for this first car If you want to improve your land insure a clover catch and fit your soil to raise the coming hay crop—Alfalfa—see us at once and leave your tonnage order.

REACHING THE SPOT

It Has Been Done, So Scores of Tecumseh Citizens Say

To get rid of an aching back.
The sharp twinges.
The tired-out feelings.

You must reach the spot—get at the cause.

In many cases 'tis the kidneys.

Doan's Kidney Pills are for weak kidneys.

Tecumseh citizens testify

Henry Kempf, carpenter, Kilbuck St., Tecumseh, Mich., says: "My kidneys were not doing their work as they should and I was suffering from a lame and aching back. I got a supply of Doan's Kidney Pills at Wright & Son's Drug Store and it did not take them long to remove the trouble."

If your back aches—if your kidneys bother you, don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—ask distinctly for Doan's Kidney Pills, the same that Mr. Kempf had—the remedy backed by home testimony. 50c all stores. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y. adv

If You are Subject to Colds This Editorial will Interest You.

A Great Majority of People Get One or More Colds Every Season and It is of Vital Interest to All to Learn How to Avoid and Relieve Colds Quickly, Since Colds are Said to be Contagious.

Some people think colds are only caught through exposure. This in return is contradicted by the fact that Arctic explorers are peculiarly free from colds. It is more generally accepted that colds are the result of civilized life, due to super-heated rooms and a very rapid change in temperature which causes the nerve centers to be depressed, and still more largely due to contagion—one member of a family imparting a cold to another by sneezing or coughing.

A cold means nothing if relieved quickly. That such a purpose may be accomplished, a quick aid to a cold is an essential. A remedy especially devised to relieve colds quickly is PERUNA.

PERUNA contains such ingredients that have an especially beneficial influence upon the inflamed mucous membranes and the quicker these mucous membranes are given the benefit of a remedy like PERUNA, the quicker the relief and the less contagion.

A neglected cold may become a serious menace to one's own life, and far worse, may endanger one's family.

We insure our homes against fire, our lives against death. Why should we not insure ourselves against colds if possible by having a medicine in the family chest that can be used at once?

PERUNA is a reliable household remedy for colds and should be in every home, for there should be a desire to combat a cold as quickly as possible. This is enlightened hygiene.

People who are feeble and run down are more subject to colds than persons in normal health. Such persons need outdoor life and PERUNA to help build up a strong constitution. If you have a poor appetite that is often a warning that you probably need a tonic like Peruna for Peruna aids the digestive organs. When your appetite is fair and work and exercise do not quickly tire you, your susceptibility to colds diminishes very much.

Persons who object to liquid medicines can now obtain PERUNA TABLETS.

CAPTURE OF FORGER IS EARNESTLY SOUGHT

Congress of Sheriffs to Meet Over "George Kramer."

ANN ARBOR, MICH.—The Washtenaw officials are offering $200 reward for the arrest of the man claiming to be George Kramer, who last Monday obtained $3,500 on a fraudulent deed to property valued at $14,000.

This makes $1,000 offered for Kramer's apprehension by officials of different cities in Michigan. Kramer is described as the "most noted forger in America," according to advices received here. Kramer is but one of about fifty aliases. Under the name of John Kline it has been discovered Kramer spent two years in the Missouri state prison in 1898-1900. It is claimed that he is the man who killed a bank officer in New York state and that $10,000 was offered for his capture. In Kalamazoo, where he operated under the name of Phillip Galvick, he got $3,500 last January.

The most outrageous feature of Kramer's operations is the fact that John Beckman, who looks like Kramer, was arrested in Marshall in 1904 for an offense committed by Kramer and served eight years in Marquette prison before he could prove his innocence. Sheriffs from all Michigan counties where Kramer has operated will meet with Sheriff Stark here to plan his capture.

It is said that Kramer has obtained nearly a quarter of a million dollars in his operations and that not less that $200,000 has been spent in an effort to apprehend him.

When You
BUILD

No material should be too good for you. We handle only the best; that's the reason we urge you to deal with us.

Don't Make A Mistake

We all make mistakes occasionally. But the man who goes on making the same mistake continually is, to say the least, not a very wise man.

One of the easiest mistakes in the world to make is to buy inferior lumber at the same price that the very best would cost you. If you don't know that we are perfect cranks on quality, and that you can buy a much better grade of lumber here at the same price a lower grade material would cost you elsewhere, then you have something yet to learn.

But don't make the mistake of not investigating and getting our prices before you buy again.

GOVERNOR COLQUITT

Texas Eecutive Asks Permission to Invade Mexico.

Washington, March 2.—Governor Colquitt of Texas demanded of Secretary Bryan the right to send troops into Mexica to find the body of Clemente Vergara, who is supposed to have been hanged by federals, which was flatly rejected by the secretary of state, as it would involve the federal government.

KILLS HIMSELF AND BRIDE

Former Iowa Man Shoots Wife Without Known Reason.

Iowa City, Ia., March 2.—Emanuel Horn, formerly of Windham, Ia., shot and killed his nineteen-year-old bride and then committed suicide at [illegible] Grande, Ore., where they located recently.

No reason for the killing andd suicide was learned.

Pastor Must Preach to Marry.

Lansing, Mich., March 2.—Attorney General Fellows rules that a minister of the gospel must either be a pastor of the church or continue to preach the gospel in Michigan in order to be entitled to perform a marriage ceremony.

Beethoven's Affliction.

Beethoven for the last seventeen years of his life could not hear a note of all the exquisite music he penned and suffered terribly from melancholia.

MARSHALL AMUSES BROOKLYN Y. M. C. A.

Vice President Dips Into Wisdom on Many Points.

New York, March 2.—Vice President Marshall sloshed through the storm all the way from Washington to the Bedford branch of the Y. M. C. A. in Brooklyn, that he might give an audience of more than 1,000 men advice about how often to kiss one's wife, how careful they should be (supposing they must drink) to get only the best that's brewed or distilled, how they must make their money in so clean a way that the baby "can cut it's teeth on every dollar without getting microbes," and much more advice that was received with much cheer and laughter.

Robert P. Roy, an ex-district attorney, in introducing the vice president quoted Secretary Daniels as saying that Mr. Marshall is "one of the finest men God ever made." Mr. Marshall thereupon began his speech by telling a story about the introduction of "sody water fountains" into Indiana and how a certain farmer, after his first sip, called the concoction "sweetened wind."

VOTE COSTS WOMAN DIVORCE

Illinois Suffragist Loses Suit Brought in Court of Wisconsin.

La Crosse, Wis., March 2.—Lulu Kinder, Illinois suffragist, cannot get a divorce in Wisconsin. Judge Higbee in circuit court here so ordered, and directed that the case be dismissed.

The defense proved that the plaintiff, an ardent suffragist, had cast a vote at the last election at Quincy, Ill. This established her as a resident of Illinois, and therefore disqualified to apply for and obtain a divorce in this state.

STUDENTS FAINT IN LECTURE

Grewsome Story of Lacerated Hand Proves Too Much for Pair.

Madison, Wis., March 2.—Two students in the University of Wisconsin, P. B. Buchanon and K. D. Clark, fainted and were carried from the lecture room when Professor L. A. Kahlenberg lectured to the engineering division of the chemistry class.

Professor Kahlenberg was telling a grewsome story about a lacerated hand and how to care for it. The details of the lecture proved too much for two members of the class.

New York, March 2.—The four gun men who must die in the electric chair for the actual shooting of the gambler Herman Rosenthal are resigned to their fate. Their last ray of hope was snuffed out by the adverse decision of the court of appeals. They are (top) "Gyp the Blood" (second) "Leftie Louie," (third) "Whitey Lewis" and (below) "Dago Frank."

SOCIETY DUPED BY OWN "ITCH"

Thinks Clerk Millionaire Oliver and Starts Him Going.

MAKES GOOD SEVEN MONTHS

Social Leaders Get Busy With Him at Once by Selling Him $16,000 Yacht and Take His Notes—He Was a "Lovable" Fellow—His Debts Only $300.

Chicago, March 2.—G. Franklin Oliver, a young Chicagoan, returned to the simple life. But first he made public a statement of how, by posing as Joseph D. Oliver, Jr., of South Bend, Ind., he came into a large fortune, he had been entertained by Chicago society for seven months, had purchased a $16,000 yacht on his personal notes, had joined half a dozen exclusive clubs, at which he failed to pay dues, and had subscribed freely to various charities.

The young man's statement denied that he is any relation to the wealthy Oliver family of South Bend.

All his dupes, largely self-imposed ones and men of large affairs, admit that Oliver is a very loveable sort of a fellow. A representative of Joseph D. Oliver, Jr., visited Chicago after the confession of the bogus "Joseph D.," took him out to dinner, entertaining him, and returned to South Bend, reporting him as a very "lovable" fellow, and that there would be no prosecution.

Worked for $100 a Month.

While leading what he termed the "high life," young Oliver, who is only twenty-four years old, admitted he had continued his work as an electrical engineer in a North Side laboratory at a salary of $100 a month.

Young Oliver said trouble began for him last August, when he first saw that yacht Manzanita at St. Joseph, Mich. He fell in love with the craft and learned that it was owned by David L. Frank of Chicago.

"I went to Mr. Frank and asked him if it wouldn't be better to loan or rent the boat at a nominal price rather than let it rot of disuse?" said Oliver.

"Oh, you are Mr. Oliver of South Bend!" Mr. Frank said.

"Yes,' I replied.

"It was automatic—that 'yes.' The minute it was over I regretted it. It was too late then. He said all I had to go was to give him my note for $16,000."

Things happened very rapidly to young Mr. Oliver from that time on. He was invited to dinners, joined clubs on invitation, was the guest of prominent people. The young man said the upkeep of his yacht and the entertaining he was required to do cost him all of his modest salary and all of his savings.

"I didn't borrow much money," said the young man. "My whole indebtedness is about $300.

REVENGE LEADS TO CONFESSION

Union Man Tells of Triple Killing in Strike Zone.

STORY VERIFIED BY FARMER

John Huhta, Fired from Western Federation of Miners, Tells of Crime at Painesdale, Mich., Dec. 7—Conscience Also Bothered Him—Four Arrested as Result of Story.

Houghton, Mich., March 2.—A troubled conscience and a desire to "get even" with the officers of the Western Federation of Miners who discharged him from a position which assured him "easy living" as secretary of the South Range union of the federation, led John Huhta to make the voluntary confession which resulted in his arrest and that of Nick Verbanec Friday and arrests of Joseph and Isaac Jittinen and Hjalmar Jallonen on the charge of homicide.

Verbanec is a Croatian organizer for the federation. The others are members and strikers. The five are charged with shooting into the home of Thomas Dally at Painesdale before daylight the morning of Dec. 7 and killing Dally and Harry and Arthur Jane, all British subjects and non-union miners.

The firing, it is said, was for the purpose of frightening the men, who intended to disregard the strike and return to work and this was but one of several deeds of the kind, although no one was killed in the former attempts.

Huhta's confession was voluntary and implicated the others arrested and two other federation organizers, it is said, one of whom planned the plot.

Lucas in Chicago.

Special Prosecutor Nichols has the full confession. Prosecutor Lucas is in Chicago, where he has been investigating clues furnished him through federation channels that the deed was the work of Waddell men. The alleged information against Waddell men in the case was brought out during the investigation the past week of the strike by the congressional sub-committee on mining. Huhta was suspected before he volunteered his confession and was arrested.

Huhta's story was verified by a farmer from Toivola, who approached Sheriff Cruse and said he was with the men who did the shooting, but did not participate in the crime. He gave names of the members of the party and others who were nearby but did no shooting, confirming Huhta's list of names.

Fired from Hill.

Huhta says he himself fired nine shots and that Vermanec and the others arrested and "two more" also shot into the house. They fired from a point of vantage on a small hill to the rear of the house. Falling snow obliterated their tracks so they could not be followed.

Other arrests are expected. The five arrested will be examined March 6. They are held without bail.

BABY BOUNTY STOPS; STORK IS TOO BUSY

Lumber Company Puts Recall on Its Promise.

Waupun, Wis., March 2.—Six years ago the Looman's Lumber company promised John Howard, employe, that with every arrival of the stork his pay would be increased. Howard had just got married.

At the end of a year the first baby arrived. Howard smiled when he saw the boost in the figure on his pay check; President I. F. Rossmann of the lumber company smiled. "it is a worthy deed," he said as he signed the check. The next year a pair of twins arrived, and the following year brought two more babes. At the end of the fourth year President Rossmann smiled only faintly as he signed the pay check, and at the end of the fifth year he smiled not a whit.

Encouraged by its more enthusiastic reception each time it arrived, the stork on Wednesday brought another pair of twins. In high glee Howard brought the news to his employer. After a hurried meeting of the board of directors of the lumber company the ultimatum was given:

"Up to the present time we have fulfilled our agreement," said Mr. Rossmann, "but because we cannot pay two president's salaries we hereby apply the recall on our promise."

GETS 2D DEATH SENTENCE

Illinoisan Convicted Twice of the Murder of His Wife.

Madison, Ill., March 2.—Nicola Gavrilovich of Madison was found guilty for the second time by a jury in the Edwardsville circuit court of murdering his wife and his punishment again was recommended to be death by hanging. Gavrilovich stabbed his wife because she refused to move to St. Louis where he had found employment.

A month later, after Gavrilovich had been indicted, he was declared insane. Last summer he was discharged as cured and was reindicted, tried and found guilty. He was granted a new trial on the ground that he had not been legally declared sane before he was placed on trial. An inquiry into the man's mental condition was then conducted and he was declared sane. His second trial and conviction followed.

CENTRALIZED POWER URGED

Iowa Efficiency Engineers Want Governor and Chief Justice to Appoint.

Des Moines, March 2.—The governor of Iowa will become the actual head of every department of the executive branch of the state government, while every judge in the state will be appointed by the chief justice of the supreme court, if the plans of the efficiency engineers of the last legislature are carried out, it is announced.

The report of the engineers is in the hands of the legislative committee on retrenchment and reform. The basis of the recommendations is centralization of power and responsibility. One-man control in the executive and judicial branches of government is a part of the changes proposed.

MONEY ACTS PATHOPHOROUS

Bad Axe Young Man Gets Measles From It.

Bad Axe, Mich., March 2.—Because he handled pathophorus money, Lee Frost, a prominent and well to do young farmer of Meade township, is down with the measles.

The only exposure to this disease he had happened a few days ago in Bad Axe, when he was paid $10 in bills at the door of a home where they had measles.

TENNESSEE NOW "DRIEST" STATE

Law Closes 800 Saloons and Drains Brewery Vats.

DRUG STORES ARE AFFECTED

"Colonels" Who Can't Live Without Morning Drink Will Have to Move—"Moonshine" Stills Are Expected to Cause Trouble—Imports Are to Be Fought.

Memphis, Tenn., March 2.—At 12 o'clock Saturday night eight hundred saloons in Tennessee closed their doors and every vat in the breweries was drained. As a result Tennessee probably is the "driest" state in the Union.

Two years ago a new law prohibited the distilling of whiskey and the new prohibition law closes all saloons and stops the manufacture of beer.

The law also intends to make impossible the sale of alcohol at the corner drug store, or any other drug store. Even the man who only takes one "once in awhile" is going to find it hard to get the "one" and the "Colonels" who believe they can't live without their "morning's morning" probably will die or move to some other state.

May Ship It In.

Already arrangements have been made to get liquor into the state from other points, but it is said that the prohibition forces will attempt to fight this system through the courts. This is a much-moot point and it will require time to determine just what action can be taken along this line.

Tennessee, famous for its "moonshine," probably will continue its manufacture. This will be done, of course, in secluded places and in violation of the United States laws. Revenue officers are looking for a busy period, as it is believed that illicit stills will be worked overtime, wherever their owners believe they have a chance to manufacture the "mountain dew."

Prescriptions No Good.

At midnight the last drop of brew was drained from the vats of every brewery in the state. Saloons that had been in business for fifty years closed, many of them displaying crepe.

Drug stores also quit selling alcoholic liquors and not even a physician's prescription will coax a drink from any drug counter. The state has prohibited the distilling of whisky for the last two years.

Governor Hooper has issued a warning that if any one attempts to disobey or evade the prohibition law a special session of the legislature will be called and an exchange judgeship act will be passed sending state judges into any county to hear the trials

Wedded Eyebrows.

In Turkey meeting eyebrows are greatly admired, and the women use artificial means to bring the brows to this condition, and if art cannot induce thin eyebrows to grow they make up by drawing a black line with paste.

It would appear that the Greeks admired brows which almost met, and the fashionable inhabitants of Rome not only approved of them, but resorted to pigments to make up the lack which sometimes existed.

Some proverbs state that the person whose eyebrows meet will always have good luck, while others state exactly the reverse. The Chinese say that "people whose eyebrows meet can never hope to attain to the dignity of a minister of state," and in Greece of today the man whose brows meet is said to be a vampire, while in Denmark and Germany it is said he is a werewolf.—London Spectator.

The Luckless Procrastinator.

The procrastinator is always liable to be luckless. To postpone a duty that should be discharged at once is to invite trouble for all concerned. Many a man who is well disposed toward life insurance is still deferring the purchase of a policy which would be a boon to his family in the event of his death. The would be insurant is in good health today, but tomorrow he may be stricken with a disease that may bar him from the ranks of the insurable. His reason for putting off securing a policy may be that it is inconvenient at present to pay the premium. But he should consider carefully the fact that life insurance will never be cheaper for him than it is today. His yearly premium on a policy taken out now would be appreciably less than would be the premium on a policy of the same amount taken out when he is a year older. Delay, therefore, will add somewhat to the yearly burden he would have to carry. The best thing for any uninsured man to do is to insure at once.—Leslie's Weekly.

Wall Papers and Light.

"The good lighting of a room depends not only on the disposition of the lights so as to produce an adequate illumination and on the proper shielding of the lamps so as to avoid needless glare, but on the nature of the wall surface on which the light falls," says Prof. Sylvanus Thompson of London. "Even when the illumination that is received by the walls is ample the room may be badly lit if the walls absorb too much of that illumination instead of giving it back by diffuse reflection. Few people are aware how much light is thus wasted and thrown away.

"The deep scarlet and crimson wall papers now fashionable for dining rooms waste from 70 to 75 per cent; brown paper wastes about 85 to 88 per cent; even an ordinary yellow or buff wall paper wastes 50 to 60 per cent. On the other hand, white cartridge paper absorbs and wastes only about 20 per cent of the light, while a whitewashed wall absorbs from 30 to 40 per cent."

Thumbs of the Apes.

The gorilla and chimpanzee, which belong to the higher order of apes, have many points of resemblance to man, but there is one thing they cannot do—that is, twiddle their thumbs. In the gorilla the thumb is short and does not reach much beyond the bottom of the first joint of the forefinger. It is very much restricted in its movements, and the animal can neither twiddle his thumbs nor turn them round so that the tips describe a circle. There are the same number of bones in the hand of a gorilla as in the hand of a man, but the thumbs of the monkey have no separate flexor or bending muscle. This is why a monkey always keeps the thumb on the same side as the fingers and never bends it round any object that may be grasped. In the gorilla the web between the fingers extends to the second joint, the fingers taper to the tips, and there is a callosity on the knuckles on which the animal rests when walking on all fours.

History In July.

In at least four countries perhaps the most important event in their histories was recorded in July—namely, the establishment of their independence. In our own history we have the memorable Fourth of July, while the patriotic efforts of the liberator Simon Bolivar for the independence of Venezuela were consummated on July 5, Colombia ridding herself of the Spanish yoke on July 20. Then there is France, with her July 14, marking the date when the suffering French people stormed the famed and fearsome Bastille. The Spanish forces at Santiago, Cuba, capitulated on July 16.

Asking Him to Read the Future.

"I shall call upon a fortune teller this morning," said Mr. Blubb.

"Going to try to learn something about the future?" asked Mr. Waggles.

"Yes. I am going to ask him when he expects to pay the arrears of rent for that cottage of mine he is occupying as a school of astrology and institute for psychical research."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

An Old Puzzle.

An excellent, if an old, puzzle is: How can a window having a height equal to its width be made twice as large without increasing its height or width?

Impossible! Oh, no! In the first instance it is shaped like a diamond; then it is changed to a square.

Keep on Fighting.

All work of man is as the swimmer's. A waste ocean threatens to devour him. If he front it not bravely it will keep its word. By incessant wise defiance of it, lusty rebuke and buffet of it, behold how it loyally supports him—bears him as its conqueror along!—Thomas Carlyle.

Shellfishness.

The oyster was bewailing its hard luck.

"I don't mind being 'pickled' once in awhile," said the oyster, "or even being 'devilled' occasionally, but I'm tired to death of being called 'the luscious bivalve.'"—Chicago Tribune.

An Appetite Developer.

"What is the best way to develop an appetite?" asked the old fogy.

"Being without the price of a meal is the best way I know of," replied the wise guy.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Before you set your heart on anything maturely consider whether it will add to your ultimate happiness.

Don't Scratch a Mole.

Dr. Jean Dartier, speaking before the French Association For the Study of Cancer, referred to the tragic possibilities of the innocent looking mole.

"Scratch a mole," he said, "and you may catch a cancer."

Some moles were harmless and some were potentially poisonous, he continued. The only wise course was to leave well enough alone and resist the temptation to scratch the mole. Warts and wens should be borne patiently lest worse befall their possessors. Dr. Dartier told of a man who by cauterizing a harmless wart on his hand transformed it into a cancer.

Met Its Match.

A cyclone visited the negro quarters in an Alabama mining camp several years ago. It tumbled down the cabins and not one joist or sill was left standing. Uncle Joe was the only one who came through the visitation unscathed.

"Yas, suh," he said, "I hea'd dat win' comin' through de bresh, an' I seen it, an' I felt it, an' I knew it was er' slykone—an' I's de onliest pusson in dat settlement what could say, 'Heah she comes,' an' 'Dar she goes!'"

A Liberal Education.

That man, I think, has had a liberal education who has been so trained in youth that his body is the ready servant of his will and does with ease and pleasure all the work that as a mechanism it is capable of; whose intellect is a clear, cold logic engine, with all its parts of equal strength, and in smooth working order, ready, like a steam engine, to be turned to any kind of work and spin the gossamers as well as forge the anchors of the mind; whose mind is stored with a knowledge of the great and fundamental truths of nature and of the laws of her operations; one who, no stunted ascetic, is full of life and fire, but whose passions are trained to come to heel by a vigorous will, the servant of a tender conscience; who has learned to love all beauty, whether of nature or of art, to hate all vileness and to respect others as himself.

Such a man and no other, I conceive, has had a liberal education.—Thomas Henry Huxley in "Lay Sermons."

Trees and Fools.

Any fool can destroy trees. They cannot run away, and if they could they would still be destroyed—chased and hunted down as long as fun or a dollar could be got out of their bark hides, branching horns or magnificent bole backbones. Few that fell trees plant them; nor would planting avail much toward getting back anything like the noble primeval forests. During a man's life only saplings can be grown in the place of the old trees, tens of centuries old, that have been destroyed. It took more than 3,000 years to make some of the trees in these western woods—trees that are still standing in perfect strength and beauty, waving and singing in the mighty forests of the Sierras. God has cared for these trees, saved them from drought, disease, avalanches and a thousand straining, leveling tempests and floods; but he cannot save them from fools. Only Uncle Sam can do that.—John Muir.

Saw the Practical Side.

Ideas of advancement in South America are aesthetic, while in the United States they run along practical lines. As an indication of the uses to which capital has been applied in South America and the difference in temperament of the people of that part of the western world as compared with the inhabitants of the United States a story is told of a meeting between a Brazilian promoter and an American prospector at one of the new cities which have recently sprung up on the banks of the Amazon. The native pointed with pride to a pretentious opera house overlooking the mighty river and asked the stranger if the site was not superb. "Well," said the man from one of our western states, "I think it would be a mighty fine place for a sawmill."

The Varying Cost of Education.

A certain Yale graduate, for many years a member of the faculty and always a close observer of the homo undergraduate, once (in a moment of exasperation, we take it) let drop a significant remark. The burden of the remark was that a majority of the students attending Yale ought to be taxed some several thousands of dollars a year in return for the privilege of attending college, while the remaining small minority should be paid double that amount for contributing themselves to the undergraduate community. Without doubt this observation, like the famous reports of Mark Twain's death, was slightly exaggerated. But it was not without its very considerable modicum of truth.—Yale Alumni Weekly.

Always Busy.

"And what do you do in the dull season?" we asked the fool killer.

"What dull season?" exclaimed the fool killer.

"Why, when the man who rocks the boat and the man who didn't know it was loaded quit operations. What do you do then?"

"Oh, I get on the trail of the man who knows it all," replied the fool killer.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

His Modest Request.

A man once asked Thackeray to lend him 5 shillings, which he would convert into £20,000. Asked how, he explained that he knew a young woman with £20,000 who he knew would marry him if he asked her, but he had pawned his teeth and wanted 5 shillings to redeem them in order to propose effectively.

Two Kinds.

"That man who paid a fortune for a bogus rare book must be a very indignant bibliophile."

"Well," replied Miss Cayenne, "there are bibliophiles, and then there are what Josh Billings would have called 'bibliophools.'"—Washington Star.

Deed of Daring.

"Have you 'Deeds of Daring?'" inquired the lady in the book store.

The Skin on Boiled Milk.

What causes the formation of the skin on the surface of boiled milk and of hot cocoa that is made with boiled milk? Dr. Porcher of Lyons, France, says that it is the result of the disintegrating of the lime caseinate in the milk. Heat separates the lime and the casein, and the lime combines with carbonic acid from the air to form a thin film of carbonate of lime. This film supports the undissolved casein in the film as well as some coagulated albumen and fat.

National Conversations.

If you see three men standing together on the sidewalk in any given country you can guess the subject of their conversation. In Germany it is the army; in Russia, the bureaucracy; in France, women; in the United States, business; in England, sport, and in Turkey nothing at all.—Brussels Journal.

TOMB OF JONAH.

Moslems Look Upon It as Sacred and Guard It From Intrusion.

The site of Nineveh is almost perfectly level, but adjoining the western wall are two huge mounds that conceal the palaces of the greatest kings of Nineveh. On the lower or southern mound stand a mosque and a village of considerable size, says a correspondent of the Christian Herald.

The village is named Nebi Yunus, or the Prophet Jonah, for the mosque contains the tomb in which Jonah is said to have been buried. The age of the tomb is uncertain, but it was probably built long after the Hebrew prophet's time. However, the place is now sacred, so sacred that pilgrims from afar visit it.

"I rode up the steep, narrow streets of the village to the mosque," writes the Herald's correspondent, "dismounted and entered the yard. A crowd of excited Arabs quickly surrounded me. I explained to a priest that I had come to see the grave of Jonah, and with a motion of the hand I made him understand that I should reward him. Removing my shoes, I followed the priest through a dark passageway.

"Then he pointed to a wall and said the tomb was just beyond. I wished to enter the prayer room, from which the tomb itself might be seen, but the place was considered far too sacred for my profane feet. The few Christians who have been permitted to see the tomb may only look through a small window into a dark chamber, in which a cloth covered mound is barely discernible. It is said that no Moslem will enter the inner shrine."

DRINKING IN EUROPE.

Munich Heads the List In the Quantity of Beer Consumed.

Norwegians are one of the most temperate of northern nations, consuming but 46½ pints of beer and 4½ of brandy per head of population yearly.

The Dane drinks on the average 156 pints of beer, but little wine, and only 30 pints of brandy each year. The Swede manages to consume 84 pints of beer and 13 of spirits. The Russian drinks 7½ pints of vodka and the same amount of beer. The Frenchman, however, takes 160 pints of wine, 15 of beer, 48 of brandy. The Britisher soothes himself with 9 pints of whisky or gin, 3 of claret and 228 of beer.

The Dutchman will drink 54 pints of beer and 12 of brandy. Taking every German province to obtain an average, it is found that the German consumes 187½ pints of beer, 10½ of wine and 9¾ of spirits. In Munich, however, the average amount per head rises to 850½ pints, being the highest of any province, while the lowest average obtains in the northern province of Alsatia. Here the inhabitants are satisfied with only 144 pints of beer per head.

The Italian is the least of all addicted to alcoholic beverages, taking only 3 pints of beer, 1¾ of alcoholic beverages and 144 of wine per head.—Pearson's Weekly.

Star Colors.

Professor Edward C. Pickering of Harvard has been able to show that Ptolemy had an excellent eye for color values; that William Herschel had a strong sense of red, but was a little weak on the blues; that the noted astronomer Sufi, of the tenth century, was another who had a good color vision; that of various other ancient astronomers some were weak on the reds and some on the blues. His assertions are based on the practical certainty that the color of the stars has not changed in these centuries. Most of the old astronomers have left records of the colors of the various stars, and these values he applied to standards established by taking the average color value of certain stars given by a number of Harvard observers.—Saturday Evening Post.

Able Assistant.

The small son of a clergyman who was noted for his tiresome sermons overheard two friends of his father saying how dry they were and how hard it was to keep awake during them. The following Sunday while the minister was preaching he was astounded to see his son throwing pebbles at the congregation from the gallery. The clergyman frowned angrily at him, when the boy piped out in a clear treble voice:

"It's all right, pop. You go on preaching. I'm keeping them awake."—Philadelphia Ledger.

"A young man," said the ready made philosopher, "should learn to say 'no.'"

Prank of a Lightning Flash.

During a thunderstorm in Deal, England, Minnie Rogers, seventeen years old, was walking along one of the small back streets of the town carrying a number of umbrellas, etc., when a vivid flash of lightning, evidently attracted by the steel frame of one of the umbrellas she was holding, ripped open her own umbrella, struck her and threw her violently to the ground. There was only one man in the street at the time, and he assisted her to rise. Strangely enough, when she had done so she found that all her clothes, umbrella and cap were perfectly dry, whereas before she had been drenched, for the rain poured down in torrents. Her description of her feelings was, "I felt just as though my head had been stung by a wasp, there was a singing noise in my ears and I seemed to see a bright light, like the sun, shining through my umbrella." With the exception of her hair being slightly singed, she sustained no injury.—Strand Magazine.

A New Kind of College Vacation

The most trying time of the college career of a youth—trying for his parents—is the vacation period. Very rich people, with large summer homes or those who can travel abroad, or who can spend money liberally for their boys while they go to seashore and mountain resorts do not worry about what to do with the boy when he comes home for vacation. The very poor, likewise, do not worry because the boy must go to work if on the farm, or into the factory or shop if in the city or town. But the average family is always at a loss as to how to give the college boy on vacation a good time without too much expense; to afford him recreation and outdoor life; and to avoid having him spend his time about the streets and shops, cheap theatres and the movies.

It would seem that the military student camps have solved the problem for a large majority of parents. The young men will have an outdoor life, recreation, and be under discipline, at the same time receiving instruction of a most valuable character. They will be taught how to care for a camp, care for accoutrements, besides military instruction which will be of great value to them in the future. Coming out of the military camps the young men would have a few weeks of unhampered vacation which would give them the real holiday before they returned to college.—From 'Military Camps for College Students' by Arthur Wallace Dunn, in the American Review of Reviews for March.

Cossack Troubadours.

Like the Spaniards, the Cossacks have a class of troubadours who instead of walking from village to village ride on horseback with their gusly and give performances of music and song in front of houses. They are treated with respect and rewarded generously according to their talents. There are also women troubadours among the Cossacks, and their performances in the pleasant surroundings of a garden or in a street scene are impressive.

British Death Duties.

Death duties on property in the British isles, whether belonging to natives or foreigners, are progressive, ranging upward from 1 per cent on estates of the value of between $500 and $2,500, 2 per cent between $2,500 and $5,000, 3 per cent between $5,000 and $25,000 and 15 per cent on estates of $5,000,000 and over.

There are also legacy and succession duties, varying in percentage.

YOU CAN'T EARN MONEY WHEN YOU'RE LAID UP

There are a lot of people in this town who cannot afford to be sick. Perhaps none of you feel that you can but certainly some of you can't, for as soon as you are sick, your wages stop and worry and debts begin to pile up. The sensible thing for you to do as soon as you feel run-down and wornout, no matter what the cause is to take something just as quick as you can to build up strength and health. Make yourself more comfortable and provide against serious sickness.

We don't believe there is any other medicine made that will do as much toward saving your health and thus helping you save your money as Rexal Olive Oil Emulsion. It is a medicine that gets right at the trouble and relieves it by toning the nerves, enriching the blood, and giving new strength and health to the whole body. It doesn't do this by means of alcohol or habit forming drugs, because it contains none. Its strength and health giving power is due to pure Olive Oil and the Hypophosphites' long endorsed by successful physicians, the one for its food value, the other for its tonic value. Here, for the first time they are combined, and the result is a real nerve, blood and body-building machine—a real strengthener that we are proud to tell you about. You don't need to hesitate in using it, because if it does'nt do all we say it will and satisfy you in every way, it will cost you nothing. If it does'nt make you strong and well again, come back and get your money. It will be given to you without word or question. Sold only at the more than 7,000 Rexall Stores, and in this town only by us. $1.00—B. J. Pulver, Tecumseh, Mich.

"IT'S THE BEST POLISH I EVER USED"

That's What Every One Says Who Tries

Black Silk Stove Polish

DON'T imagine for a moment that all brands of stove polish are the same. Don't get the idea that to keep a nice glossy shine on your stove you must black it every few days. It's not a question of oft-repeated application. It's a question of the stove polish to use.

Black Silk Stove Polish is so much better than other stove polishes that there is absolutely no comparison—it's in a class all by itself.

It makes a brilliant glossy shine that don't rub or dust off. It anneals to the iron—becomes a part of the stove. It makes old stoves look like new and lasts four times as long as any other shine.

Get a can and give it a trial. Try it on your parlor stove, your cook stove, or your gas range. If you do not find it the best stove polish you ever used, your dealer is authorized to refund your money. Black Silk Stove Polish has been made by the same formula and sold under one name for 30 years.

Here is what some of the ladies write us:

"I sent to you for a can of Black Silk Stove Polish and found it so much better than any I had ever used that I asked my hardware dealer to order a supply. He did so, and is now selling nearly everyone in the place your polish. I had no idea there could be such a difference in stove polishes."

"I was visiting friends and they used Black Silk Stove Polish on their stoves. It made the best shine I ever saw, and after blacking, the polish did not rub or dust off. It is way ahead of any polish I have ever used."

Ask Your Dealer for Black Silk Stove Polish and refuse a counterfeit brand. Costs you no more than the ordinary kind, so why not have the best. Made in liquid or paste—one quality.

ANGRY WATERS STILLED.

When They Reach the Wonderful "Oil Spot" Off Sabine Pass.

A freak of nature never fully described is the wonderful "oil spot," situated about ten miles south of Sabine pass, into which flows the Sabine river to the gulf of Mexico. The river forms the boundary between the states of Louisiana and Texas. The "oil spot" extends two miles along shore and seaward about three-quarters of a mile. A storm from the northeast, by way of east to southeast, has a rate of from 300 to 700 miles across the gulf of Mexico into this mystic haven.

During a gale this spot is wonderfully defined. Looking seaward the scene is grand. An acre of towering foam marks the abrupt dissolution of the lashing seas as they thunder toward the shore. This occurs in about three fathoms, or eighteen feet of water, from which the storm driven craft, creaking and straining in every timber, emerges and suddenly finds herself reposing like a child rocked in its mother's arms, hemmed in by a wall of wrath, where the weary mariner can be lulled to rest by the roar of the winds. The place is termed the "oil spot" not from any known analysis of its nature, but simply from its conditions—it has no troubled water.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

H. BREWER & CO. TEST OUT THEIR NEW ICE CUTTER

Tests have been made by the H. Brewer & Co. during the last few weeks with a new ice cutter, which is something quite different from any thing yet on the market. A circular saw propelled by a 5-horse power gasoline engine cuts into the ice the number of inches desired. It is also arranged to cut the cakes in any desired width. When the machine is set for action the engine is started, the saw lowered and it moves across the ice unassisted. A man follows, who turns it around, sets the guide runner in the groove already cut by the saw and starts it back again.

The machine weighs about 1200 lbs. and will cut 6 inches deep at the rate of from 60 to 75 ft. per minute. The one now being used is one the company has been experimenting with and is not a finished product. They are working on machines at the present time which will be equipped with a 10-horse power gasoline engine furnishing power enough to make a 12-inch cut at the rate of 90 to 100 ft. per day.

In this ice cutter it would seem the Brewer Co. had something that would do away with an endless amount of work and the manufacturing and sale of these cutters would add greatly to their already large business.

The Herald wishes them success.

TO THE VOTERS

We, the undersigned, candidates for Village offices on the Citizens Ticket, wish to make known to the voters the principals for which we will stand in the event we are elected to the respective offices for which we have been nominated.

The Village has acquired a contract with the Tecumseh Electric Company. This contract provides a graduated scale of prices for street lighting under the Mazda System. We wish to see that this contract is actually be a saving of at least $1080 annually to the Village; and that the contract is otherwise carried out to the letter.

We are in sympathy with the resolution adopted at the last Council Meeting to the effect thas the Village funds be placed in one of the local banks with interest on monthly balances, and will use our every effort to see that this resolution is fulfilled.

We stand for an economical business administration, and if elected, will endeavor to curtail the overhead running expenses of the several Village Departments.

Respectfully submitted,
John R. Nyland,

MONDAY CLUB

Lecture on Criminology Feb. 26th

It has been the custom of the ladies of the Monday Club to devote one evening out of the year to their gentlemen friends. This year they departed from their usual custom, which has been a feast and social evening and gave them a mental feast in the lecture of Chaplain E. A. Laugher of Jackson Prison who gave his talented lecture last Thursday evening at the Presbyterian church on "Criminology." Chap. Laugher handled his subject with a sure hand. He told of the responsibility of the cittzen for crime, the punishment and our neglect of the prisoner when released. His association with Prison life and Prison reform has given him great insight to this question and he gave his audience food for careful thought.

The Chaplain stated that this year Jackson Prison through the working out of its industries and farm experiments will make the Prison self sustaining and that the state of Michigan will not be called upon for a single penny for its maintainence.

The fact that this Prison is self-supporting is not alone the big gain but that it gives the prisoner a chance to prepare himself for a useful citizen when he has finished his sentence and he again goes out to face the world.

A good house greeted the Chaplain. Those present were grateful to the ladies of the Monday club for the opportunity of hearing Chap. Laugher.

"Grate Victory For Sence."

Two large orchards, side by side, brought much profit to Farmer Turmut and much trouble, for the orchards were considered fair game by the youth of the village and two orchards are harder to watch than one.

One day, looking from one orchard to the other, Turmut saw a small boy shin down a tree and, uttering a word of warning to another imp still up among the apples, ran off.

Turmut reached that tree in record time.

"Got yer this time!" he roared to the boy almost hidden among the leaves. "Come down!"

Getting no answer and not being in a hurry, he sat down and waited. Time passed, and still he waited, until a servant brought him a note that had just been dropped through the letter box. He did not wait after he had read it, as follows:

"Some people as apples, some as sence. You bin watchin a pare of trowsis stuffed with straw, and we bin gettin' your apples from the other orchard. Grate victory for sence!"—London Answers.

Chinese Women at Theaters.

In order to prevent trouble the various Chinese theaters and musical houses are not permitted to sell tickets to Chinese visitors with their women folk. But as there are some foreigners who wish to hear Chinese singing and music and always buy tickets for their wives and female friends and refuse to observe this rule, the owners of the musical houses and theaters petitioned the police about the matter. In reply the chief of the police said that as foreign men and women enjoy equal rights in their own countries and are permitted to make [illegible] with each other without restriction they should not be treated in the same way as Chinese women [illegible] so the owners are permitted to [illegible] foreign women theater goers to [illegible] together with their male friends, but [illegible] females are still not allowed [illegible] the same privilege.—Peking Gazette.

AFTER PASSING YEARS.

Tecumseh Testimony Remains Unshaken.

Time is the best test of truth. Here is a Tecumseh story that has stood the test of time. It is a story with a point which will come straight home to many of us.

Mrs. George Burroughs, W Potawatamie St. Tecumseh, Mich., says: "My whole body ached and my strength and energy left. Knowing several people in Tecumseh who had been helped by Doan's Kidney Pills, I got a supply of this remedy at Wright's & Sons Drug Store and began using it. In a few weeks I improved in every way and the pains and aches were thing of the past. I cheerfully endorse Doan's Kidney Pills again for the benefit they brought me has been permanent."

Mrs. Burroughs is only one of the many Tecumseh people who have gratefully endorsed Doan's Kidney Pills. If your back aches—if your kidneys bother you, don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—ask distinctly for Doan's Kidney Pills, the same that Mrs. Burroughs had—the remedy backed by home testimony. 50c all stores. A contented man may be too lazy to kick.

Sacred Deer.

From time immemorial deer have been held in reverent regard by the Japanese. Herds are kept in compounds, and the highest respect is paid to the animals. In olden times the shogun gave the people such a strict order to protect the sacred animals that if any one happened to hurt or kill them he was put to death on the spot. It was a period of terror. Even at the present day the deer are so tame and abundant in the shrine grounds that they in fine weather stroll round to the streets by twos and threes and surround passersby, asking for food and even taking the persons' sleeves in their mouths affectionately. Once a year some of the deer are caught by means of a net with a handle by several tamers (in service of the Kasuga shrine office) and taken to an inclosure, where their splendid horns are cut off with a saw, while a crowd of spectators watch the work with breathless interest (admission 10 sen, equal to about 5 cents). This done, some of the sacred horns are, as a custom, awarded to the spectators by means of lottery.

Disillusion.

The unmarried woman who shall be the subject of this anecdote was fixing herself up to go out in the evening. A certain man was going to call for her, and though the occasion was somewhat spoiled by the fact that they would have to take her little niece along she nevertheless took the usual care of her complexion, hair and eyes, for the man was trembling on the verge of a proposal. The trio—auntie, auntie's beau and auntie's niece—walked along the street until they came to one of those all night photograph galleries. You know how awful a person looks standing in the ghastly glare of the mercury tube lights that they put in the windows of such places? Well, they paused in that awful greeny-yallery light. And the little niece said to auntie's beau:

"Ooo-ooh, look! Auntie looks just like she does when she first gets up in the morning!"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

King of Flowers.

On the score of age alone the peony should command the interest of all flower lovers. It has a history which began many hundreds of years ago. The tree peony, Paeonia moutan, is a native of China. This peony, more than any other flower, has been the glory and pride of the Chinese for nearly 1,500 years and has been a subject for their painters and a theme for their poets. In China for more than 3,000 years a record has been kept of the percentage of seedlings of this peony and their characteristics. Its great beauty and fragrance made it centuries ago the favorite flower of China's emperors, and it was called Hwa Wang, king of flowers.—Suburban Life.

KIDNAPING IS FEARED OF MILLIONAIRE'S SON

Everett Englehart, Gary, Ind., Missing Since Tuesday.

Gary Ind., March 2.—Everett Englehart, thirteen-year-old son of Timothy W. Englehart, the "Duke of Ridge Road," a millionaire real estate dealer of Gary, has been missing since last Tuesday. He had $300 when last seen. He is believed to have been kidnaped and is being held for ransom.

The boy, who is large for his age, left home in company with "Red" Hanlon, a young man well known about Gary pool rooms, and went to Michigan City. His parents were in Benton Harbor, Mich., that day and did not know of the trip. When they returned home next day the boy was gone.

Private detectives learned that Hanlon had gone with the boy to a savings bank, where he had drawn $300.

They were traced to Michigan City, where they had registered at the Schultz hotel. From there no trace can be found of the boy. He is accustomed to travel and only recently returned from a trip to Panama with his father.

CARRANZA DENIES U.S. RIGHT

Rebel Leader Holds Great Britain May Act in Benton Case.

Nogales, Conora, Mex., March 2.—General Carranza has declined to furnish information to the state department at Washington regarding the killing at Juarez of the British subject, William S. Benton. At the same time he gave assurances to Secretary Bryan that he would investigate the disappearance near Juarez of Gustav Bauch, an American citizen.

The stand was taken by the revolutionary leader that the death of Benton, a Briton, should be taken up through the diplomatic channels of his country. It is thought that this is an effort of Carranza to secure recognition of the constitutionalists by Great Britain, which has recognized the Huerta government.

Proof Villa Killed Benton.

Washington, March 2.—William S. Benton, the British subject slain at Juarez, was unarmed and was shot to death in Villa's office, pistol bullets through the stomach ending his life, according to conclusive information which has reached Washington officials.

Benton caried no arms when he approached Villa's office in Juarez, according to information; he spent two hours waiting for the interview that ended in his death walking back and forth in front of the office building; he was shot through the stomach after he entered the office and received other wounds afterward, although the first was mortal.

Illinois State League.

Champaign, Ill., March 2.—A six-club league, to be known as the Illinois State league, is groomed as the successor to the Illinois-Missouri league. Lincoln, Streator, Kankakee, Champaign, Ottawa, and either La Salle or Peru are the cities regarded by President Cline as likely to constitute the reorganized league.

Shoot Their Wives and Suicide.

Hammond, Ind., March 2.—John Spanner shot his wife as they stood in front of a restaurant in the business district and ended his own life. Mrs. John Zapadat was wounded by her husband, who committed suicide. Both women probably will die.

Victoria Water Lilies.

The giant water lilies which are known now as Victorias, after the late queen of England, are natives of the warmer portions of South America, where they thrive in lagoons and in the quieter portions of rivers. Haenke, a German botanist, first reported their discovery in 1801 and startled all Europe by his description of their gigantic leaves and flowers. Almost half a century elapsed in fruitless experiments to introduce the plant into the old world when in 1849 the first flower opened on the Duke of Devonshire's estate at Chatsworth, England.

The Secret of Baldness.

The actual condition of the scalp and of the hair has very much less to do with the health of the latter than is popularly supposed. The bulbs of the roots of the hair go down completely through the skin and into the fatty layer which lies between it and the skull, and the thing that to the expert eye is really significant of the prospect as to progress or cure in a particular case of baldness is not the condition or color or cleanliness of the scalp, but the thickness or thinness of this fatty layer which underlies it. So long as this is present and the scalp is freely movable over the skull there is hope of restoring a reasonable growth of hair, but when this fat has been absorbed and the shiny scalp sticks as closely to the skull as the cover on a baseball the outlook is practically hopeless. This, of course, shows at once the futility of most of the local applications to and manipulations of the scalp, from which it suffers untold torments in those who are or imagine themselves to be becoming bald.

A Preparatory Course.

There is a judge in Salem, Mass., who, behind a benignant exterior, hides an occasional surprise for persistent evildoers. Not long ago there came up before him for sentence two youths who had been guilty of a long sequence of misdeeds. Both were under age, each having just passed his nineteenth birthday. Having been caught with the goods on them, they had pleaded guilty in the hope of getting off with a light punishment.

The judge adjusted his glasses and through them beamed softly at the young lawbreakers.

"Now, then, boys," he said softly, "I'm going to send you two to the state reformatory for two years apiece"—his voice suddenly changed—"and while you're there you can both be studying for the state penitentiary."—Saturday Evening Post.

Colors of the Rainbow.

Violet, indigo, blue, green, yellow, orange and red are the colors of the rainbow. Most are sure of that. It is true, however, of only a very few rainbows. The colors of rainbows vary with their width, and their width varies with the size of the raindrops, big drops producing narrow bows with bright, clearly defined colors, small drops producing wide bows with pale colors. Here are the colors as generally seen: First, when the raindrops average one millimeter in diameter, violet, light blue, bluish green, green, yellow, orange, light red, dark red; second, when the drops average three-tenths of a millimeter in diameter, violet, light blue, bluish green, green, yellow, orange, and, third, when the drops average one-tenth of a millimeter, very pale violet, violet, whitish blue, whitish green.

In an Egyptian Hotel.

Soft rugs—real oriental rugs—comfort one's feet; vistas and glimpses of things half seen through arches and doorways soothe the eyes. Oh, those half concealed nooks behind screens of tall palms, where one finds a luxurious couch and inlaid taboret and sips his tiny cup of Turkish coffee! A dragoman comes into the lobby with a bunch of luscious La France roses in his bronzed hand. The porter, in gorgeous livery of green and gold, motions him to an Arab servant in starchy white, with broad red girdle and tarboosh, and golden hoops in his ears. On the second floor, as you go to your room, every servant on guard along the corridor rises and salutes as you pass, and you feel you really are somebody worth while—you get a little better opinion of yourself.—Suburban Life.

Measles and Morals.

Miss Rosamond Napier, in "Tess Harcourt," has this little gem of a story:

"Another little boy to see you, miss," said old Robson, the butler, to Tess.

This was a very fiery red but clean little boy, holding tightly a book covered in black cloth.

"Well, Tommy?"

"Please, miss, I've bringed back the lib'ry book as you give Sunday, as we've got measles."

Tess beamed all over her face. At last her words were bearing fruit.

"Good boy, Tommy!" she encouraged. "Who has got them in your house?"

"Me, miss, please. I broked out Tuesday."

Oratorios In English.

Speaking of the wonderful enunciation of Sims Reeves, Sir Frederic Cowen relates an anecdote illustrative of the opposite effect. "One could always understand what he was singing about, not like a certain other artist of the time (it is true she was German), who invariably turned the words of Mendelssohn's 'Oh, for the wings of a dove!' into 'Oh, for-ty winks, for-ty winks!'"

Improve Yourself.

If a man cannot improve himself, how can he improve others? When we see noble men we should think of equaling them. When we see evil characters we should turn our look inward and examine ourselves. Only he who has the most complete sincerity under heaven can transform and inspire others.

His Own Medicine.

"If you marry him," said her papa, who was exhibiting symptoms of violent displeasure, "I will not only have to support him, but I will have to pay his debts too."

But the pretty girl and petulant young thing who was hanging to his coat lapels was not moved by the argument.

"Now, papa," she said, "you know well enough that Fred has to live just the same as other men, and as to his debts, I've heard you say hundreds of times that a man's debts ought to be paid."—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

Don't Make A Mistake

We all make mistakes occasionally But the man who goes on making the same mistake continually is, to say the least, not a very wise man.

One of the easiest mistakes in the world to make is to buy inferior lumber at the same price that the very best would cost you. If you don't know that we are perfect cranks on quality, and that you can buy a much better grade of lumber here at the same price a lower grade material would cost you elsewhere, then you have something yet to learn.

But don't make the mistake of not investigating and getting our prices before you buy again.

WORST STORM SINCE 1888

Nine and One-Half Inches of Snow Falls in New York City; Funds Are Exhausted From Other Storms; Milk Famine Feared—Hundreds Wait in Stations and Railway Cars.

NEW YORK. — New York and a large part of the east are suffering from one of the worst storms in their history. Five persons have been killed, so far as reported, railroad traffic is tied up and wire communication crippled. Strees and sidewalks are covered with an icy coating, making walking difficult and dangerous, and vehicle traffic is almost impossible. Few trains are leaving over any of the main trunk lines for the west and south and street car and elevated traffic in the city and suburbs is lame and in some instances suspended.

Not since the blizzard of 1888, to which old residents point as the worst in the history of the city, has a storm resulted in so much suffering. A milk famine is feared, because of the suspended train service in New Jersey and New York state.

Nine and one half inches of snow fell during the day and when it stopped a howling gale set in. The temperature, which had remained at a few degrees above freezing, dropped many degrees, freezing the slush and snow that covered the streets.

Street Cleaners Swamped.

With only 50 per cent of the snow from the two previous storms removed from the principal streets, the city street cleaning department faced a new problem. Already $980,000 has been spent in snow removal work and city officials were unable to make an estimate of the probable cost of the naislatest storm.

With its telegraph wires down, signals crippled and tracks drifted high with snow, the Pennsylvania railroad made no attempt to run a train out of New York after 7 o'clock, and all incoming trains from the west and south arrived from two to eleven hours late. A local train from Atlantic City arrived at 4:30 o'clock, seven hours and fifty-three minutes late. The conductor reported that the storm was still raging along the coast and that the snow was drifting badly.

In the Pennsylvania railroad station forty sleeping cars remained on the tracks all night. In them were 800 passengers, many of whom slept peacefully ignorant that they were not on their way to their destination

Hundreds Wait in Stations.

In the waiting rooms were hundreds of persons waiting for the resumption of traffic. Lunchrooms and dining halls were kept open all night for their accommodation.

Trains on the New York Central lines fared little better. Points up state could not be reached by wire and the wherabouts of several incoming mail and passenger trains could not be learned. Among other trains reported lost was the Twentieth Century limited. Between Peeksville and Cold Springs, a distance of elevn miles, thirty broken telegraph poles are down. Albany and Buffalo were out of communication and New York Central trains between these points were reported lost. The storm put nearly every wireless station along the coast hereabouts out of commission and after 6 o'clock communication with ships at sea was impossible. The aerials of the station were so crippled with sleet and snow as to render them useless.

Some Say More Were Frozen Than Hunters Killed Last Season.

BODY IS BURNED TO HIDE CRUSHED HEAD

Friend of Recluse Is Held for Death of Latter.

WEST BRANCH, MICH.—In a very rude, unfinished story and a half house, Charles Bottsfield's head was battered in. Then his body was dragged to the barn and the building fired in the hope that the ruins would hide the tragedy. That is the supposition on which the county officers are working. A trail of blood leading from the barn to the read door of the cottage was found.

The Bottsfield home is about thirty miles from here, in an isolated spot on the pine plains. Bottsfield's loneliness was shared by John Hammond, fifty-six years old, a trapper. Hammond is now in jail on the charge of having caused the death of his friend. Bottsfield was fifty-five years old.

Hammond said he and Bottsfield had been up Wednesday night and that he loaned him $25 to pay a note After obtaining the loan, Bottsfield went to the barn with his lantern, Hammond said. The lantern was found near the body, also a knife.

Hammond alleged that some time later, he looked out of the window and saw the barn afire.

Hammond is separated from his wife, and Bottsfield's wife has been dead for some time.

UNION LEADER TELLS OF HIS DEPORTATION

Tanner Says Guns Were Used on Him and Moyer.

HANCOCK, MICH. — Charles H. Tanner, auditor of the Western Federation of Miners, took the stand before the congressional committee and described the deportation of Charles H. Moyer and himself.

"Moyer was standing at the telephone in his room," Tanner said, "when there was a rap on the door. I was standing beside the bed and Moyer himself opened the door with his free hand. A crowd of twenty or thirty rushed in, shouting, 'Where is Moyer? Where is Moyer?' At the same time three men covered me with automatic revolvers. Then Moyer, by the telephone, replied. 'I am Moyer.'

"Several men made a rush for him and bent him over almost double. Another man rushed in from the hallway and struck Moyer, as he was bent over, on the head with a revolver. The gun exploded and Moyer was wounded in the back."

Tanner said Moyer and he were then rushed out of the room, down the stairs and out of the hotel. They were hustled across the bridge to Houghton, where they were placed on a train for Chicago in charge of two deputies, one named Hensley, and warned if they ever came back they would be hanged. On the bridge the witness said he was struck over the eye by his captor and he showed the committee a scar resulting from the blow.

MRS. EDWARDS IS PARDONED

Four Governors Had Refused to Fix Date of Execution.

READING, PA. — Mrs. Kate Edwards, who has been in the shadow of the gallows for nearly thirteen years, for the killing of her husband, was released from the Berks county jail, under a pardon granted by Governor Tener and secretly taken from the city to begin life over again. She was convicted of first degree murder in 1901, and sentenced to be hanged, but four governors declined to fix a day for her execution.

Mrs. Edwards was convicted of the murder with a negro, who was afterward granted a new trial and acquitted. The husband was found dead with his head battered in. A short time after her arrest Mrs. Edwards gave birth to a negro child.

T. B. Easterday of this city, upper Michigan's "marrying parson."

Mr. Easterday was ordained a Presbyterian minister half a century ago and has performed nearly 2,500 marriages. He retired from an active pastorate years ago.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.—A plot to dynamite the partly completed building of the Peninsular club at Ottawa avenue and Fountain street was discovered when a workman employed by the contractors discovered dynamite planted at the base of one of the steel pillars in the basement.

The dynamite bore the brand of the Ajax company, of Saginaw, and was wrapped in a copy of a Detroit newspaper.

WATCHMAN BARS THE PRESIDENT

Chief Executive Is Halted in Patent Office Stroll.

HE FAILED TO SEE 3 O'CLOCK

"But Who Are You?" Faltered the Interceptor—"I am Mr. Woodrow Wilson, President of the United States," and He Entered—President Had Changed His Usual Walk.

WASHINGTON. — Shortly after three o'clock in the afternoon a man of medium height, dressed in a gray suit and wearing a gray hat, walked up the steps of the front entrance to the patent office. Evidently he had walked briskly for his face was glowing with the cold. He failed to notice a sign at the entrance reading: "No Visitors Admitted After 3 O'clock."

The pedestrian had opened the door when the white-haired watchman stepped forward and barred his way.

"The office is closed for the day; you cannot enter," said the watchman. Then he added as if he was in doubt, "but who are you?"

"I am Mr. Woodrow Wilson."

"I am Mr. Woodrow Wilson, the president of the United States," he replied.

"Well, then," falteringly said the watchman. "I thought there was something familiar about your face. Come right in."

The president, who was accompanied by his physician, Dr. Cary T. Grayson and two secret service operatives, walked in and made a tour of the patent office. He examined with interest records of recent patents which have been issued.

The president's walk lasted about three quarters of an hour. He chose it in preference to an automobile ride or a game of golf which are his accustomed forms of recreation.

ADMITS SHE DON'T KNOW ALL

Woman Beaten at Chicago Polls Rests Up in Indiana.

FRENCH LICK, IND. — Mrs. Paul Gerhardt, defeated for the nomination of alderman in Chicago, arrived at French Lick Springs to recuperate, having had only six hours' sleep in five days. She declared that she had only begun the fight for political recognition and would be a candidate for office again at the next election.

"Some woman must be willing to devote a good deal of money to acquiring political experience," she said, "and I decided to be the pioneer. I figured that campaign expenses for the office of alderman, which pays $3,000, would amount to $10,000. Women must be educated; they are not prepared to vote intelligently. My experience proves that, without education, they are no cleaner in politics than the men. The candidate is disappointed to discover that generally they vote according to their husband's predilections."

Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation. adv.

The man who tries to run an automobile on a wheelbarrow income deserves a jolt.

Foley Cathartic Tablets are entirely effective, thoroughly cleansing and are always pleasant in action. They contain blue flag, are a remedy for constipation and sluggish liver, and a tonic to the bowels, which are improved by their use. Try them. They do not fail to give relief and satisfaction.

For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh.

When a man lives a double life he may have to do two mens work, so what's the use?

Avoid Stuffy Wheezy Breathing.

Take Foley's Honey and Tar Compound for an inflamed and congested condition of the air passages and bronchial tubes. A cold developes quickly if not checked and bronchitis, lagrippe and pneumonia are dangerous possibilities. Harsh racking coughs weaken the system, but Foley's Honey and Tar is safe, pure and certain in results. Contains no opiates. For sale by all Druggists of Tecumseh. adv

Kickapoo Worm Killer Expels Worms.

The cause of your child's ills—the foul, fetid, offensive breath—The starting up with terror and grinding of teeth while asleep. The sallow complexion—The dark circles under the eyes—All are indications of worms. Kickapoo Worm Killer is what your child needs: it expels the worms, the cause of the child's unhealthy condition. For the removal of seat, stomach and pin worms, Kickapoo Worm Killer gives sure relief. Its laxative effect adds tone to the general system. Supplied as a candy confection—children like it. Buy box today. Price 25c. All Druggists or by mail. Kickapoo Indian Med. Co. Phila. or St. Louis. adv

Every time a small man is called upon to lay a corner stone he cackles.

Best Family Laxative

Beware of constipation. Use Dr. King's New Life Pills and keep well. Mrs. Charles E. Smith, of West Franklin, Me., calls them "our family laxative." Nothing better for adults or aged. Get them today, 25c. Recommended by C. A. Wright & Son. adv

It's far easier to call a spade a spade than it is to swing a pick.

Plain Truth that's Worth Money

Using Foley's Honey and Tar for a cough or cold may save you both sickness and money. F. F. Monahan, Menomonie, Wis., says: "I am exposed to all kinds of weather and I find Foley's Honey and Tar Compound always fixes me up in good shape when I catch cold or have a bad cough. I recommend it gladly." Refuse substitutes. For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh. adv

The deserving poor are usually those who don't deserve to be.

Disordered Kidneys Cause Much Misery

With pain and misery by day, sleep-disturbing bladder weakness at night, tired, nervous run-down men and women everywhere are glad to know that Foley Kidney Pills restore health and strength, and the regular action of kidneys and bladder.

For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh. Advt.

As for trouble the supply always exceeds the demand.

Stubborn, Annoying Coughs Cured

"My husband had a cough for fifteen years and my son for eight years. Dr. King's New Discovery completely cured them, for which I am most thankful," writes Mrs. David Moor, of Saginaw, Ala. What Dr. King's New Discovery did for these men, it will do for you. Dr. King's New Discovery should be in every home. Stops hacking coughs, relieves la grippe and all throat and lung ailments. Money back if it fails. All druggists. Price 50c and $1.00. Recommended by C. A. Wright & Son. adv

Hens can moult but fat people have no such sinecure.

TO THE PUBLIC

It seemingly having become the fashion for candidates for Village offices to announce a platform, the undersigned candidates upon the People's Ticket pledge themselves as follows:

That the contract with the Electric Light Company be performed by both parties thereto. adopting such lights for street purposes as have been contemplated during the negotiations for the present contract.

We approve of the designation by the Council of a depository of the village funds, and expect, however, that this matter will be completed by the present Council before it retires:

We believe that there should be a complete audit and account of cost made of the water works system of the Village, and that the cost being ascertained. It should be made self supporting, instead of having deficits made up by general taxation. What were believed to be ample funds for the purpose, having been already appropriated and paid into the treasury by the tax payers, though never as yet used for this purpose, we believe that those funds should be used IMMEDIATELY in providing whatever additional water supply may be necessary for the ample protection of our people under all conditions.

We believe in requiring the full performance of duties by all officers and servants of the Village, and full performance of all contracts to which the Village may be a party:

Should it be the expressed desire of any considerable number of the citizens of this Village that an effort be made to change our present form of government to the socalled commission form, we should deem it our duty to authorize and conduct a thorough investigation into the same, and to give the citizens of the Village an opportunity to make the change, if they so desire:

We believe that the public office is a public trust, and expect and intend, if elected, to give to our respective public duties the same thoughtful attention and judgement that we would devote to our individual private affairs, to the end that the public offices be administered justly, wisely and economically.

NATIONAL GRANGE POLICY

Just what the good roads policy of the National Grange is, may be readily understood from the resolutions adopted by the National Grange at Manchester, N. H. The vote for adoption was unanimous and not a murmur arose from any quarter against the resolutions. Let every patron reserve these resolutions and keep them in a handy spot ready to furnish instant and adequate answer to any question which anybody may ask as to how the National Grange stands on good roads. Here are the resolutions in full as unanimously adopted at Manchester:

"Whereas, the grange has been the pioneer in the good road movement and the sentiment is practically universal and there is great danger of this sentiment being diverted toward the construction of scenic highways and boulevards for the benefit of tourists and pleasure seekers, rather than for the business interests of the general public; and

"Whereas, the roads needed first are those which put the farmer in close touch with the trading centers and enable the producer and consumer to reach each other quickly, inexpensively and easily, and save the farmer much money in the cost and enables the consumer to receive a share of the benefit; and

"Whereas, while the scenic road advertises the state, the interior highway develops its resources, the former are desirable when they can be afforded, but the latter are indispensable, therefore, be it

"Resolved, by the National Grange in this the 47th annual session that the old adage, 'business before pleasure' is especially true in regards to the location and construction of public highways: and be it further

"Resolved, that the legislative committees of the grange, both national and state, are urged to use every honorable endeavor to secure first business roads that will serve the best interests of both the producer and consumer.

"Resolved further, that we are opposed to the many bonding schemes advanced by those seeking touring roads, believing that the 'pay-as you-go' policy is more business-like. Whereas, roads are local affairs and the controy should remain with the state and people in whose midst they are: therefore

"Resolved further, that the national and state governments should provide general standards of roads toward which aid is given and protect themselves by inspection, and a refusal to make payment for any road falling below standards. This would do away with a lot of expensive machinery."

This is our position exactly. The county road system exactly meets the requirements of those resolutions. A farm to market system of country roads is the purpose of the county road law. Those who are opposing the adoption of the county road plan are picturing it as something different from what it really is. It is in no sense a bonding proposition, nor does it contemplate the building of scenic highways or automobile boulevards. It is strictly a farmers law passed by a farmers legislature to establish a system of farm to market roads in each township in every county that sees fit to profit by its adoption.

Mr Voter, don't let the bug-a-gear of scenic boulevards for the use of automobiles, scare you into believing that this is the purpose of the county system. The county system is merely a plan where the roads of a county are taken over by a commission working under the direction of the board of supervisors, and improved by the county at large, that is the cost is assessed against ALL the taxable property of the county both real and personal. The law very wisely provides that no tax in any one year shall exceed two mills or $2.00 on every $1,000 00 of assessed valuation, thus if your farm is assessed for $5,000 00 the greatest tax you would be required to pay in any one year would be $10 00. Would not an improved road, even though it was a mile or two or three distant from your home, be worth $10.00 a year to you?

Hillsdale County has built over 19¼ miles of state award road at an average cost of $2,177.00 per mile, the the state paid an average of $525 per mile for reward making the net cost to the locality of $1652 per mile. Monroe County has built nearly 23¼ miles of macadam road at an average cost of $4084 per mile, the state paid an average of $1000 per mile making the net cost to the locality of $3084 per mile. Washtenaw County has built nearly 2¼ miles of gravel road at a cost of $2442 per mile, the state paid an award of $500 per mile making the net cost to the locality of $1943 per mile. Jackson County has built over 25¼ miles of improved roads at an average cost of $2933 per mile the state paid an average of $700 per mile making the net cost to the locality of $2333 per mile, 4 miles of these roads were Macadam.

These are facts, Mr. Taxpayer, taken from the records of the State Highway department. The above roads you have helped to build. Is it not time that Lenawee asked these other counties to help build her roads? Vote for the county system, for that is the system under which you will actually get highway improvement.

Why should Lenawee County contribute these sums of money to the state and receive no benefits in return? At the last session of the legislature the following appropriations were made for improved roads in the state:

For general appropriation - $470,000
For deficiency - - - - - - 150,000

Of which sum Lenawee Co will pay $13,088,20. It is estimated that the new automobile tax will take out of this county $15,000 per year, all of which goes into the state highway fund for use upon the roads of the whole state. In addition to this the 22 townships in this county appropriate a certain amount each year for road work. last year it amounted to $125,000, that will be used for road work or a sum sufficient to build over five miles of improved road in each of the several townships of the county. The share we pay the state and the automobile tax will be a total loss to the county unless it comes back in the form of awards for building good roads. The best way to receive the above is by adopting the county system. Your taxes cannot be more than two mills or two dollars on each thousand dollars of assessed valuation.

The actual loss occasioned by bad roads in the hauling by the farmer of his products to market is hard to get at in dollars and cents but here is an illustration that gives actual figures in only one product in one community. The cost of hauling milk to the condensery at Hudson over our bad roads is 17 cents per hundred; the cost of hauling milk to the condensery at Delta, O., over their good roads is 12 cents per hundred. An average of 90,000 pounds of milk is received at Hudson per day at a loss of $45 or $16,425 per year. This is not a guess or an estimate, but actual figures. The loss on the hauling of milk is no more than the loss of hauling any other product. Imagine, if you can, what the total loss is in Lenawee Co, occasioned by these bad roads. These facts do not include the wear and tear on horses and vehicles. You should think of this as a question of saving of waste rather than as an additional expense..

Study this question; profit by the experiences of others. When 54 counties out of 83 have adopted this system, can there be any unfairness, any inequality in the law? Do we, of Lenawee, know more than the people of these other counties?

Do not consider the county system a complicated, burdensome plan for improving the roads. for it is very simple as you will see the more you study it. You will find, if you analyze it carefully, that it is the most feasible, the most economical, and the most equitable plan for improving the highways of this county.

If you vote YES April 6th you will never regret it.

LOCAL WOMAN NOW A BIG ADVERTISER

When one of our women customers recently bought five bottles of Harmony Hair Beautifier to give to her friends for Christmas, she started all by herself a mighty big advertising campaign because not only does each one of the women to whom she gave a bottle of the Beautifier now consider it indespensable for the proper care of the hair, but each of them has been the means of getting several of her friends to use it. As a consequense, if things keep on in this way for a few months longer, we will be selling more of it than all other hair preparations combined. Sprinkle a little Harmony Hair Beautifier on your hair each time before combing it. Contains no oil—will not change color of hair, nor darken gray hair.

To keep hair and scalp dandruff-free and clean, use Harmony Shampoo. This pure liquid shampoo gives an instantaneous rich lather that immediately penetrates to every part of hair and scalp, insuring a quick, thorough cleansing. Washed off just as quickly, the entire operation takes only a few moments. Contains nothing that can harm the hair; leaves no harshness or stickiness—just a sweet cleanliness.

Both preparations come in odd-shaped, very ornamental bottles, with sprinkler tops. Harmony Hair Beautifier, $1.00. Harmony Shampoo 50c. Both guaranteed to satisfy you in every way, or your money back. Sold only at the more than 7,000 Rexall Stores, and in this town only by us. B. J. Pulver Tecumseh Mich adv.

Tecumseh Testimony Remains Unshaken.

Time is the best test of truth. Here is a Tecumseh story that has stood the test of time. It is a story with a point which will come straight home to many of us.

Mrs. George Burroughs, W. Potawatamie St. Tecumseh, Mich., says: "My whole body ached and my strength and energy left. Knowing several people in Tecumseh who had been helped by Doan's Kidney Pills, I got a supply of this remedy at Wright's & Son's Drug Store and began using it. In a few weeks I improved in every way and the pains and aches were thing of the past. I cheerfully endorse Doan's Kidney Pills again for the benefit they brought me has been permanent."

Mrs. Burroughs is only one of the many Tecumseh people who have gratefully endorsed Doan's Kidney Pills. If your back aches—if your kidneys bother you, don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—ask distinctly for Doan's Kidney Pills, the same that Mrs. Burroughs had—the remedy backed by home testimony. 50c all stores. NEWS OF THE STATE

Two Confess Arson Charge.

BAY CITY, MICH. — Egbert F. Amy and Walter Goldsworthy, the latter a merchant at Pinconning, and Amy a contractor in Bay City, have both made complete confessions of their connection with the burning of the millinery store building of Rose Johnson at Pinconning, on July, last.

On the afternoon of July 11, Amy, Goldsworthy, Mrs. Johnson and her sister, Anna McDonald, of Bay City, indulged in an orgy in the woods near Pinconning. Later in the night Amy took a can of varnish which he says Goldsworthy, who had previously approached him, gave him, and entering the building, found a box of papers in the dark, and after pouring the varnish upon it and around on the floor, set fire to it and fled.

Phenomenal Alfalfa Yield.

EAST LANSING, MICH.—A record breaking alfalfa plant has been raised at the Michigan Agricultural college by Professor Spragg. This plant has yielded 80.5 grams of seed, which is said to be a phenomenal return.

To Michigan as well as other states the new champion may mean lower meat prices. The seed is likely to increase supply of seed, and at the same time make possible a high-yielding variety of alfalfa. If this comes about, it will provide more and cheaper food for livestock, which will in turn mean lower priced beef.

Woman Goes Crazy on Train.

ADRIAN, MICH.—Miss Margaret Kimmell, While traveling alone on a Wabash train from Buffalo to her home in Milwaukee, was stricken with hysteria, which developed into violent insanity. It took several members of the train crew to control the woman, who persisted in battering up seats. Passengers became panic stricken.

Miss Kimmell was taken to the Bixby hospital when the train reached Adrian. Before her sudden illness the girl said she was robbed in Buffalo and had nothing left except her ticket to Milwaukee.

Lauds Convict for Bravery.

JACKSON, MICH. — Through the heroism of Roy Parks, an escaped convict who has just been returned to Jackson prison from New Orleans, the life of Richard Meredith, captain of police in New Orleans, was saved, according to a story which is told by the officer who brought Parks back to Jackson prison.

A prisoner, Clarence Linden, confined in the prison at New Orleans, had plotted to kill Meredith, and would have succeeded had not Parks interfered.

Train Kills Vassar Woman.

VASSAR, MICH.—Mrs. Matthew Carpenter, sixty years of age, living four and one-half miles southeast of here at Cobb's Crossing, in Vassar township, while driving a horse and cutter in company with her fifteen-year-old granddaughter was struck by a southbound Michigan Central passenger train and instantly killed. The horse was also killed. Her husband was killed by lightning two and one-half years ago.

The granddaughter was seriously hurt.

Offer to Sell Tabernacle.

BATTLE CREEK, MICH.—The Seventh Day Adventists offered their tabernacle, the largest church in Michigan, to chamber of commerce officials for $35,000 for a convention hall.

Formerly Battle Creek had thousands of Adventists, but since "Mother" Ellen G. White quarreled with Dr. J. H. Kellogg and ordered "the faithful" to move to Washington there are only 500 members of the local church.

PONTIAC, MICH.—Daniel L. Davis, president of the Oakland county Pioneer and Historical society, has donated $5,000 of a $50,000 fund to be raised to erect a library and museum in the business section of Pontiac.

Mr. Davis was directed to name a committee of five to work out the details. His contribution was made at a meeting of the society.

Dies Beside Her Children.

BAY CITY, MICH. — Mrs. Herbert Wright dropped dead while witnessing a moving picture play at the Wenonah theater.

She was sitting between her two children, a daughter of twelve, and son of seven, when she gave a gasp and stiffened in her place. She died before medical aid reached her.

Can't Raise Beets, Anyhow.

VASSAR, MICH.—Jacob Heck, who is a sugar beet grower, living eight miles north of here, was arrested for assault and battery on his wife, who is in a serious condition. He pleaded guilty and was fined $52.50 or ninety days in jail.

He had the money, but took the ninety days.

Dividend Will Be $44,000.

MEND YOUR BROKEN CHINA.

Use a Cement Made With Plaster of Paris and Gum Arabic.

I had such a pretty Dresden china comb and brush tray for my dressing table which was broken into three pieces just the other day by some one dropping a heavy pair of curling irons on it. I was almost heart broken because it was part of a set, and I was afraid I could not replace it, and even if I could I did not feel that I could afford to do so.

One of my friends told me she had been successful in mending several pieces of old china which were treasured heirlooms with plaster of paris and gum arabic. Make a thick solution of gum arabic and water and into it put the plaster until the mixture becomes a paste. This is applied to the edges of the china, which are pressed firmly together.

I tried it on my tray, and it worked like magic. The solution is white, so that it does not show like glue, and, best of all, it makes such a strong joint that they tell me that the article never breaks again the same place.—Philadelphia Ledger.

MICHIGAN WILL SAVE HEAVILY IN PRINTING

Chicago Concern Cuts Local Bid to Get Even.

LANSING, MICH.—Just because 'Old Jim' Callahan, who is the head of Callaghan & Co., the Chicago law book publishers, got real angry at some of the printing establishments in Lansing, when they succeeded in the last session of the legislature in defeating the project for making Howell's annotated statutes legal evidence, the State of Michigan saves nearly $50,000 in publishing its own compiled laws.

This was assured Wednesday, when the state board of auditors accepted the bid of the Lawrence and Van Buren Printing Co. for binding the compiled laws at 66 cents per volume, a cut below the next lowest bidder of 42 cents.

But back of the Lawrence and Van Buren Co. is Callaghan & Co., of Chicago. The big dominant note is that "Jim" Callaghan dislikes to be beaten, particularly when he gathers the impression that the defeat hasn't been on the level.

THON BAFFLES HAWKSHAWS

Efforts to Connect Him with Detroit Murder Are Foiled.

DETROIT, MICH.—Ezra Thon, sallow-faced youth of apparently little cleverness, stumped detectives for two hours in their effort to establish some connection between his actions and the murder of Patrolman Thomas Madden. Chief of Detectives Palmer admits that the Saginaw boy, who was arrested on suspicion that he was the other occupant of the motor car when Alpheus Moore is supposed to have shot the policeman, had outwitted him and that his story is hard to shake. The case against Thon was given a setback when Walter Grunts, clerk in Bernard Fischer's haberdashery store, West Fort street, failed to identify the prisoner as the man who bought the velour hat that was dropped by one of the Madden murderers.

Thon will be held, however, until he has been investigated further.

METHODIST TO TEST ADVENTISTS' OFFER

Michigan Pastor Would Prove Sunday Proper Sabbath.

Battle Creek, Mich., March 9.—To test the sincerity of a $1,000 offer recently made by Elder W. W. Westworth and Mrs. E. S. Risley, Adventists, for any man to prove that the Christian world is celebrating the proper Sabbath by observing Sunday Rev. William H. Phelps, pastor of the First M. E. church, the largest church of this denomination in Calhoun county, accepted the challenge.

He ordered the two Adventists to post the $1,000 in a bank. He will then name five judges, allow them to name five, and let the judges so named select five others, after which he will make three addresses to prove that it is the Adventists who are observing the wrong day.

In his closing paragraph, Phelps adds: "I am going to say something in Battle Creek that ought to be said."

TO TEST FEDERAL GAME LAWS

Illinois Sportsman Agrees to Shoot Ducks in Front of Wardens.

Springfield, Ill., March 9.—A. G. Connor of this city, president of the Illinois State Sportsmen's association, has taken steps to force a test decision on the constitutionality of the federal statute which prohibits killing ducks in the spring of the year.

With this end in view Mr. Connor has issued an invitation to federal officers to visit his hunting lodge near Havana on March 10, 11 or 12, declaring that if there are any ducks flying on any of these dates they will have the opportunity of seeing him shoot them and cause his arrest.

"CHARITY" BUREAU HEAD IS ARRESTED

Charged with Conducting State Wide Swindle.

Indianapolis, March 9.—Richard Ricketts, who gave his address as 3518 North Illinois street, has been arrested here, charged with operating a "fake" charitable organization and with employing more than thirty girls to collect money throughout the state from persons who desired to relieve the suffering of the poor. Ricketts' organization is known as the Indiana and Illinois Relief and Protective association and has been in operation here since early in the winter.

The technical charge against Ricketts is obtaining money under false pretenses. He declares that his arrest is the result of "spitework" on the part of the local charitable organizations and maintains that his association is a legitimate organization.

Ricketts' arrest followed complaints made by various organizations of the city and it is charged that of all the money he has collected only $15 has been expended in a charitable manner. The detectives obtained record lists of subscribers at the office, showing that hundreds of persons had responded to Ricketts' appeal for funds, and they believe that the money collected may run into the thousands.

Before he came here Ricketts is said to have conducted an organization similar to the Relief and Protective association at Hammond, Ind. His organization there is said to have been called the Lake County Relief and Protective association.

GAS EXPLOSIONS ROCK NEW YORK

Havoc Played by Bursting of Great Water Main.

THOUSANDS ARE IMPERILED

Street Car Lifted from Tracks and Nine Persons Injured—Plate Glass Fronts Broken—Flames Shoot Across Street and Great Damage Is Done—Buildings Without Water or Gas.

New York, March 9.—A four-foot water main running under the Fifth avenue asphalt broke at the intersection of Broadway, Twenty-third street and the Avenue early in the day. For a short time the water tore away the earth to the west of the break without disturbing the pavement and smashed into the sewer running west through Twenty-third street. Next the tremendous pressure of the underground flood tore into the new Broadway subway excavation less than two dozen feet east of the break and filled the subway.

With subway and sewers filled the water began to bubble up through trolley slots and the temporary street pavement of planking that covers the subway diggers in front of the prow of the Flatiron building. And finally the streets and even sidewalks flooded and water pouring over the curb and into cellars, a series of gas explosions began at 11:40 a. m. and continued at intervals until shortly before 1 p. m.

Trolley Car Wrecked.

As a result of the flood of water, estimated at a million and a half gallons before it could be stopped, and the series of terrific explosions, thousands of dollars worth of plate glass was blown out of buildings. A trolley car was badly damaged and nine of the passengers had to be treated by an ambulance surgeon.

A pyramid of flame fifteen feet across mounted high in the street for three hours. Wires were disabled and skyscrapers and other buildings were without water or gas day and night. Great holes were torn in asphalt and wooden block pavements and it was necessary to rip up much more pavement immediately around the Madison Square section and east and west in Twenty-third street before the flow of flaming gas could be shut off.

ALL NIGHT DRINKING PLACES

Mayor Mitchell Will Permit Sales for Night Workers.

New York, March 9.—Just what the public and restaurants may expect from the mayor hereafter as regards the night life of the city is announced by Arthur Woods, the mayor's secretary.

Every properly conducted tango or cabaret restaurant will get an all-night license but it must turn out its guests and its light at 2 a. m. or the license will be revoked. A number of all-night licenses will be granted to places which profit only from the sale of food and drink to night workers.

POISON TOAST MAN SOUGHT

"Dr." Emil Steiner Is Hunted by an Irate Joliet Resident.

Joliet, Ill., March 9.—"Dr." Emil Steiner, who drank a farewell toast in poison at a banquet Thursday night, was trailed to the City hotel in Lockport, Ill., and there lost.

A warrant was sworn out for him by Moe S. Robinson, who boarded the "doctor" for several weeks. Robinson charges him with operating a confidence game. Robinson at first thought Dr. Steiner had died somewhere between Joliet and Chicago. "I think he'll die before we find him," said Robinson. "He swallowed three grains of poison."

Chicago, March 9.—A campaign to raise a fund of $100,000 for the defense of Carl E. Person, the labor editor, who is in jail at Clinton, Ill., on a charge of killing a strike breaker in the Illinois Central railroad, was launched at a labor mass meeting at Cohan's Grand Opera house Sunday.

POLITICS IN OLD STYLE WAY

Charge of Attempt to Kill Fellows Fight In Primary.

Columbus, Ind., March 9.—William Renner, son of the Frank Renner of Union township, was arrested with intent to kill Peter Daum. The charge was filed by George H. Daum, father of Peter Daum.

The case grew out of a quarrel over Frank Renner's candidacy for the Democratic nomination for representative in which William Renner knocked Daum down at a polling place at which the young men were working. It is alleged in the affidavit that Renner struck Daum with metal "knucks." When arraigned Renner pleaded not guilty and gave bond of $300 for his appearance for trial in March.

VILLA'S MONEY SCHEMES FAIL

Leader of Rebel Troops Said to Be Flat Broke.

HE BANISHES ALL SALOONS

Socialistic Plans of North Mexican Conqueror Prove Failures—Manufactory of Shells, Armored Auto, State Bank and State Brewery All Fall Through.

El Paso, Tex., March 9.—Juarez received official notification of an edict by Pancho Villa, declaring that the territory which he captures hereafter, together with that he now holds, will be operated as prohibition territory and that all saloons must be closed. This edict was not issued until Villa's operation of the Chihuahua brewery proved a failure. The edict will not apply to Juarez where foreigners pay a heavy license to operate saloons and gambling houses for the diversion of American tourists.

Villa's failure to make a success of his brewery operations became public knowledge at the same time that it became known that his efforts to manufacture his own Shrapnel shells and to build an armored automobile for operations against the federals were failures. His early proclaimed socialistic government including the establishment of a state bank has failed to succeed with time.

Villa Without Funds.

The re-opening of private banks has not taken place as Villa said it would and the general resumption of industrial activities has not taken place. The American Smelting and Refining company plant is operating at Chihuahua but the big foreign mine that General Villa said a month ago would soon be operating with hundreds of men is still closed. Thus a big source of expected revenue has not materialized and it is asserted on the border that Villa is without funds to maintain his troops much longer and that there is much dissatisfaction.

SHOOTING IN SOCIAL LIFE

Husand Shoots His Wife and Another Man on Train.

Mobile, Ala., March 9.—W. T. Bright, a wealthy resident of Mendenhall, Miss., is dying at the State Charity hospital while Mrs. Don Angelin, prominent socially, is suffering from a bullet wound in her cheek as a result of a pistol duel between Bright and the husband of the woman in the chair car of a railroad train in the depot at Mendenhall.

Mrs. Angelin had a year-old baby in her arms when she was shot by her husband but the child was not injured. Don Angelin, who did the shooting, is in jail. He was arrested soon after the shooting.

LYNCHING FEARED; SECRETED

Man Suspected of Setting Saxon, Wis., Fire Taken to Hurley.

Ashland, Wis., March 9.—Joe Legendre, suspected of having set the fire which cost the lives of four persons, was rushed out of Saxon by officers and placed in jail at Hurley to prevent his being lynched by the townspeople of Saxon, according to word received here.

Two of the men cremated in the fire which destroyed the boarding house and saloon of Patrick Auger are not yet identified. One of the men has been identified as Newman A. Cook of Escanaba, Mich. Anna Bauer, who was seriously burned, is still alive.

QUOTES GIBBONS ON LOCAL OPTION

Antisaloon League Head Says Cardinal Favors It.

HAS HIS AUTOGRAPH LETTER

Much Interest Among Temperance People Over Prelate's Statement That "Prohibition Can Not Be Enforced"—Anderson Says Views Do Not Cause Surprise.

New York, March 9.—The statement by Cardinal Gibbons in New Orleans that while he is an ardent advocate of temperance he is "intuitively persuaded that prohibition cannot be enforced in this country," excited much interest among temperance workers.

Press dispatches quoted the cardinal as saying that prohibition is "calculated to make hyocrites and lead to the manufacture of illicit whisky, replacing the good material with the bad, while at the same time robbing the government of the legitimate tax."

Anderson Makes Comment.

William H. Anderson, state superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of New York, commented as follows on the cardinal's view:

"This statement from his eminence is no particular surprise to those who are familiar with his views. He has a right to his opinion and we have not the slightest desire to say anything unkind or disrespectful but we believe he is mistaken and we know he has not had much opportunity for personal observation.

Favors Local Option.

"However while the cardinal is opposed to general prohibition, I happen to hold his autograph signed statement on local prohibition commonly known as local option, which indicates a firm belief in the right of the people of smaller localities to vote on the liquor question. He says in this statement that the privilege of voting in the various communities is a right incidental to the American principle of self-government, and he further says that while he does not consider prohibition would be feasible throughout the entire extent of a city as large as Baltimore, for example, yet if the people of a residential ward, or a rural county, desire to vote out saloons they should have opportunity of so doing."

MOOSE TO HAVE BALL TEAMS

Illinois Orders Will Organize Several Leagues In State.

Springfield, Ill., March 9.—The Illinois Order of Moose will organize a series of baseball leagues, not less than six being proposed. There will be two in Cook county, composed of sixteen teams; one in northern Illinois, a fourth in western Illinois, the fifth in eastern Illinois and the sixth in central Illinois. Each league will represent eight lodges. Sunday and holiday games only will be played.

At the end of the season the champions of each league will play for the state championship, the winner to compete for the national trophy.

TO DROP CHURCH RIOT CASES

Continuance Taken So Trouble Can Be Settled Out of Court.

South Bend, Ind., March 9.—The cases of members of St. Casimir's Polish Catholic church, charged with contempt of court, as a result of the rioting at the church on Feb. 15, were continued in court.

It is understood the authorities have agreed to drop the cases if the trouble at the church is settled.

SPEAKER'S PAY IS ENORMOUS

Salaries of Cobb and Mathewson Do Not Approach It.

New York, March 9.—There are various guesses as to the salary Tris Speaker will receive for playing baseball with the Boston Americans for the next three years.

His former manager, Jake Stahl, declared Speaker the most valuable man in the game, and it is said that no other player will receive as much money, which for the term of his contract, it is said, will average around $20,000 per year. Cobb and Mathewson's pay does not approach it.

DEATH THREAT IS MAILED TO JUDGE

Jurist Trying Terre Haute Election Cases Gets Letter.

Terre Haute, Ind., March 9.—An anonymous letter, making a direct threat to kill Attorney Felix Blankenbaker, who, as special judge, sentenced William Huffman to the penitentiary Thursday afternoon, for election frauds, was received through the mail by Mr. Blankenbaker.

The first clause of the note referred to a shooting that took place in front of Mr. Blankenbaker's house shortly after midnight Friday morning. Members of the family and neighbors were awakened by three shots, but, on arising and going to windows, could see no one. The shooting and the receipt of the letter only a few hours later indicate an attempt to harass both Judge Blankenbaker and his family.

Judge Blankenbaker offered $1,000 personal reward for information leading to the conviction of the person guilty of mailing the letter to him.

A Like Retort.

A dapper young shoe clerk fitted a number nine over a farmer's yarn sock. "When you get these on," he smilingly remarked, "you can sing 'How Firm a Foundation.'" The farmer answered not a word until the number nines were on his feet and his old shoes in a neatly wrapped package under his arm. As he reached the door he smilingly said, "And you can sing 'A charge to keep I have.'"—Philadelphia Ledger.

LETTER FROM DR NORTH

So many other articles have been presented of late, we have been unable to publish the letter of Dr North which was received several weeks ago, but are sure our readers will enjoy it, even if it does come late.

St Petersburg, Fla.
Feb. 8, 1914

Dear Friends

There has been so much printed about the southland that it is quite out of the question for me to write you any thing new. Therefore I do not see but you will have to have a letter of personal experiences almost entirely, with perhaps an occasional Florida observation thrown in as ballast. I probably shall write some of Mrs. Worth's experiences too, but the conclusions if I draw any will be mine and if they don't suit her, why she must write a letter of her own.

I do remember that once before we left Tecumseh on an evening. It was a long ago, way back in 1858 when Ida Stevens ceased to be, and Ida North began to was. Every thing seemed strange to us on that memorable occasion, and it did seem quite out of the common this time for us to be taking the evening train for Toledo. Our folders and Mr. Ziehr, too, had told us to go into Toledo on that train, and go at once into the sleeper and our berths, though the train would not leave for the south till 12:30 o'clock. That was why we chose evening train.

When we stopped at Lenawee I looked at my watch which indicated 9:21. After the conductor had walked to the distant station and had walked back with his train order and a long freight had passed, we "pulled out." Again I consulted my timepiece and was surprised to see it was at 9:21. Too early to have run down. Investigation revealed the fact that the main spring had snapped while we were waiting at old Lenawee. That junction has tried my patience, waiting for trains, many a time but this was the first time it ever did me actual violence and injury by breaking my watch. Dear old Lenawee junction I have one more cause to remember you for you deprived me of the use of my watch for two days just when I most wanted it to go. That was misfortune No. 1.

At Toledo I got our tickets and the sleeper reservations Mr. Ziehr had arranged for the day before, and was then informed our car would arrive at 12:15 and that we could sit in the depot for two whole hours. Those two hours were not entirely filled with bliss. Just why we were so deceived and deluded I have not yet learned but when I get home if my wrath don't cool Mr. Z had better wear a life preserver. That was misfortune No. 2.

We left good sleighing in Tecumseh Jan. 15th but when we raised the shade of our berths in Cincinnati the next morning not a flake of snow could be seen anywhere, and the weather was almost like spring. After some delay for unknown causes our was "hitched" onto Queen and Crescent train No. 11, and we were able to get breakfast in the "diner" shortly after 9.

Then came the all day ride across Kentucky and Tennessee over the tracks of The Queen and Crescent. The railway was built and is now owned by the city of Cincinnati. It was constructed by that city with borrowed money to make a pathway for the commerce of the south into its own doors. Wisely I think, the city has never attempted to operate the lines, but has leased them to the Queen and Crescent Co, for a fixed yearly sum, which not only promises to pay the interest on the bonds from year to year but also to pay the principal as it becomes due. This is a fine example of efficient honest city financeering, for when the lease expires the city will own the original lines which will have cost the city nothing, but which for many years has brought a great stream of trafic to its portals. The lease must provide in some way for improvments and extensions for the line is being double tracked in many places between Cincinnati and Chatanooga.

As we spooned our oat-meal and sipped our cofiee my thoughts were busy with what little I know of the history of the region through which we rode. In no state of our union did the Indian make such determined, persistant, and savage efforts to retain his home as in Kentucky. The expression, "The Land of the Dark and Bloody Ground," has a significense that only those who have read its history with care can appreciate. For fifty years the savage warfare went on, not constantly of course, but with never a year without some renewal of the strife. Across this right of way, along which I rode in safety and comfort today, Daniel Boone has many times walked with his moccasined feet. You can be sure that at Danville I did not fail to think of Ephrain McDowell.

Walpole in London.

"Would you know why I like London so much?" Horace Walpole wrote to Mann in October, 1743. "There is no being alone but in the metropolis. The worst place in the world to find solitude is the country; questions grow there, and that unpleasant Christian commodity, neighbors." You must yourself have belonged to "country" folk to feel the truth of that last shaft.

Not Worth the Effort.

JOSEPH F. SHEEHAN, America's Greatest Tenor
Sheehan Opera Co., at Bradley Opera House on MONDAY, MARCH 16, 1914.

AMUSEMENTS

SHEEHAN OPERA COMPANY.

When the Sheehan English Opera comes to the Bradley Opera House, next Monday, March 16 we will have an opportunity such as is rarely afforded any but the largest cities, that of hearing a company of such famous artists as Joseph F. Sheehan, America's greatest tenor, Madame Antoinette Le Brun, one of the best known sopranos on the American stage; Mad. Lydia Sturtevant, the famous French contralto; Harold J. Geis, a baritone with a reputation in this country and Europe, etc.

The performance consists of the most interesting and beautiful acts of "Il Trovatore," Bohemian Girl" and "Martha." The beauty of the performance lies in the fact that all the tiresome parts of the operas are eliminated and the real vital parts of each which are presented make a performance, which is interesting alike to music lovers and the average theater goers.

The wonderful tower scene of "Il Trovatore" is given complete, with the famous Miserere, as is also the Dungeon scene of "Il Trovatore." From "The Bohemian Girl" it gives all of the gems of the opera "I Dreamt I Dwelt in Marble Halls," "Then You'll Remember Me," "Bliss Forever Past," etc. The entire second act of "Martha," the most beautiful of the entire opera is given complete, with its "Last Rose of Summer," its "Spinning Wheel" quartet, and beautiful "Goodnight" quartet. The entire performance is one of unusual excellence and far ahead of anything ever attempted in this country in English opera.

This is the same company which played in Ann Arbor last Saturday headed by Mr. Joseph F. Sheehan (himself) and an all star cast. It was only through the company having an open date that this excellent attraction was secured for Tecumseh. It is the first time that Grand opera has ever been presented here and it should prove an event never to be forgotten both to regular patrons of the theatre and to the lovers of the very highest class music in this country. A complete performance in three acts with a beautiful scenic production and costume investure.

Owing to the demand that is bound to come for seats for this engagement the sale will open Friday morning at Hay's bakery.

The motion pictures of "Our New Minister" which were shown at the Bradley Opera House Saturday night certainly proved to be a drawing card. All evening the house was packed, both first floor and gallery and when one takes into consideration that the house has seating capacity of over 800 it means that nearly all of the Tecumseh people must have been in some time during the evening. Three shows were run.

Friday night the Senior class of the high school have arranged a benefit performance at the Opera House. Three reels of all star pictures will be shown including "A Lesson in Jealousy" a Vitagraph comedy featuring Miss Clara Kimball Young; "Elise, the Forester's Daughter," featuring Miss Mary Fuller and "Just Cissy's Little Way" a comedy-drama with Arthur Johnson. You can get tickets from any member of the class or at the theatre.

Art Loan at Clinton

The Ladies of the Clinton Culture Club will have an Art Loan Thursday and Friday of this week at the town hall. Doors open Thursday 2 p. m. with a program and lecture in the evening. Mrs. Philips of Charlott will speak on Dutch Art. Friday the doors will be open at 9:30, dinner and supper on the cafeteria plan and an admittion fee of 10 cents will be charged.

NOTICE O. E. S.

Mrs. Minia Maxon worthy grand matrony of the O. E. S. will be in Tecumseh Friday March 13. Members of the order are invited to meet her in the Masonic Club rooms from 2 o'clock to 3:30 p. m.

A REAL NERVE AND BODY-BUILDING MEDICINE

We believe Rexall Olive Oil Emulsion is the best remedy made for toning the nerves, enriching the blood building up wasted tissues, renewing health, strength and energy—the best medicine you can use if you are run-down, tired-out, nervous and debilitated, no matter what the cause. It doesn't depend for its good effect upon alcohol or habit-forming drugs, because it contains none. It may not make you feel better in a few hours, but it will make you feel better, we are sure, just as soon as the tonic and food properties it contains have a chance to get into the blood and, through the blood, into the rest of the system. Pure Olive Oil and the Hypophosphites have long been endorsed by successful physicians, but here, for the first time, they are combined into one preparation which, as a nerve-food and a builder of strength and health, we believe, has no equal.

If you don't feel well, begin taking Rexall Olive Oil Emulsion today, and build your health and strengthen your system against more serious illness. To convalescents, old people, puny children and all others who are weak, run-down or ailing, we offer Rexall Olive Oil Emulsion with our personal promise that, if it doesn't make you well and strong again, it will cost you nothing. If we didn't have the utmost faith in it, we wouldn't offer it with this guarantee, nor even recommend it to you. We are sure that once you have used it you will recommend it to your friends, and thank us for having recommended it to you. Sold only at the more than 7,000 Rexall Stores, and in this town only by us. $1.00. B. J. Pulver, Tecumseh, Mich. adv.

FAREWELL PARTY

About 50 friends and neighbors gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Milon Conklin and family for a farewell party. The evening was spent in games, music and visiting. Mr. Sutton, Mr. and Mrs. Boyce and Mrs. Conklin rendered some fine music, the orchestra consisted of an organ, violin, bass viol and banjo. A pot luck supper was served and the company left for their homes at the late hour of 4 o'clock in the morning feeling they had had a very enjoyable evening biding Mr. Conklin's good-by and luck in the future. They have the sympathy of the entire community.

To say we had a good time is speaking mildly. One who was there.

OUR HOME WOMEN HAVE BEAUTIFUL HAIR

Next time you go to the theatre or to the "movies" just notice, if you please, how many of our home ladies have beautiful hair—glossy, lustrous, and well-dressed. Then if you will pick out five or ten of those whose hair seems to be particularly pretty and will ask them what they use it, we feel sure that at least more than half of them will say "Harmony Hair Beautifier." It is fast becoming the rage with both men and women who are particular about the appearance of their hair.

Sprinkle a little Harmony Hair Beautifier on your hair each time before brushing it. Contains no oil; will not change color of hair, nor darken gray hair.

To keep hair and scalp dandruff free and clean, use Harmony Shampoo. This pure liquid shampoo gives an instantaneous rich lather that immediately penetrates to every part of hair and scalp, insuring a quick, thorough cleansing. Washed off just as quickly, the entire operation takes only a few moments. Contains nothing that can harm the hair; leaves no harshness or stickiness—just sweet cleanliness.

Both preparations come in odd-shaped, very ornamental bottles, with sprinkler tops. Harmony Hair Beautifier, $1.00. Harmony Shampoo, 50c. Both guaranteed to satisfy you in every way, or your money back. Sold only at the more than 7,000 Rexall stores, and in this town only by us.

Most Persistent Nuisance.

The person of a fixed idea may always easily become a nuisance, but never more so than when the fixed idea is petty and monstrous selfishness. Besides which, individual troubles are never to be made a boast of, and especially not when there is good reason for believing many of them to be self-caused, even if not actually invented.

In Foggy Old London.

D. D. D. In Hospitals; Standard Skin Cure

How many hospital patients, suffering the frightful itch, the raw scorching pain of skin disease, have been soothed to sleep by a soothing fluid washed in by the nurse's hands?

That fluid is the famous D. D. D. prescription for eczema.

THE SUPERVISING NURSE of one of our prominent Catholic institutions (name of nurse and institute on application), writes regarding a patient. "The disease had eaten her eyebrows away. Her nose and lips had become disfigured. Since the use of D. D. D. her eyebrows are growing, her nose and face have assumed their natural expression."

How many eczema sufferers are paying their doctors for regular treatment and are being treated with this same soothing, healing fluid?

DR. GEO. T. RICHARDSON frankly writes "D. D. D. is superior to anything I have ever found. Soft and soothing, yet a powerful agent."

To do the work, D. D. D. Prescription must be applied, according to directions given in the pamphlet around every bottle. Follow these directions—and see!

And it certainly takes away the itch at once—the moment the liquid is applied. The skin is soothed—calmed—so thoroughly refreshed—delightfully cooled.

All druggists of standing have the famous specific as well as the efficient D. D. D. Skin Soap.

But we are so confident of the merits of this prescription that we will refund the purchase price of the first full size bottle if it fails to reach your case. You alone are to judge.

ABBEY JANE NORTH

Abby Jane Gregory the youngest child of Elijah and Amy Gregory was born in Tomkins County N. Y. September 27th 1824. Her maternal grand father was a soldier in the revolution being present at the surrender at Yorktown. Her five brothers and one sister many years have preceded her to the hereafter, the latter dying fifty years ago.

January 5th. 1850 she was married to John Calvin North with whom she came to Michigan in 1860, living two years near Lansing, two years near Parma, coming to Tecumseh Oct. 28th 1867, where she has since resided in the same house.

She bore two children in New York the youngest Amy J. who died near Lansing at the age of seven and Dr. L. G. North, now in Florida, who has shared the same residence with her for 63 years. Her husband died March 31st 1879 in the Pottawatamie St. home at the age of 59. Since then her son has looked after her personal and material welfare. From childhood to the time of her husbands death, circumstances necessitated constant hard labor and care, which she ably and cheerfully endured.

Two mild attacks of paralysis some 16 years ago partially incapacited her for active life, the last three or four years having been marked by serious weakness, though she was able to be out of bed daily till the time of her death.

On March 3rd it was evident to those about her that her strength was failing rapidly but to all inquires she replied that she felt all right. She slept much through the day and following night, and passed peasefully away at 5.30 in the morning March 4 1914

In February 1868 she united with the First Baptist Church, in this village, of which organization she has been a consistent and honored member to this time. She had numerous nephews and neices with whom she was a great favorite, and till her affliction came upon her her life was eminetly one of ministry, her grandchildren receiving much of her care and affection. The weakness of the past decade has prevented her doing for her four great grandchildren but they were the objects of her loving solicitude.

The sojourn of her son with his wife in the South at this time caused the last sad ministries and rites to devolve upon her only living grandchild Mrs. Charles H. Williamson of this villiage who was with her when the final summons came.

The funeral was held at 4 p. m Friday March the sixth from the house which had been her home for forty seven years. The remains were deposited in the mausoleum at Brookside to be intered when Dr. North returns. Truly a, "Mother in Israel", has departed, one much loved and respected but one whose beautiful character can be appreciated only by those who intimately knew her.

MONDAY CLUB

Regular meeting of the Monday Club at the usual time and place Monday afternoon. Mrs. F. G Lewis presiding. New business was then taken up and the election of officers resulted in the election of Mrs. J. D. Shull for president, and Mrs. Eugene Harris as 2nd vice president for the coming year.

Sense of Smell.

Like the senses of sight and hearing the sense of smell quickly tires. Hence it is only before fatigue sets in that a doctor can diagnose different ailments by the sense of smell alone. If he is a smoker or a drinker it is useless to depend upon the nose.

Few of our people in Tecumseh realize the Uncle Sam's Macaroni plant is the purest of its kind in the world. You should take advantage of the invitation of the management to visit the plant especially when entertaining out of town guests.

The ever increasing demand for Uncle Sam's Macaroni Products is taxing the factory output despite the addition of Macaroni only a few weeks ago. The past two weeks have been record breakers for shipments as nearly every day's mail has contained orders for full car loads.

As an evidence that Uncle Sam's Macaroni products represent the finest quality, the Company received a letter recently from parties in Sheri. Wyo. stating they had gotten hold of a sample package of Uncle Sam's Macaroni and found it far superior to any other previously used.

THE BASEBALL MASK.

It Was First Used In a Yale-Harvard Game In 1876.

Frederick Winthrop Thayer of Cohasset, Harvard '78, captain of the famous varsity nines of 1876, 1877 and 1878, was the inventor of the catcher's mask. The days when Thayer entered Harvard baseball differed somewhat from the present. A pitcher had to throw underhanded and end his throw with arm stretched out. Then that changed, and as a consequence the ball was thrown much more swiftly. Dr. Harold C. Ernst, a professor in the Medical school, was pitcher on the varsity nine, and James A. Tyng was catcher. They made a wonderful battery.

Thayer noticed that the more freedom given the pitcher the greater became the risk of the catcher. One day he let a few into the secret. He was going to make a mask. A few days before the Yale game of 1876 he came on the field with it. Save for the fact it was made more heavily, it was much similar to the masks in use today.

Thayer attached it to Jim Tyng's head, and from that moment the mask entered baseball. At first the players, [illegible] those in the varsity, and the spectators were inclined to ridicule it, and it caused no end of comment when it was worn by Tyng at the Yale game that year. Harvard won, and two years later team after team adopted the mask.—Boston Herald.

AFTER PASSING YEARS.

Tecumseh Testimony Remains Unshaken.

Time is the best test of truth. Here is a Tecumseh story that has stood the test of time. It is a story with a point which will come straight home to many of us.

Mrs. George Burroughs, W Potawatamie St. Tecumseh, Mich., says: "My whole body ached and my strength and energy left. Knowing several people in Tecumseh who had been helped by Doan's Kidney Pills, I got a supply of this remedy at Wright's & Son's Drug Store and began using it. In a few weeks I improved in every way and the pains and aches were thing of the past. I cheerfully endorse Doan's Kidney Pills again for the benefit they brought me has been permanent."

Mrs. Burroughs is only one of the many Tecumseh people who have gratefully endorsed Doan's Kidney Pills. If your back aches—if your kidneys bother you, don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—ask distinctly for Doan's Kidney Pills, the same that Mrs. Burroughs had—the remedy backed by home testimony. 50c all stores. England's Lord Chancellors.

The lord chancellor under the early English kings used to live in the palace and had a regular daily allowance, his wages, as it appeared from one of the records, being 5 shillings, a simnel cake, two seasoned simnels, one sextary of clear wine, one sextary of household wine, one large wax candle and forty small pieces of candle. In the time of Henry II. the modern treasury spirit appears to have begun to walk abroad, for in the records the allowance of 5 shillings appears as if subjected to a reduction. If he dined away from the palace and was thereby forced to provide extras, then indeed he got his 5 shillings. But if he dined at home he was not allowed more than 3 shillings and sixpence.—London Answers.

The Wit of Shakespeare.

A pleasant anecdote of Shakespeare and Ben Jonson is told in a book entitled "The World's Leading Poets:"

"Shakespeare was godfather to one of Jonson's children, and after the christening, Shakespeare being in a brown study, Jonson came to cheer him up and asked him why he was so melancholy.

"'No faith, Ben, not I. But I have been considering a great while what would be the fittest gift to bestow upon my godchild, and I have resolved at last.'

"'I prythee what?'

"'I' faith, Ben, I'll e'en give him a dozen good latten (an alloyed metal something like brass) spoons, and you shall translate them.'"

While Shakespeare, according to Jonson, had "small Latin and less Greek," Ben Jonson was one of the giants among classical scholars of his day, when no other scholarship was recognized.

Story of a Woman With a Mona Lisa Smile

By F. A. MITCHEL

Royal Twining and I were bosom friends. Roy was accustomed to confide in me in almost everything, and as soon as he became engaged he took me to see his fiancee. Marjorie Gooding, or Marjy, as she was usually called, struck a vein of curiosity in me the moment I saw her. It is difficult—indeed, impossible—for me to explain why. I can only say that she seemed strange to me. She had heard a great deal of me from her lover, and when she turned those singular eyes of hers upon me it was evident that I was an object of interest to her.

When Roy and I left Miss Gooding he spoke not a word to me as we walked along together, and yet I knew he was saying mentally, "Well, what do you think of her?" I did not reply to the unexpressed question for some moments, for the simple reason that I did not know what I thought of her.

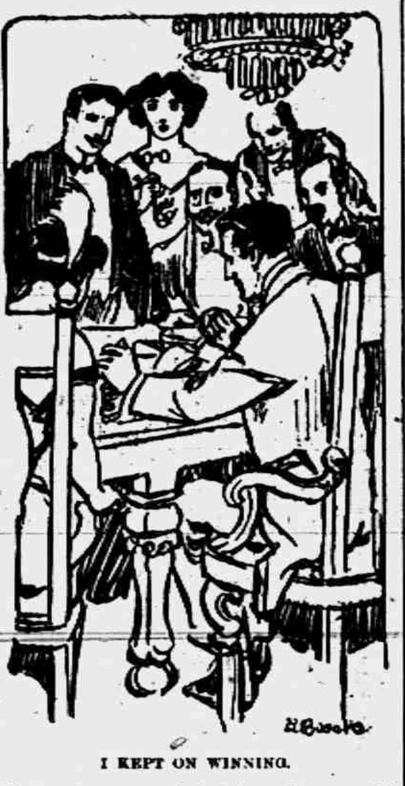
"It is impossible, Roy," I said presently, "for me to pass judgment on the lady of your choice without knowing more of her, and I am sure you don't wish me to say pleasant things got up for the occasion. Have you observed anything—well, mystical about her?"

"Mystical? How mystical? What's mystical?"

I saw at once that the something in his fiancee that affected me strangely was a vacuum in him. I immediately switched off.

"Oh, I don't doubt that she will make you an excellent wife. Judging simply from appearances, she will supply certain deficiencies there are in you, and you will pull together nicely."

What I meant by Roy's deficiencies was that he was usually under the influence of his passions. One of them—games of hazard—was a very important matter with him, and I expected that when married his wife would have trouble with him on account of it. Naturally he tried to induce me to name the deficiencies. I did not hesitate to mention the one I have referred to—the gambling passion.



I KEPT ON WINNING.

Roy and Miss Gooding were married. Roy was well fixed in the matter of income; the wife had nothing. They went abroad on a wedding trip and remained there a long while. They had been there about a year when Mrs. Twining wrote me about Roy. She said he had joined a club in Paris where gambling was much in vogue and had lost considerable money. She said further that she wished she could get her husband back to America, where I would help her in the matter, for she was aware that I had considerable influence on Roy.

The letter was evidently an appeal for me to come over to Paris and save what remained of Roy's fortune. There were reasons besides my interests in the Twinings to induce me to go over. I was a man of business and had been working too hard, with the result that I was threatened with nervous prostration. The winter was a cold one, and my doctor had advised me to quit work and go to a warm climate, recommending a trip to the Mediterranean and Nice as a stopping point. This would help me to draw Roy away from his club in Paris. I wrote him to meet me in Nice.

The Twinings had been in Nice a fortnight when I arrived. I found Mrs. Twining there, but not her husband. He had gone to Monte Carlo. I had evidently got Roy out of the frying pan and put him in the fire. His wife told me that he had lost nearly everything he had in Paris, and she was prepared to hear that he had lost the rest at Monte Carlo. He had asked her on arriving at Nice to go there with her, hoping to recoup. She had refused, and he had gone alone. She did not break down under the ordeal, but talked about it in a very businesslike way. I proposed that we should go together to Monte Carlo and attempt by a united effort to get Roy away in time to save the remnant of his fortune. When I said this the lady looked at me with a very singular expression. I had seen a copy of the celebrated picture, the "Mona Lisa," whose disappearance from the Louvre had attracted so much attention, but which has been restored to its place there, and the look on Mrs. Twining's face when I made this proposition reminded me of that portrait.

"No," she said. "I will remain here. My influence with him has not been sufficient to prevent this misfortune, and my presence with him would do more harm than good. If there is anything left when you get there you may save it."

There was the same sad look in the eyes, the same peculiar smile on the lips, as those of the "Mona Lisa," and they were as unintelligible to me on the living face as in the portrait. What prompted me to ask the question I cannot explain, but I said:

"Do you think you could influence me to do your bidding?"

"I am quite sure I could."

The smile with which she said this reminded me more than ever of the smile on the lips of the "Mona Lisa."

I accepted her suggestion and went over to Monte Carlo. Mrs. Twining had informed me that, the day before my arrival at Nice, Roy had changed his hotel. She did not say why, but I saw by her look she inferred that he had been called upon to pay his bill and had not the means to do so. She had not yet been informed of his new address. I arrived at Monte Carlo about 9 o'clock in the evening and, after registering, went immediately to the gambling pavilion, expecting to find Roy there. I was surprised not to see him and was about to leave when an attendant stepped up to me, asked me my name and, upon my telling him, said that I was wanted at the telephone. On taking up the receiver and asking who was waiting for me Roy said:

"I'm not feeling well enough to go to the pavilion tonight, and I wish you to lay a stake for me. Put $10 on the red and leave it there till I send word for you to take it off."

"Roy," I said, "I must see you at once. At what hotel are you staying?"

I waited for a reply, but no reply came.

"Roy," I called—"Roy, are you there?"

All was as silent as the grave. I did not know where he was stopping, but resolved to go at once and search the hotels for him. As I was about to leave the pavilion the face of Mrs. Twining came up before me, and somehow I fancied it as saying: "Do as Roy has bid you. If you don't you may have cause to regret it. If you do it may result in a run of luck." I hesitated and turned toward the room where a crowd about the roulette table listened to the monotonous call of the croupier, "Make your bets!"

I went in, stood over the table for a few moments, looking on, then took a United States gold eagle from my pocket and placed it on the red. I felt that I would rather lose that amount than refuse Roy's request. After it was gone that would end the matter, and it was sure to go at last, because I would obey his instructions not to take it off till he sent word to do so.

The ball spun and the red won, many times the amount of the stake—I have forgotten how many, for I have never bet a cent since. And I kept on winning; I have forgotten how many times the red won before the same attendant who had summoned me to the telephone tapped me on the arm and told me that Mr. Twining had telephoned I was to take the stake off the red and place it somewhere else. I remember moving a heap of money several times after that, but where I placed it I don't know, though I do know that every time I moved it there was a greater abundance. I have lost remembrance, too, of the instructions I received or whether I received any instructions after the first or second, nor can I positively assert that I was not playing on my own responsibility. There came at last a sudden awakening, and I seemed to realize what I had been doing. I saw a heap of money on the table and, gathering it up, bore it away.

On reaching my hotel I went immediately to my room, locked my winnings in a bureau drawer and went to bed. But I did not go to sleep till morning. Through the long hours I was haunted by that singular face, at times the "Mona Lisa," at times Mrs. Twining, and finally dozed off with the two confused.

When I awoke in the morning and went downstairs the landlord asked me if I knew the American who had killed himself the day before. I asked the name and was told that it was Twining.

This is all the statement I have to make except that Twining was dead when I heard his voice. His wife when I saw her again had that same "Mona Lisa" look on her face, and I fancied I could see traces of the smile. But that should naturally be referred to the imagination.

The money I had won was about half what Twining had lost after his marriage. I was obliged, literally, to force Mrs. Twining to take it.

There are three hypothetical explanations:

First.—Was I not in an abnormal physical condition? Did I not create most of the experience and win a lot of money at gambling?

Second.—Did Twining in the spirit play through me in order to provide for his wife?

Third.—Did Mrs. Twining cause my experience?

If asked to which of these three suppositions I lean I should reply, "To the third." But whether or not she did it unconsciously or what was the secret of her power over me I have no idea.

Bad Calculation.

John, who was going to bed one night and having no light, was groping his way (the bed being one of the old fashioned kind, with high bed posts). John, in feeling for the bed post, missed it with his hand and struck it with his nose.

"Ach!" he yelled. "That is the first time I knew my nose was longer than my arm."—National Monthly.

Guessing His Trouble.

"I sometimes feel as if the world had little use for me—that things would go on just as well if I were out of it."

"Come, cheer up, old man. Before this time tomorrow you may meet some girl who will look just as good to you as the other one ever did."—Chicago Record-Herald.

35 DEAD IN FIRE

Missouri Athletic Club Burns to the Ground.

SEARCH FOR BODIES DELAYED

Fire Breaking Out in Dining Room Destroys Missouri Sportsmen's home and Boatmen's Bank—Property Loss About $350,000—Many Jump from Windows—Dead and Missing.

ST. LOUIS, MO.—Between thirty and thirty-five dead is the estimate made by officers of the Missouri Athletic club here as the number who perished in the fire that destroyed the seven-story club building occupied by the club and Boatman's bank. About twenty-nine persons were injured.

The fire broke out about 2 o'clock in the morning and is still burning. Fire Chief Swingley said it would be unsafe to send any one into the ruins to search for the missing for some time.

The Known Dead.

The known dead follow: John M. Rickey, Chicago, treasurer and auditor Ford Manufacturing Company of St. Paul; A. J. Odegaard, Chicago, sales agent Railway Supply company; L. A. Ruff, St. Louis buyer for a wholesale hardware company; Edwin C. Kessler, St. Louis, cashier wire company, killed in leap from sixth floor; James D. Reilly, contractor, St. Louis, body identified by doorman of Missouri A. C.; unidentified man.

The man listed as unidentified may be William E. Erd of East St. Louis. Letters in the clothing on the body were addressed to Mr. Erd. The body was identified also as that of Allen Hancock of St. Louis.

The Missing.

Club Register Showed 135.

One hundred and thirty-five persons were registered at the club for the night. How many of these were in the building at the time of the fire is not known. Of those who were in the club thirty-five have been found.

The property damage is estimated at about $350,000. In the vaults of the bank covered by the ruins are more than $1,000,000 in currency and $27,000 in coin. At daylight only part of the front and rear walls remained. The roof had caved in, carrying several floors with it, and the walls had collapsed from the roof to the ground floor, which is occupied by the bank.

When the firemen arrived on the scene the flames were shooting out of the roof and all the windows above the second floor. Men were jumping from windows and others were descending ropes made of bed clothes tied together. More than a dozen jumped several stories to the roofs of adjoining buildings and escaped with broken legs or less serious injuries.

Baseball Men Escape.

One of those who were in the club at the time of the fire, but escaped, is Walter Frisch, financial agent of the St. Louis Federal league baseball club. Mordecai Brown, manager of the club, remained at the club until a few hours before the fire was discovered.

The telephone operator, a young boy, remained at his post on the ground floor even after the firemen began pouring water into the building. Many of the guests credited their escape to him.

The fire is believed to have originated in the dining room on the third floor, although the police are giving some credence to the theory that safe blowers may be responsible, as two explosions were heard in the Boatmen's bank.

ST. PAUL RY. HIT

Commerce Commission Scathingly Denounces System.

REVENUES INCORRECTLY GIVEN

Charge That Concern Juggled Books to Obtain Higher Freight Rates and Better Market for Securities—Actual Value of Road Not Impaired—Report Causes Sensation.

WASHINGTON. — Scathing condemnation of the system of accounting of the Chicago, Milwaukee & Puget Sound Railway company is contained in a report made public by the interestate commerce commission, as the result of its first investigation to ascertain whether the railroads of the country are obeying the system of accounting presribed by the commission.

The principal charges of deception cited are:

That the St. Paul company exaggerated its income for 1910 by more than $5,000,000.

That for 1911 the road reported a $2,000,000 decrease in income which it falsely informed its stockholders was due to failure to obtain higher freight rates and to increased cost of labor.

That the Puget Sound company falsely reported an income of more than $2,000,000 for 1910 and used the fictitious showing of profit to boom the sale of its bonds to the public.

That the Puget Sound company falsely reported a valuation of its properties which was $160,000,000 in excess of the cash investment.

That by a reduction of the rate of depreciation the St. Paul has inflated its net operation income $500,000 a year.

In spite of the reports of irregularities in St. Paul financing, which have been current for a year or more, the report issued by the commission caused a sensation here. The reference to the scheme by which the St. Paul sought to show by falsification the need of increased freight rates is regarded as significant, inasmuch as the question of a 5 per cent advance in tariffs is pending before the commission. The carriers are endeavoring to establish their claim to an advance by a showing of loss of revenue.

The actual values of the roads have not been impaired by the falsifications and the St. Paul and Puget Sound roads have promised to see that their books are properly kept in the future.

CITIES AID TO PROSTITUTION

Judge Lindsey Declares Ten Per Cent of Women Fall.

DENVER. — "Ten per cent of the women in the cities of this country are engaged directly, or indirectly in prostitution," said Judge Ben B. Lindsey at a luncheon of the Civic Federation. He was defending the mothers' compensation act, exactly as it reads in this state, so that it includes all mothers, regardless of the fact whether they are widowed or deserted.

"It is an appalling fact," he said, "that about one-half of the women of child-bearing age are unmarried, as a result of this condition police investigations throughout the country show that in nearly all the large cities, 10 per cent of the women of child-bearing age are engaged in prostitution, or occasional prostitution. The illegitimate birth rate is on the increase, while the legitimate birth rate is on the decrease. Civilization is fast becoming a conspiracy against nature."

His Sad Plight.

The Clergyman—I had no idea profanity was so prevalent till I began to drive a car. His Wife—Do you hear much of it on the road? The Clergyman—Why, nearly every one I bump into swears frightfully.—Puck.

PEDDLER'S CASE IS IN U. S. SUPREME COURT

Trivial Matter Develops Issue of Great Importance.

WASHINGTON. — It is a long cry from the office of a Berrien county, Mich., justice of the peace to the United States supreme court.

Nevertheless, the attorney general of Michigan, Grant Fellows, and the former attorney general and present state supreme court justice, Franz J. Kuhn, are here to argue that the Michigan justice of peace was perfectly right in finding one David J. Stewart guilty of peddling without a "hawkers" license on a certain August day, 1909.

It is said there never was a case more trival in itself. Yet, on the decision of the supreme court hang fundamental questions involving the right of citizens of one state to do business in other states.

Stewart was in the habit of coming into Michigan and soliciting orders for tea, coffee, sugar, flour and such staples. The Berrien county authorities, charged him with peddling without a license, and his appeal from the lower courts in which he was beaten has come to the United States supreme court. The justice declared Stewart could not raise claim to protection of interstate commerce, inasmuch as he did not ship his goods from Chicago to the purchasers direct, but instead billed the car to himself.

OPTION ORDER IS RESCINDED

Lapeer Board Can't Find Way to Submit the Question.

LAPEER, MICH. — Unable to find any way of calling a vote on the local option question in the face of a decision of the supreme court invalidating the petition of the "drys" because it had an insufficient number of signers according to the vote at the last "general election" the Lapeer supervisors found themselves compelled to rescind their order calling for a local option election this spring.

In consequence Lapeer country faces two more years of wetness. The agitation for a vote on the liquor question gained much force during the winter from the fact that Lapeer has become the "drinking fountain for Flint." Every Saturday that the Flint auto factories pay off an extra car is attached to the evening train to Lapeer, and the car is usually filled.

SAGINAW FATHER CONVICTED

Jury Finds Herbert Kaiser Guilty of Offense Against Daughter.

SAGINAW, MICH. — Herbert Kaiser, Spaulding township, was found guilty in the circuit court of a statutory offense against his twelve-year-old daughter. The jury was out less than an hour. Kaiser was tried in the early part of September and the jury after being out twenty hours disagreed. The woman's civic league here was interested in the affair and members attended the trial.

The testimony showed a horrible state of affairs in the Kaiser home, father, mother and children all living in one room.

Long Lived Clock.

Of all machines made by man none can compare for long life with the clock. The life of a clock is as much longer than that of any other machinery as the life of a man is longer than that of a dog. The French city of Rouen has a great clock which was built in the year 1389 and is still keeping good time. Except for cleaning and a few necessary repairs it has never stopped during a period of more than five centuries. It strikes the hours and chimes the quarters.

OVERSENSITIVE GIRL DRIVEN TO SUICIDE

Taunts Over Losing Chamois Skin Leads to Poisoning.

SAGINAW, MICH. — Fearing the taunts of her schoolmates because of losing a chamois skin which she carried to school with her powder box, Marion Lint, sixteen years old took poison. Her body was found in bed.

A note to her sister tells of her fears as follows:

"Good-by, Ethel. Have a good time. I could not stand what I would have had to face if I went to school tomorrow about the chamois. I thought this would be the best way. Have been contented with life till now, but could not stand it to think of going back and facing my school friends."

The girl lost her chamois skin the day before and when she asked the girls to help her find it they laughed at her.

MICE INVADE SCHOOLHOUSE

Teachers So Accustomed to Them They Don't Scream

VASSAR, MICH. — Mice have invaded the local school building. The teachers—they have become so accustomed to the animals they no longer scream—say they have never seen so many rats and mice before. The animals appear in the class rooms in droves and create much disturbance.

Professor Odle is figuring on some sort of a trap to catch the animals in large numbers. The single traps, he says, would be of little value because of the rapidity in which the pests are multiplying. Many of the children are disappointed when they prepare to eat their lunch to find that the mice have beaten them to it.

BUYS 7,000 ACRES FOR FARM

Idaho Man Will Raise Cattle on Michigan Land.

HART, MICH. — Declaring that the land in Lake and Mason counties is far superior to the Panhandle of Texas for grazing purposes, John A. Hamilton of Marissa, Idaho, has purchased 7,000 acres in the two counties. His tract runs west from Wolf Creek in Lake county into Mason county. Part of it will be used for grazing and part for fruit lands.

Hamilton will plant several hundred acres to gooseberry bushes, and other fruit farmers will watch his experiment with interest. He estimates the cost of setting out an acre of gooseberries at $85, and says the average yield is $300.

PROMOTE PRISON BANKERS

Jossman, McHugh and Simpson Lifted to Jobs as Bookkeepers.

JACKSON, MICH. — Ralph Jossman, Christopher J. McHugh, and Harry H. Simpson, three Michigan bankers, who are serving sentences in Jackson prison, have received "promotions" during the last week and are now keeping books in one of the prison industries. They were formerly employed at common labor.

But at the rate I am going we shall never get to St. Petersburg.

Darkness came to us that evening just an hour too early for us to see any thing of Look-out Mountain and the next morning instead of the hills of Tennessee and Georgia, we saw the plains of Florida with its scattered pine trees and dilapidated negro huts. Mile after mile slid by for nearly 3 hours with so little variation that all the miles might have been twins for any difference we could see. At about 10 a. m. Jacksonville, a city the size of Grand Rapids, the metropolis of the State, was reached. Negros fairly swarm the streets and about the depot. We allowed one of them, with a fair looking carriage and good horses, to take us to the Westmorland hotel. The card he gave us had just three lies on it: Refitted, refurnished, and clean, it said, and so we went in and registered. In five minutes we wished we were out of it. After dinner we wished so harder and we simply could'nt and would'nt stand it, and so we got out and I paid—well that's another story.

Up Bay street a block we found the Everett, a clean, comfortable hostlery with moderate prices, and you can hardly imagine how relieved we were to be clear of a bad bargain.

About a dozen years ago Jacksonville was nearly all burned up and in its place there is now a city with the marks and cleaness of a new modern city, quite uncommon in the south. The new post office is a beauty and the best hotel compares favorably with the better class of such buildings in northern and eastern cities. It's fine harbor insures it a great future. To build a block of stores or any heavy building, the getting a foundation is a very great undertaking. As soon as they begin to dig water begins to come in and they begin to pump and the pumping must go on night and day till they have made one piece of cement as large as the foundation is to be and thick enough to support the weight of the structure. In many cases it takes as long to, "get a foundation" as it does to do all the rest of the job.

Now I see we will not get to St. Petersburg at all in this letter, so I will wonder a little more and then close.

Just before leaving home I bought a pair of new rubbers. When we had been some 24 hours in Jacksonville I missed them and knew I had left them in the Pullman. With the secretiveness characteristic of well trained husbands I said nothing about it to Mrs. North. I asked her to go walking with me knowing she would tire out first, and that then it would be easy to get her back to the hotel while I continued the walk. The ruse was successful and in a half hour or so I was alone walking to the depot. At the "Information," window I struck a trail that lead to a back door with sign, "Pullman Superintendent's Office" on it. Inside I stated my errand and was told to, "Go up stairs, turn to your right, Mr. Hudson is the man you want, he sits next the railing." When I went into that room up stairs there were some 8 or 10 young negros between me and the coveted railing. They were very well dressed indeed, I think they were Pullman porters off duty. My thought was, "I'll have to wait quite a long time for all those fellows to be attended to." Now I am not detailing all this on account of a pair of rubbers that are forever lost to me, but that you may see something that almost dumfounded me. I had hesitated but a moment when one of the darkies saw me. Instantly he stepped to one side. His movement attracted the attention of the others and in one quarter the time it takes me to tell it they had opened a clear path to the desired railing. As I stepped forward Mr. Hudson looked up from his writing and immediately arose from his chair and asked what I wished, and all those negros waited till I was attended to. Why did they do that way? Because in the south the negro is in awe of a white man. I confess I was tremendously impressed with the significance of this little occurrance. The difference in public sentiment in Florida and Michigan along this line is simply astonishing. Is the southern custom right or wrong? I am sure I don't know.

This was misfortune No. 3, but the novelty and significance of it was well worth the price of a pair of rubbers.

When I lose a thing its lost, depend upon that. By way of contrast I will cite the case of my traveling companion. She goes through life scattering her possessions here and there with an absolutely reckless hand but nearly every thing she loses, she recovers. She wears today a pair of nose glasses that she has twice lost under conditions that should have deprived her of them forever, but each time they did like that celebrated cat, they came back. Since we came to this hotel she lost her purse with a substantial sum of money in it. Ran sacking our trunk and room revealed nothing but the fact that it was lost. She spoke to our land lady about it. She had seen and heard nothing of a lost purse. I could not quite give up that Mrs. North could lose any thing. Next day Mrs. Cole our hostess, asked

"Have you found your pocket book yet?"

"No," replied Mrs. North.

"The gentleman in No. 9 has a pocket book that one of our patrons found in the hall yesterday. Come with me and I'll introduce you to him, said Mrs. Cole. The introduction over and its purpose explained, No. 9 enquired.

"What kind of a pocket book was it that you lost Mrs. North?"

"A small black leather one with gold metal trimmings," said Mrs. North.

"What had you in it?" was the next question from No. 9.

"A ten dollar bill, two fives, and a one," said the lady.

"I have not opened the book," said No. 9, "but I will do so and report." He stepped into the corner of the room and in a moment returned saying,

"You have described the contents perfectly. Its your property, here it is," and Mrs. North felt better. I was not at all surprised for it was the way the fates treat our "Better half," praise the Saints! I could go on like this all day but knowing your feeling of, "Heaven forbid." I spare you.

I am, very truly yours,
L. G. NORTH.

OLD PAPERS

Mrs Joseph Waing brought into the office a few days ago two Heralds of 1879. One was dated April 3 and had the obituary of John C North who died March 30 1879 age 59 years

Perry Hosmer left for Topeka Kansas April 3 hoping for a good business opening.

H W. Stevens and N C Arnold had just rented Sopers Livery barn to be used to display agricultural implements and buggies.

An extract from the Adrian Times says, Prof. Z. C. Spencer of Tecumseh will deliver a lecture at the Presbyterian church this evening on "Our Teacher" under the auspices of the State Teachers Institute now in session.

The second paper bears date Nov. 13 1879. F B Wood has just begun work in Wm. McCowans furniture store; being a great favorite with the young folks this is thought to be a move in the right direction.

The new plot for laying out the cemetery was placed in Recorder McKinnons office, as completed by Mr Olivar of Kalamazoo. 9½ acres have been added to the grounds and work will begin on the improvements in the spring.

AMUSEMENTS

SHEEHAN ENGLISH OPERA COMPANY TO BE HEARD AT THE OPERA HOUSE ON Monday March 16.

This celebrated organization present a triple bill consisting of three of the world's most popular operas.

Never before in this country has so much interest been shown in a performance of opera as in the combination bill given by THE SHEEHAN OPERA COMPANY.

The performance consists of the tower scene with its famous Misereree as well as the dungeon scene of "Il Trovatore". These two scenes comprising the most beautiful part of the entire opera. The scene of "The Bohemian Girl" which is given, includes "I Dreamdt I Dwelt in Marble Halls," and the beautiful duet following it "Then You'll Remember Me", "Bliss Forever Past" and the famous trio between the tenor, soprano and baritone. The entire second act known as "The Kitchen Scene" of "Martha" is given, which includes "The Last Rose of Summer", the duet between the tenor and soprano, The Spinning Wheel Quartet and The Good Night Quartet. This act also includes all of the most delightful comedy of the entire opera.

The arrangement has met with instant success, as it gives all that is worth while in the three operas, and cuts out the tiresome explanatory routine. It gives the most interesting scenes, the best music and its appeal is to the music lover and casual theatre goer as well.

Arrangements have been made with Willett's orchestra of Adrian to augment the players carried with the company so a large, first-class orchestra capable of playing the music is assured. The seat sale opened at Hay's bakery this morning and from present indications a capacity house will greet the first performance of Grand Opera in Tecumseh Monday night.

SCHOOL NOTES

Prof. Reed's Botony class went on an exploring expedition Monday a. m. up Evans Creek to the railroad bridge for some specimens of lichens and moses. They reported a pleasant stroll.

The Junior class puts on a moving picture show tonight at the Bradley Opera House. We guess it was for the benefit of the base ball team.

The Salamigundi club have been meetings quite often lately

The Girls' Glee club have had several rehearsals lately

Prof Reed was out of town a few days ago and the Botany class was taught by Miss Exelby.

Doc' Hendershott played the Diogenese stunt the other day when he walkek into the school with a lighted lantern. We wonder if he was looking for a "man"

VERDICT OF THE AUDIENCE.

Ordeal Which Budding Actors In Normandy Must Face.

It is not without fear that an actor makes his debut in the capital of Normandy. A debut in the French provinces is by no means an easy ordeal to pass through. An actor has a right to choose three different parts, says Mme. Rhea, which must be played inside of a month.

The first and second debuts have no significance; he may be received coldly, critically or enthusiastically—it has no meaning; the third one decides his fate. That night after the play the manager, very solemn in his dress suit, appears before the audience and says: "Monsieur or Mlle. So-and-so has made his or her debut. The management wishes to know the verdict of the public."

Then he produces a placard on which is printed in large letters the word "Accepted." If the actor pleases the audience applauds; if not, it hisses until the manager produces another placard with the word "Refused." Then the applause starts again, without regard for the feelings of the poor, broken hearted girl or boy who has been waiting in the wings for the verdict of that inhuman jury called the public.—Argonaut.

WE HAVE FAITH IN THIS STOMACH REMEDY

A woman customer said to us the other day, "Say, you aught to tell everyone in town about Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets. I would myself if I could." That set us to thinking. So many people have used them and have so enthusiastically sounded their praises both to us and their friends, that we had an idea you all knew about them. But, in the chance that some of you who suffer from indigestion, heartburn' dyspepsia, or some other stomach complaint, don't know about them —we are writing this.

They contain Bismuth and Pepsin, two of the greatest digestive aids known to medical science. They soothe and comfort the stomach, promote the secretion of gastric juice, help to quickly digest the food and covert it into rich, red blood, and improve the action of the bowels. We certainly would'nt offer them to you entirely at our risk unless we felt sure they would do you a lot of good. If Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets do not relieve your indigestion, check the heartburn, and make it possible for you to eat what you like whenever you like, come back and get your money. Sold only at the more than 7,000 Rexall Stores, and in this town only at our store. Three sizes, 25c, 50c. and $1.00.— B J. Pulver, Tecumseh, Mich. adv.

ORIGIN OF THE GOOD ROADS AGITATION

It is charged by the opponents of the adoption of the County Road System, that it has all been brought about at the instance of the Adrian Commerce club and the automobile association. I desire to correct this statement by showing just where it did originate.

In October, 1913, the lecturer of Madison Grange asked that the sisters meeting and the brothers give a program at some subsequent meeting following, [illegible] with.

It so happened that the brother who had charge of the brothers' program was a booster on the subject of adopting the county road system and said many times in private conversations that he believed the good roads sentiment was strong enough to carry with the voters of Lenawee County. And he still thinks so, if the merits of the question had been adhered to instead of working on the prejudice of the people and arraying one class against another With the view of bringing the question before the public, Geo. A. Smith was prevailed upon to write a paper on the subject which he read before the grange on the evening Oct 31 The paper was so well written and conditions so clearly explained that Mr. Smith was urged to have it published in the local papers, to which he strenuously objected, but finally consented; provided a brother would take it to the printer and that his (Mr. Smith's) name should not appear. Please contrast this with the eagerness of some people to get their names before the public.

The editors declined to publish the article, without a signature, and it was under controversy several days before it appeared in print.

This was the first article published on the road question, and was the spark that ignited the whole bunch of fire works.

It so happened that the annual banquet of the Adrian Commerce club was about due, and someone remarked, "Why not have it a good roads meeting?" This they decided to do.

All parts of the county were represented by speakers that meeting, and I doubt if any of them were influenced by the Adrian Commerce club or any other club.

This is all there is to the conniving and underhanded methods used to methods used to get the road question before the people, that we have heard so much about. It is charged by the opponents of good roads that the rural members of the Lenawee County Good Roads League are entirely controlled by the Adrian Commerce club, but we who know the president and treasurer of the league know they are not made of that kind of timber. They are also charged with agitating the question in the hopes of all getting office. This is a just judgement considering where it comes from.

Trusting the foregoing statement of facts will show how the whole thing came about, and that the voters of Lenawee County in deciding which way to cast their ballot, will take the testimony of those in neighboring counties who have lived under the county system, the township system and no system as against those who have lived under no system.

R. A. WOOLSEY,

Criticizes Mr. Horton's Methods

I regret very deeply the necessity of publicly questioning the motives of methods of anyone connected with the good roads controversy. Individually I would prefer to remain silent. But continued silence may be construed to mean submission and may be looked upon as a plea of guilty by those not familiar with the circumstances. I feel compelled therefore, in justice to myself and the cause which the Good Roads League is seeking to promote to say a few words in regard to the methods pursued by Mr. Horton.

Mr. Horton charged the county institute president with being unfair and loading the programs of the one-day institutes with good roads speakers. Mr. Horton is familiar with institute work and knows such a thing to be impossible The local institute manager has absolute control over his own programs and arranges them in accordance with the needs and sentiment of the community.

The state speakers are sent here by the state superintendent, also of a list of subjects they are qualified to discuss The local managers choose the subjects best suited to their locality and make out their programs accordingly, filling in with local talent. The county institute president knows nothing of their programs until he sees them in the paper or receives a copy by mail.

The question of highway improvement was one of these questions sent out this year, and has been every year since I have been connected with institute work. When the board of supervisors voted to submit the question of adopting the county system of road building, that act made the subject of highway improvement one of vital importance. The county institute secretary wrote Mr. Taft, the state superintendent explaining the situation. Mr. Taft, immediately arranged for a man to visit each institute to explain the law and its working Mr. Bates came the first two weeks under pay of the State Good Roads Association, and Mr. Rogers the last week as a state official, all of which was published at the time The very same thing was done two years ago. and Mr. Rogers has been here for several years at our institutes.

At Fruit Ridge Institute Mr. Horton appropriated the road question to himself in discussing his methods of highway improvement; Mr Bates was allowed a few minutes at the close during the discussion, but his name did not appear on the program. This goes to prove that the local manager has full control of the program At the county round-up the negative side consumed 105 minutes. Does that look like a program "loaded" for the affirmative?

Mr. Horton said only [illegible] for the affirmative of the system of county roads were placed upon the program The programs show this statement to be false. The Secretary informs, me that in every case the negative side was represented on the program Mr Horton makes these statements and charges unfair methods, thinking to influence those not familiar with institute work, himself knowing the same to be untrue.

In several instances the county instances the county institute president suggested to Mr. Horton to represent the negative side, knowing him to be capable of making a strong argument and believing he would do the same in a fair, business-like and friendly spirit. Instead, Mr. Horton resorted to the cheap and out-of-date methods of the ward politician in trying to befog the issue with personal abuse unwarranted and untrue statements, bitter sarcasm and an appeal to the senseless perjudice which still exists against the city and the automobile Tremendous sacrifice for a man to make toward the close of an otherwise honorable career.

Baker's Dozen.

The custom on the part of bakers allowing 13 to the dozen dates back to medieval times, when bakers were carefully watched. The trade was surrounded by many laws and the most severe penalties were imposed for any shortage in weight. In order to avoid the possibility of falling below the standard measure it became customary for bakers to allow an extra loaf with every dozen.

HAD CATARRH FIVE YEARS.

MR. S. S. JOHNSON
St. Elmo, Illinois.

Mr. Johnson of St. Elmo, Illinois, was troubled five years with catarrh. The catarrh was so severe in his case that his life seemed threatened. As he expresses it himself, he had "one foot in the grave."

Of course he tried to get relief. Many practitioners were consulted and a catarrh specialist in St. Louis was tried. He got so weak and thoroughly run down that he declares he could not walk more than a hundred yards without resting.

Few people understand that catarrh is a constant drain on the system. The discharge of mucus which is going on in such cases is largely composed of blood serum, and is a great waste. Sooner or later it will weaken the strongest man.

According to reports received from Mr. Johnson, he was in a desperate condition, but he found relief from his trouble. We will let him say how he found it. His own words say:

"My friends told me to take Peruna, and I did so. I now feel that Peruna has saved my life. It is the best medicine on earth, and I would not be without it."

This seems almost too good to be true. No doubt there are some readers who will think so. The above statements, however, can be verified by writing Mr. Johnson.

Everyone should be provided with the last edition of "The Ills of Life," sent free by the Peruna Co., Columbus, Ohio.

TWO YEARS IN PRISON FOR ILLINOIS BANKER

James H. Belt of Bunker Hill Found Guilty.

Carlinville, Ill., March 16.—A jury in the Macoupin circuit court found James H. Belt of Bunker Hill guilty of embezzlement and fixed his punishment at two years in the penitentiary and a fine of $300.

Belt was the proprietor of Belt Bros. & Co., a private bank of Bunker Hill, which failed on June, 16, 1913. The September grand jury returned eighteen indictments against him. He was found guilty on one and seventeen still remain against him.

Receiver A. S. Culberson testified that the liabilities were $164,351, and that $90,000 probably would be realized on the assets. The bank was founded in 1874 by James H. Belt, father of the convicted man.

Belt's attorenys moved for a new trial, which will be argued before Judge R. B. Shirley on March 21. Pending this motion, Belt is at liberty on bond.

A sensation was created in Bunker Hill when, in July, the Belt family tomb was broken into at night and the interior damaged. It has never been ascertained who broke into the vault.

Brigadier General Fred Funston is in command of 11,000 troops stationed at Texas City, Tex.

SLAYING MOTIVE IS SOUGHT AT INQUEST

No Light on Identity of Dead Bandit Given by Companions.

Peoria, Ill., March 16.—Aided by agents of the Chicago and Northwestern and the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific railways, authorities attempted to gain some light on the motives and identity of the four men who killed Arthur Fisher, an engineer, and wounded several other men near Manlius, Ill.

The proceedings were in the form of an inquest over the body of one of the robbers, who died after being wounded by a posse of farmers and deputies.

Thus far efforts to get the other three men to talk or to obtain information concerning them from laborers in railroad construction camps at Manlius, Langley and Sheffield have met with failure. The culprits are thought to be Mexicans, as several score of that nationality have been working in the camps, but questioning of these workmen has brought no information and the three prisoners silence has been unbroken.

A dozen Mexican laborers have been rounded up by the county authorities and detained in jail at Princeton as witnesses.

ASAMA-YAMA IS IN ERUPTION

Shaken City Capital of Procinve of Ugo—Environs Noted for Fine Orchards—Village of Kowakubik Reported Ruined with Many Casualties—Volcano 90 Miles from Tokio.

London, March 16.—A dispatch from Tokio says there was a severe earthquake in the perfecture of Akita, on the Island of Nippon, about three hundred miles northward of Tokio. Many persons were killed in the city of Kowakubik, which was ruined. The volcano Asama-Yama, ninety miles northwest of Tokio, is in eruption.

Shaken City Is Capital.

The city of Akita is the capital of the province of Ugo. It had a population at the last census of 37,000. It is but five miles from the Japan sea and its port is Teuchizaki. It stands on the right bank of the Toshima-Gawa and manufactures silk on a large scale. Its environs there are fine peach, pear and apple orchards. A long dynasty of fighting Daimyos dwelt there until the restoration at which time the now ruined castle was held by Lord Satake. The fine garden in the old castle has been converted into a lovely retreat which is known for its splendid cherry trees. Certain branches of native commerce know Akita for a special mat grass which is produced there and which is called Akita-buki.

The Island of Nippon is the most populous one in Japan, containing 35,000,000 of the total population of 49,000,000.

"VOTES FOR WOMEN" IS SEX REVOLUTION?

Suffrage Campaign Is Declared Feminist Movement.

Washington, March 16.—In a statement signed by Mrs. Orville D. Oliphant, general secretary of the New Jersey Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage, given out here there is contained a vigorous attack upon the course of woman suffrage in this country. Mrs. Oliphant said:

"Woman suffrage is the keystone in the arch of feminism and feminism as outlined by the suffragists appears to be a revolt against the true duties, responsibilities and ideals of womanhood. During the month of February two feminist mass meetings were held in New York city, all the speakers being suffragists, many of them noted leaders of the 'Votes for Women' agitation. That feminism is a live and vital issue of the suffrage campaign is a fact because their official campaign literature urges and demands feminism. It is hardly necessary for me to say that the women opposed to suffrage stand for the conservation of the home, the suffragists for the sex revolution which means the disruption of the home.

"Shall we abandon honor, morality, civilization at the call of a minority of women whose slogan is 'Votes for Women' but whose evident intention is a sex revolution. Let me suggest that the time has come to conserve the womanhood of the country and thereby preserve the nation."

CARRANZA JUST SAVING HIS FACE

Utmost Harmony with Unitep States Is Expected.

HIS AGENTS ADMIT BACKDOWN

In View of His Untenable Position in Former Note, Last Communication Is Taken as Yielding to Demands of Washington—U. S. to Represent Other Nations.

Washington, March 16.—Statements made by constitutional agents here confirmed the previous indications that the leaders of the rebel cause expect the utmost harmony to prevail in the relations between their organization and the government of the United States as a result of Carranza's last note. In his note Carranza expressed a willingness to receive representations from United States consuls in behalf of the citizens of other governments interested in Mexico.

It is declared by those known to be direct representatives of Carranza that on the occasion of the next representations which the state department may have occasion to make on behalf of foreigners in northern Mexico, it will be found that procedure laid down by Carranza will interpose no difficulties to the wishes of the United States either in form or substance. Simple statements in the consul's instructions to the effect that such representations are made at the request of this or that government will be all that is necessary to satisfy the rebel chieftain his advisers here state.

Carranza Just Saving Face.

It is pointed out that Carranza could not be expected to come out and repudiate all that he had said in his previous note which is now admitted to have been an ill-advised step.

It was necessary for him to preserve the dignity of his position, according to his agents here, to take a roundabout path in reaching the position the United States insists that he take. It is not anticipated that there will be in the future the slightest difficulty over the United States acting for foreign governments in northern Mexico.

GUN MEN ARE CONFIRMED

First Time Episcopal Confirmation Has Taken Place in Prison.

Ossining, N. Y., March 16.—Thirteen convicts, three of them life men, were confirmed in Sing Sing prison by Bishop David H. Greer of New York. It was the first time that an Episcopal confirmation took place in the prison.

After the service Bishop Greer was conducted to the condemned cells and he held a short conference with "Dago" Frank, one of the gunmen who was confirmed in the Episcopal church. "Dago" Frank reiterated his plea of innocence and he impressed the bishop deeply. The latter promised to interest himself in the case. The Bishop talked with others of the inmates and before leaving he knelt in prayer with the four gunmen, all but Frank being Jews.

Rose Cramer's Fortune

How It All Came True

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Peggy Moffatt giggled softly as she stole down the front stairs in the darkness. Behind her crept three other girls clad in dark sweaters.

It was long past the hour when the pupils of Mrs. Dacey's boarding school were supposed to be wrapped in innocent slumber. Every light in the house was extinguished, yet the four conspirators moved as carefully as though a stern monitor lurked in every corner.

It was Peggy, the ringleader, who opened the wide front door and slipped the night latch so they could reenter without a key. It was always Peggy Moffatt who led her companions into mischief, but they were singularly ready to follow her leadership.

Now they gained the driveway and turned into the darkness of the evergreen walk. They held tightly to one another as they passed through the dark tunnel and finally gained the little gate that opened on to the highway.

"It is only a few hundred yards down the road," assured Peggy as they went hand in hand along the narrow path. "You can see the lights of the camp in a moment."

"There it is!" cried Grace Wilde.

"Doesn't it look romantic and mysterious?" quavered Susie Agnew.

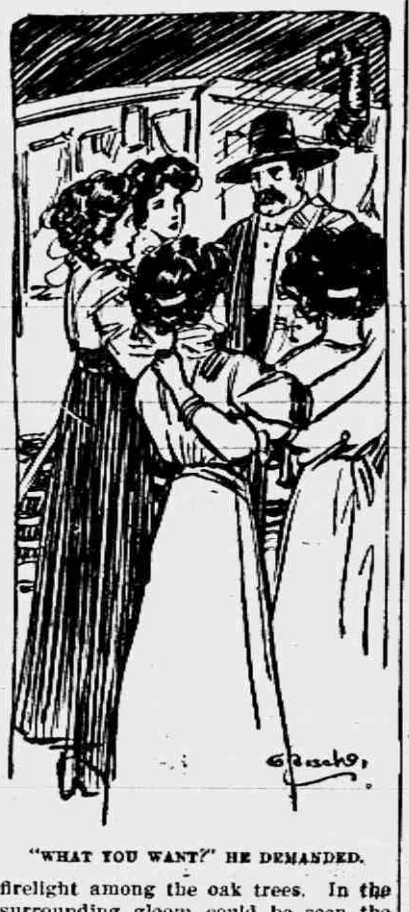
"Romantic folderol," said Peggy Moffatt loftily. "It's merely a gypsy camp, and some of them really need a good scrubbing with soap and water. So there! Did you notice the children? One of them was eating half a pineapple and"—

"Never mind about that," interrupted Maud impatiently. "Remember our errand, girls. We happened to see the caravan this afternoon when it was making camp, and Miss Cramer has promised to take us tomorrow to have our fortunes told, and we want to give that fortune teller a little information about our music teacher that will create some fun. Won't it be great?"

"Ripping!" said Peggy slangily. "Have you decided whether it is to be De Mauros or Mr. Holloway?"

"Oh, Mr. Holloway, by all means! He's so tall and lank and gloomy looking."

"Hush! Here we are." The four girls walked boldly into the circle of firelight among the oak trees. In the surrounding gloom could be seen the dim outlines of gaudy wagons. A dog barked, and a man's harsh voice stilled the animal. Then the man himself appeared, a gray headed gypsy, yawning sleepily.



"WHAT YOU WANT?" HE DEMANDED.

"What you want?" he demanded shortly, staring at them with curious eyes.

Peggy Moffatt told him in a few words that they were from the boarding school, that they wanted to consult the fortune teller and that they would pay well for rousing her from slumber.

He nodded and went to one of the wagons, where he talked in a low tone for several moments. Then he turned and motioned them to sit down.

"Her come," he said briefly and disappeared.

The four girls sat there, alternately shivering with nervous dread and giggling hysterically over their plan for the morrow. It would be easy to persuade the fortune teller to pour a marvelous tale into Miss Cramer's ear. Rose Cramer was teacher of music in the school and as a newcomer was an object of amusement to the half grown girls.

Presently the door of the wagon opened, and a woman's fat form came down the steps and waddled toward them, adjusting as she did so a spangled scarf over her tousled dark hair. Her calico dress was tumbled and soiled, and she had every appearance of having slept in her clothes.

"You want me?" she asked.

"Yes," said Peggy, drawing out her pocketbook.

Then the firelight shone on five heads bent close together in eager converse, four girls and the old gypsy fortune teller.

• • • • • • • •

The next afternoon found Rose Cramer and a dozen laughing girls strolling toward the gypsy camp. The four conspirators lingered behind the group that surrounded the young teacher. Many of them were very fond of the dark eyed little woman, dressed in black, who brought such wonderful music out of violin and piano and whose sweet contralto voice had thrilled them with homesick longing in the twilight.

The gypsy camp looked like a stage setting. There were the half circle of wagons, the glowing campfire among the fallen autumn leaves, the picturesque people themselves moving about with the slow grace of their race or drowsing idly on the grass. The sun shone warmly over all.

Just as the girls and their teacher seated themselves about the fire another and an unwelcome element was added to the occasion. This was the unexpected appearance of Professor Holloway, the German instructor. His tall, lean figure was almost upon them before his nearsighted eyes discovered their identity. Then his face went scarlet and he stood there, hat in hand, entirely embarrassed.

Rose Cramer smiled a pleasant greeting, but Susie Agnew clapped her fat hands with almost infantile delight.

"Sit down here, do, dear Professor Holloway," she chirruped. "We are all going to have our fortunes told, and you must have yours."

"I—er—I was merely strolling through the camp. Very fascinating, you know—study of the Romany language," he said haltingly.

"Do sit down and have your fortune told!" pleaded Maud Beals.

So Professor Holloway sat down opposite Rose Cramer, and the group fell into silence while Fanita, one by one, took the little palms in her own and read them glibly, promising such fairy tale fortunes as all schoolgirls love.

"And now, you, Miss Cramer—you promised," urged Peggy at last.

Rose shrugged her shapely shoulders and held out her slim white hand to the gypsy.

Fanita took it in her brown palm and looked long and deep into Rose's lovely eyes. Then she glanced half contemptuously at the eager faces of the schoolgirls, and her eyes dropped to the rosy palm that lay in her grasp.

"I see much happiness for the pretty lady," she began softly.

The girls cast a startled glance at their teacher's face. They had never thought of Miss Cramer as pretty, but now, with the swift blush on her pale cheeks, she was more than pretty. What wonderful eyes she had—blue or brown or gray?

"The pretty lady has traveled along a pleasant road," droned the gypsy. "The sun shone every day, but there came a time of storm and trouble, and the way led through the darkness of death; then music and the sound of young voices and through it all a love song.

"I see two men—one to whom you are indifferent, and he is unworthy. The other loves you, but he is afraid to tell. The lovelight shines in his eyes. Silly butterflies flutter about you. Brush them aside and take your happiness. I see a journey, a marriage and much happiness in a new place. It is in a warm land where the sun shines and the birds sing all winter. You will be happy."

Fanita dropped Miss Cramer's hand and for the first time smiled.

The girls stirred uneasily. There seemed to be an undertone of gravity in Fanita's voice. There was no joke about this fortune. It was not exactly as they had planned—to embarrass Miss Cramer. Rose was still blushing, but her long lashed eyes were studying the campfire.

"And now the gentleman's?" asked Fanita in a wheedling tone. Her big pocket was heavy with silver, and she was greedy for more, but, above the greediness, there was a note of eager interest in Professor Holloway. He had listened to the telling of Rose's fortune with impassive countenance. Now, at the suggestion that his own be foretold, he blushed like a schoolboy.

"Oh, be a sport!" burst out incorrigible Daisy Nevins, and she only laughed when Miss Cramer's delicately pencilled eyebrows were lifted in mute surprise.

Professor Holloway held out his long, lean hand, and Fanita took it in her own, studying the strongly marked lines.

"Happiness for the gentleman," said Fanita softly. "His way leads wherever the pretty lady goes, even to the sunny south, where they will live in peace and plenty. Butterflies are about you, too, but brush them aside. Heed not their silly laughter. Love and happiness are more important."

"Thank you," said Professor Holloway gravely as he tucked a crisp greenback into Fanita's hand. He arose to his tall height and looked around at the group of girl faces. Then his eyes rested on Rose Cramer's delicate face.

"Come, Rose," he said simply. And she arose and walked beside him.

"Come, children," she said absently over her shoulder. And the girls followed silently.

Fanita smiled scornfully upon them as they passed her.

"Fortunes, love and happiness cannot be bought with money," she said. "I have spoken as it was written in the hand. It is well." She pointed at the hilltop, where the professor and Rose waited for the girls. Their forms were outlined against the primrose of the evening sky. They saw that Rose and Holloway were standing there, hand in hand.

"It is beautiful!" said Peggy Moffatt soberly as they went away.

Britain and Conscription.

Although few people are aware of the fact, conscription has been part of the British constitution for 700 or 800 years. The militia law states that every Englishman between the ages of eighteen and thirty is liable to be called upon for military service and that each county must furnish a contingent in proportion to its population. At the time of the Napoleonic wars this law was actually applied, but since then it has fallen into disuse, without, however, being repealed. Every year since 1829 parliament has solemnly gone through the form of suspending for one year this ancient conscription by ballot.—Pearson's Weekly.

Infallible.

The druggist was becoming wearied by a shopkeeper, who, with no intention to buy, kept asking questions, examining various articles, pricing them and demanding the manner of their use. Finally she picked up a bottle.

"Is this pest exterminator reliable?" she asked. "How is it applied?"

"You take a tablespoonful every half hour, ma'am," the druggist replied with more than an ounce of satisfaction, and the woman asked no more questions.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Quick Cure.

"How annoying! My wife is always ailing. The hard work fatigues her."

"My wife also was always ill, but now she enjoys the best of health."

"How did you cure her?"

"I told her that I would give her so much a month for her dresses and her doctor. Since then she is quite well."—Paris Sourire.

Would Like a Look.

"Say, sheriff."

"Yes."

"I voted for you. Can't you show me a writ of habeas corpus? I read so much about 'em that I'd kind o' like to have a look at one o' the darn things."—Kansas City Journal.

In the Sweet By and By.

A frightfully henpecked man was summoned to the bedside of his dying spouse. For forty years she had made his life a burden.

"I think I am dying, David," she said, "and before I leave you I want to know if I'll see you in a better land."

"I think not, Nancy," he replied—"not if I see you first!"—Saturday Evening Post.

A NATIONAL BODY TO GUARD GIRLS

Travelers' Aid Society Plans to Spread Out.

HAS BRANCHES IN 800 CITIES

Co-operating With the Y. W. C. A. It Has Saved Young Women of Country Towns From the Snares of a Big City—Now It Is Proposed to Broaden Scope of Its Activities.

How the activities of the Travelers' Aid society have spread through the country for the protection of young women going to the large cities was demonstrated recently when Miss Florence Lawlor, sixteen years old, who had run away from her Brooklyn home, was taken under the shelter of the Young Women's Christian association immediately on her arrival in Chicago.

Such work has been going on at railroad stations and piers of New York city for several years in an unobtrusive way. Every railroad station is covered by two young women workers of the society at a time, and in the course of a year they help hundreds of girls to avoid the pitfalls of a metropolis.

How the Society Originated.

The Travelers' Aid society is of English origin, and it was founded in 1883 in London. Its badge is a branching palm tree in the desert, the design on the protecting shield. Attention was called by the Young Women's Christian association in Boston to the need of some means of keeping in touch with hundreds of young persons from the smaller towns who seemed to be literally swallowed up in the cities.

Many inquiries were received at the Boston headquarters of the association, and the result was the starting of the American society. Halifax, Nova Scotia, established a society at the same time, and branches were started in Philadelphia and Chicago. The work there was carried on as a division of the Young Women's Christian association for many years, and in 1905 the Travelers' Aid society was organized. There is now a project on foot to separate the society completely from the Young Women's Christian association and establish it as a national body.

An especial effort is being made for the starting of a strong society in San Francisco for the purpose of protecting young women who may go to the Golden Gate during the Panama exposition.

Covers Eight Hundred Cities.

The society is now represented in 200 cities, and there are organizations which co-operate with it in 800 cities. The society investigates on request the inducements offered any girl or woman to come to the city. This service is free, and the agents are not permitted in any circumstances to receive fees.

There are numerous instances given in the annual report of the society which reveal its varied and useful activities. The last statistical report of the society shows that in 1913 it aided 24,506 persons. The number of persons met at the various railroad stations in New York or connecting with the city was 6,146. The number of persons definitely helped since the beginning of the work to Jan. 1 of this year is 82,382.

CORN OIL FOR COOKING.

Kansas Professor Sees a Wide Use For Byproduct of Cereal Factories.

The discovery that oil made from corn can be used economically as a substitute for other oils in cooking has been made by Professor L. E. Sayre of the school of pharmacy at the University of Kansas.

"The cheapness of corn oil suggests the possibility of economy in substituting it in place of the more expensive oils," says Professor Sayre. "Our experiments show the value of this substitution in medicinal preparations. We are continuing our work to determine its importance in cooking and to prove that corn oil may be used interchangeably with cottonseed and olive oils."

Corn oil is a byproduct from cereal manufacturing. It is comparatively cheap, selling at 50 cents a gallon for the refined grade. Olive oil sells at $3 a gallon and cottonseed oil at 75 cents. Corn oil has a pale yellow color and a pleasant taste similar to freshly ground cornmeal. Its properties, according to Professor Sayre, are very similar to those of olive and cottonseed oils.

HE'LL BE GREEN MARCH 17.

Justice Giegerich of the New York county supreme court bench has a sense of humor. Morris Greenspun, a manufacturer of lubricating oils, decided that he would be socially and commercially benefited if he changed his name to Green. He petitioned the court for permission to make the change, which he suggested should take place on March 7. Justice Giegerich granted the application making Greenspun Green, but he changed the date when the new name shall become effective. The justice fixed the date as March 17.

LEAP OF A KANGAROO.

Never Over Four Feet High, but May Be Thirty Feet Broad.

Precisely how far a big kangaroo can jump is a matter of some dispute. A writer in Cassell's Natural History says that they can leap "over ten, fifteen or more feet." Mr. H. R. Francis tells us that he has "known an 'old man' to cover nineteen feet at each bound for full half a mile," and he believes that he does leap "an average of full twenty feet."

Mr. Lydekker is of opinion that the great kangaroo leaps "not far short of thirty feet," and Mr. Thomas Ward gives it as "at least thirty feet." Probably Mr. Rudyard Kipling's "twenty-five feet to a bound" is near enough as a general rule.

But with this more than Olympic leaping power they seem commonly either unable or unwilling to rise any height from the ground. Their specialty is broad jumping only. Mr. Ward says that they "cannot clear an obstacle greater than four feet," and a five foot fence is commonly high enough for any kangaroo paddock.—London Times.

AMUSEMENTS

"THE COMMON LAW."

It is but natural that any book which has achieved such wide spread reputation and one that has been discussed from every vantage should be selected as a vehicle for stage presentation. Therefore, it is not at all surprising that the leading managers have vied with one another in their eagerness to secure the dramatic rights to Robert W. Chambers, "The Common Law" the novel, which in all probabilities created the most profound sensation in recent years.

In the rivalry for possession of this special prize Manager A. H. Woods was the most successful and to him the author accorded every privilege with the sole understanding that the dramatization should allow the author's intentions to suffer as in many cases. That Manager Woods has faithfully carried out his part of the contract was fully attested in the production made last season which not only delighted Mr. Chambers but made an extraordinarily strong appeal wherever the play was seen.

It was particularly noticeable that the sensational interest which gave to the novel far-reaching command, had, instead of being lessened, become accentuated for acting purposes, and the audience, many of whom were familiar with the book, manifested no small appreciation for the admirable work performed by the play doctor.

"The Common Law" will be seen at the Bradley Opera House on Thursday, March 26.

The cast employed by Manager Woods with a view of upholding the dignity of this offering, taken in its entirety is said to be one of the finest organizations ever assembled and Mr. Woods has likewise bestowed splendid consideration with regards to the scenic environment even going so far as to include all af the furnishings and furniture, as part of the stage equipment.

"The Common Law" comes here direct from a four day engagement at the Valentine theatre, where they play Sunday, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. A. H. Woods, who was the owner of "Within the Law" which played earlier in the season also owns this attraction. They carry a car of scenery and furniture. A complete production.

There were nearly a hundred present Friday evening at the pleasant home of Mrs. A. S. VanWinkle, for a musical evening under the auspices of the Research Circle. LOCAL WOMAN NOW A BIG ADVERTISER

To Enjoy The Popular Dances

The feet must be free from pain. Many women and men realize the comfort to be enjoyed by using Allen's Foot-Ease, the antiseptic powder to be shaken into the shoes before the dance. Since dancing has become so popular, Allen's Foot-Ease is in demand everywhere because it rests the feet and makes dancing a delight. For Free Sample, Address, Allen S. Olmsted, LeRoy, N.Y. adv

Memory In Old Age.

Ways of the memory in later life exercised the famous Dr. Jowett of Oxford when he reached it, but he found consolation. "At fifty-five you fail to remember things—words, pictures, persons—after six months or a year's interval. Yet the circle of objects which you recognize is ever becoming wider, and this power of recognition is a great gift if cultivated. There is the greatest value in 'forgotten knowledge.' Instead of the stores of memory oppressing you, with a little trouble you can recall all that is useful or necessary." And to Lady Wemyss, recovering from illness, he wrote: "Like you, I read a book through and do not remember a word of it. I think, however, that the reading of the book has an effect, and if I read it again I understand it better. I believe that as we lose our powers of memory we may increase the power of reminiscence—that is, of recalling what we want in small quantities for a short time."

Did the Romans Smoke?

"Why is it that smoking never crept into Roman literature?" I have asked. To which a correspondent answers that it has crept. It is mentioned by Pliny (N. H. xxvi. 6-16). He records the use of coltsfoot for smoking and recommends smoking the dried roots and leaves of this plant as a remedy for obstinate colds and coughs. From this the botanical name of the coltsfoot (tussilago), which means "cough easer," has been derived. British boys who have neither coughs nor colds still smoke coltsfoot surreptitiously and find that it makes them satisfactorily sick.—London Spectator.

A Rebuff.

"Do you think your father would like me as a son-in-law?"

"Yes. I believe he would."

"Oh, joy! I"—

"Papa and I never agree about anything, you know."

WE CAN NOW SUPPLY THIS HAIR PREPARATION

Our big Harmony Laboratories in Boston have caught up their orders now and so we won't have to disappoint any who are using Harmony Hair Beautifier and want more of it, or any who have been advised by your friends to use it. We can now fill all demands, even if it becomes more of a rage than it is now.

Harmony Hair Beautifier is just what it is named—a hair beautifier. It is not a hair dye or hair oil—but a dainty rose-perfumed liquid dressing to give the hair its natural gloss and brightness, wavy softness, rich beauty. Easy to apply—simply sprinkle a little on your hair each time before brushing it. Contains no oil, and will not change color of the hair, nor darken gray hair.

To keep your hair and scalp dandruff-free and clean, use Harmony Shampoo. This pure liquid shampoo gives an instantaneous rich lather that immediately penetrates to every part of hair and scalp, insuring a quick and thorough cleansing. Washed off just as quickly, the entire operation takes only a few moments. Contains nothing that can harm the hair; leaves no harshness or stickiness—just a sweet-smelling cleanliness.

Both preparations come in odd shaped, very ornamental bottles, with sprinkler tops. Harmony Hair Beautifier $1.00. Harmony Shampoo, 50c. Both guaranteed to satisfy you in every way, or your money back. Sold only at the more than 7,000 Rexall Stores, and in this town only by us. B. J. Pulver Tecumseh, Mich. adv.

FREAKS OF NATURE.

An Uphill Waterfall and a Tree That Squirms Like a Snake.

Nature in the tropics, left to herself, writes John Burroughs, the naturalist, is harsh, aggressive, savage; looks as though she wanted to hang you with her dangling ropes or impale you on her thorns or engulf you in the ranks of her gigantic ferns.

Her mood is never as placid and sane as in the north. There is a tree in the Hawaiian woods that suggests a tree gone mad. It is called the hau tree. It lies down, squirms and wriggles all over the ground like a wounded snake. It gets up and then takes to earth again. Now it wants to be a vine; now it wants to be a tree. It throws somersaults; it makes itself into loops and rings; it rolls, it reaches; it doubles upon itself. Altogether it is the craziest vegetable growth I ever saw.

It was near Pali that I saw what I had never seen or heard of before—a waterfall reversed, going up instead of down. It suggested Stockton's story of negative gravity.

A small brook comes down off the mountain and attempts to make the leap down a high precipice, but the wind catches it and carries it straight up in the air like smoke. It is translated. It becomes a mere wraith hovering about the beetling crag.

Night and day this goes on, the wind snatching from the mountains in this summery way the water it has brought them.—Century Magazine.

That's What Every One Says Who Tries

Black Silk Stove Polish

DON'T imagine for a moment that all brands of stove polish are the same. Don't get the idea that to keep a nice glossy shine on your stove you must black it every few days. It's not a question of oft-repeated application. It's a question of the stove polish to use.

Black Silk Stove Polish is so much better than other stove polishes that there is absolutely no comparison—it's in a class all by itself.

It makes a brilliant glossy shine that don't rub or dust off. It anneals to the iron—becomes a part of the stove. It makes old stoves look like new and lasts four times as long as any other shine.

Get a can and give it a trial. Try it on your parlor stove, your cook stove, or your gas range. If you do not find it the best stove polish you ever used, your dealer is authorized to refund your money. Black Silk Stove Polish has been made by the same formula and sold under one name for 30 years.

Here is what some of the ladies write us:

"I sent to you for a can of Black Silk Stove Polish and found it so much better than any I had ever used that I asked my hardware dealer to order a supply. He did so, and is now selling nearly everyone in the place your polish. I had no idea there could be such a difference in stove polishes."

"I was visiting friends and they used Black Silk Stove Polish on their stoves. It made the best shine I ever saw, and after blacking, the polish did not rub or dust off. It is way ahead of any polish I have ever used."

Ask Your Dealer for Black Silk Stove Polish and refuse a counterfeit brand. Costs you no more than the ordinary kind, so why not have the best. Made in liquid or paste—one quality.

Black Silk Stove Polish Works, Sterling, Ill.

Use Black Silk Air-Drying Iron Enamel for grates, fenders, registers, stove pipes, etc. Prevents rusting. Not affected by heat or cold. Produces a permanent glossy black surface. Can, with brush for applying enamel, only 25 cents. Ask your dealer.

THIS NEW MEDICINE SAVES YOU MONEY

We are druggist right here in your town and make a living out of the drug business, but it is because people have to have drugs and not because we like to see people suffer—we don't. Our duty is to render the best service we can, and when someone is ailing, and we are interested in seeing them take the best medicine there is for their particular trouble. We don't recommend "cure-all," as we don't believe there are such things. We don't want you to spend more than you have to. Some of you get small wages, and when you're sick, none at all, and you should get the most you can for your money.

We recently came across a new remedy for increasing strength and building up people who run down and emanciated. we know that a slight trouble sometimes grows into a serious one, and to stop it in the beginning will save you in the end. This new compound is called Rexall Olive Oil Emulsion. It is the best remedy when you are run-down, tired out, nervous—no matter what the cause. It doesn't merely stimulate you and make you feel good for a few hours but takes hold of the weakness and builds up to a healthy, normal condition. It is a real nerve food tonic and builder of good blood, strong muscle, good digestion. It contains Hypophosphites, tone the nerves, and pure Olive Oil, which nourishes the nerves, the blood and the entire system. Pleasant to take. Contains no alcohol or habit-forming drugs. We promise that if you are not perfectly satisfied with it, we'll give back your money as soon as you tell us. Sold only at the 7,000 Rexall Stores, and in this town only by us. B. J. Pulver Tecumseh, Mich. adv.

JUSTICE HOLMES TO REMAIN

Rumor That Caused Report of Taft Being Justice Denied.

Washington, March 16.—Rumors that Justice Oliver W. Holmes contemplated retiring from the U. S. supreme court caused the report that President Wilson had tendered the place to former President Taft, and the latter had accepted. This report was denied at the White House.

Now the first part of the rumor is set at rest by the denial that Justice Holmes contemplates retiring.

NEVINS STORY IS DECLARED A FAKE

Father of Dorothy Arnold Will Will Have None of It.

TELLS OF COMMUNICATIONS

He Has Been Getting Them at Rate of 50 a Month—Bulk of Them Not Even Honest Intentioned—Discredits Action of Los Angeles Attorney—Believes Daughter Dead.

New York, March 16.—Francis R. Arnold, father of Dorothy Arnold, said at his home that he does not take any stock in the story that Ella Nevins of Los Angeles is his daughter. He admitted the receipt of several communications from a Los Angeles attorney who said that he believed that he had found Miss Arnold, but said that he had given little serious attention to these.

"I have been getting communications at the rate of fifty per month," said Mr. Arnold. "Some of these undoubtedly come from people who have honest intentions but not the bulk of them by any means.

"Early in January I received a letter from an attorney in Los Angeles. It was carefully worded and the general purport of it was that a young woman, who called herself Ella Nevins, had come to him and stated that she was my daughter. He said that she had asked him to communicate with me. He asked me if I wanted to investigate the matter further.

"He gave the names of several well known New Yorkers as his references. I know who some of these men are, but I was so convinced from the tone of his letter that he had no real information that I did not bother to communicate with these New Yorkers.

Decides Story is a Fake.

"I didn't answer his letter, in fact paid no attention to it, except to read it and decide that it was a fake. I did not call it to the attention of my lawyer, John S. Keith.

"Since then several telegrams have come "collect" to my home from Los Angeles. I refused to pay the charges on these, and they were sent back to be paid at the other end.

"I believe that it was an attempt to get money from me. It is ridiculous to suppose that if my daughter was in Los Angeles, and wanted to come home that she would go to a lawyer and ask him to write me a carefully prepared letter.

"I have made up my mind long ago that my daughter is dead, but if she were alive and wanted to come home, it would be the most natural thing in the world for her to send me a telegram herself, or else write me a letter in her own handwriting. She wouldn't go to a lawyer with carefully prepared proofs and ask him to get me to hire him to investigate the merits of her claims.

Thinks Daughter Is Dead.

"The newspapers are very foolish to pay any serious attention to such news, which carries all the earmarks of a fake on the face of it.

"I made up my mind long ago about the disappearance of my daughter, and that is the only possible explanation. She is dead."

MICKEY FOR MACOMB PLACE

Lawyer Recommended for Postmaster by Representative Tavenner.

Washington, March 16.—Ross Mickey, a lawyer of Macomb, Ill., will probably be appointed postmaster at that place, filling the vacancy which has existed for many months. Mr. Mickey has been recommended by Representative Tavenner of the fourteenth district. W. H. Hainline, the former incumbent, was removed some time ago and last summer Patrick H. Tierman was nominated for the post.

Mainly through the influence of Senator Sherman the nomination of Tierman was rejected by the senate on Sept. 11, last. Since then attempts which have been made to fill the vacancy have resulted in the selection of Mr. Mickey. His nomination will probably be sent to the senate soon.

Puss and the Owl.

Owls make very amusing pets, but lose the "happy family" knack as they grow older. A friend of mine had one that he wrongly kept tied to a stake by a cord. It was of that "tiger of the north woods" species, the great horned owl, and, while apparently quiet, not to say sleepy, in the daytime, blinking with those great yellow eyes in the manner that has made the country people believe they are sightless in bright light, he had a surprising way of "coming to life" whenever there was any particular reason for doing so. My friend had a favorite kitten that usually gave the owl a wide berth, but one day it strayed within the danger zone. The result was that the apparently somnolent mass of brown feathers suddenly galvanized itself, a powerful claw shot out, a piteous mew was heard and then—finis Felis domestica!—Outing.

ST. PATRICK DID IT

A Story Which Culminates on St. Patrick's Day

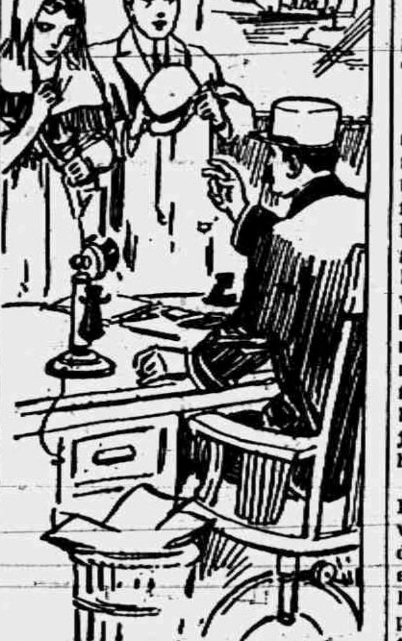
By TERENCE M'KEON

Little Mike Malone and Kathleen Rafferty were near neighbors in Limerick county, Ireland. Mike's father owned a few acres of ground, on which he made a scant living, and Kathleen's father and mother rented a like area from a landlord. Mike was freckled, and Kathleen's hair was red.

When Mike came to be about eighteen and Kathleen sixteen his freckles had disappeared and Kathleen's hair, which had really never been of a fiery hue, was turning into beautiful auburn, while her complexion was of that peachy hue prevalent among the Irish people. Mike had reached a period in life when young fellows begin to think about a career. He thought aloud to Kathleen, but to no one else, pouring his different plans into her ear. He would enlist in the army; he would ship for a sailor; he would go to London and seek a position.

Kathleen did not approve of any of these plans. She might have given her consent to the last named, but she [illegible] Catholic and had heard that the English people were mostly Protestants. One night she had a dream which was probably induced by thinking about these matters. She dreamed that St. Patrick had appeared to her and said:

"My daughter, you are a good girl, and Mike is a good boy. I know that you are earnest for the good of your church and for Mike. Tell him to go to America. There he will find many Irish people, and since the Irish there are nearly all Catholics he will not be diverted from the true church. And since there is plenty of work in America for strong young men like Mike to do it will depend upon himself, and himself alone, whether he makes himself comfortable. After he has made a home there he can send for you."



"YOU CAN DO THAT BEFORE YOU LEAVE THE ISLAND."

Kathleen related this dream to Mike except the part about his sending for her, which she kept to herself.

"But, Kathleen," he said, "how shall I get on without you over there? Didn't St. Patrick say anything about your going with me?"

"No, he didn't."

"Then I won't go, either."

"Would you disobey the instructions of our patron saint? Go to America, and, if you care enough for me to wish me to be near you, doubtless St. Patrick will find a way to bring us together. But maybe after you have been away from me awhile you'll forget all about me."

The last sentence was spoken with a tinge of sadness. Mike declared that if all the oceans on the face of the globe were between them he would never forget her. But he said that he could not go to America without means to pay his passage and a little money to keep him while he was getting work. Indeed, some one had told him that the government of the United States would not let him into the country unless he could satisfy it that he would be self supporting.

But Kathleen, whose faith was strong, urged him to rely on St. Patrick. The saint would not have appeared to her in a dream for the purpose of telling her how to advise Mike if he did not intend to help him. So Mike determined to go, and, not having Kathleen's simple faith, he concluded that he would have to provide the means for his going. He resolved to walk to Queenstown, where he hoped to find a berth on one of the ocean steamers going to New York.

The day he left home, after bidding goodby to his father and mother, he started on his journey, and Kathleen walked a few miles with him. When she reached her turning point she took from her pocket some gold and silver coins and handed them to Mike, telling him that she had saved them for him and wished him to take them to help him on his journey. Mike's eyes grew wet, but he refused to take the money till Kathleen said to him:

"Didn't I tell you that St. Patrick would help you?"

"But this is not St. Patrick who helps me; it is you, Kathleen."

"Not a bit of it. It's St. Patrick doing it through me. How would I have been able to get the money together if he hadn't helped me to do it?"

It was not the argument, but the faith of the girl and the knowledge that he would pain her by refusal, that induced Mike to take the money. But he resolved not to use it. He had heard that in that wonderful country one may plant a little money like an acorn and it will grow to be a great tree, and he resolved to invest the money for Kathleen and send it back to her with its accumulations. Then, after a long embrace, they parted, Mike keeping up his courage by making resolutions to work hard and save what he made, Kathleen buoyed by what St. Patrick had told her in her dream.

On reaching Queenstown Mike found that stokers were needed for the ships, for this was a very hard berth, and it was difficult to find men who would heave coal down in the hot furnace room. Fortunately for Mike, he found a chance to work his passage on one of the large liners that made the voyage across the Atlantic in a few days. On reaching New York he found no difficulty in passing the immigration commissioners since they had no objection to strong and healthy men. The only use Mike ever made of the money Kathleen had given him was to show it to the officials who examined him as evidence that he was provided with funds.

Mike had promised Kathleen that he would spend the first few years in the new country in learning a trade. So he hired himself as a helper to a carpenter, working for almost nothing for [illegible] learned the work. His boss became a contractor, which threw Mike into other branches of mechanical work, and, being quick to learn, he became familiar with many of the other departments of building. The result was that after serving his apprenticeship he worked as mason, plasterer, decorator, and knew a good deal about plumbing. Six years after reaching America he began to think about setting himself up as a contractor.

Mike had come over to America when some of the great railroad systems were being reorganized. One day while working on a house owned by a wealthy gentleman Mike told him of the money Kathleen had given him and asked him how he might invest it. The gentleman told him to buy a few shares of a certain railroad stock that was selling at a very low price. Mike invested the money as advised, and five years later the stock he had bought was paying 6 per cent dividend. This made the shares Mike had bought worth eight or nine hundred dollars.

Mike wrote to Kathleen that he could now support a wife and had saved the funds to enable her to come over and marry him. He also wrote her of the fortunate investment he had made for her. Kathleen wrote back that all this good fortune had come through St. Patrick, who would never have advised Mike's going to America if he hadn't intended to help him. Kathleen received her lover's letter at the beginning of the year and prepared to leave for America in the spring. Mike sent her what money she needed for the journey and enough besides to provide her with a suitable outfit as a bride.

It was the 6th day of March when Kathleen sailed for New York. The voyage was expected to require eight days, but the weather proved stormy, and the vessel did not reach Ellis island, where the immigrants have to pass the commissioners of immigration, till the tenth day after sailing, and even then it was late in the afternoon when the steerage passengers were transferred to the station. Kathleen on reaching the dock was suddenly clasped in a pair of strong arms and recognized her lover.

"Why, Mike," she said, "how big and strong you are grown!"

"And how beautiful," replied Mike, "you are! Your complexion is like the rose and your hair the color of gold!"

They went together to the emigrant office, where Mike introduced Kathleen to the commissioner, stating that she would not be a burden on the government since he proposed to marry her at once.

"Very well," said the commissioner; "you can do that before you leave the island."

"Divil a bit!" Mike protested. "Do you suppose we'd be married out of a church?"

Mike persuaded the commissioner that he was in earnest and would be responsible for the new arrival. So the couple went to New York, and, Mike having spoken to a priest and stated the necessities of the case, they were married without publication of the banns. Then Mike took his bride to his home, which was much to her liking.

Kathleen had arrived on March 16, and the first day she spent in America, the first of her married life, was St Patrick's day. She had not counted on this when she sailed and attributed it not to coincidence, but to St. Patrick, who had in a dream advised her to tell Mike to go to America. Mike had been expected to join in the procession that was to take place, but had excused himself, knowing that he would be newly married. He had provided a place for Kathleen and himself to see the paraders, and after attending early mass the pair occupied it. As the paraders passed Kathleen said to her husband:

"St. Patrick has been at the bottom of all our prosperity."

URGES POETRY FOR CHILDREN

Been to the Voice and Creative Imagination, Says Woman Specialist.

"Failure to give poetry its rightful place in the education of the child is responsible for the harsh American voice and lack of creative imagination demonstrated by so many students," declared Mrs. Maggie W. Barry of Sherman, Tex., a southern educator and leader in the national women's federated clubs in an unusual speech delivered to the teachers of southern Wisconsin in convention at Madison.

"Failure to accept poetry as a normal expression," she asserted, according to the Wisconsin University Bulletin, "is responsible for such crimes against the joys of childhood as the task sometimes assigned of turning poetry into prose. A poet can no more find complete expression in prose than he can in architecture."

RAILROAD AND BEEF COMPANIES INDICTED

Full Car Rates on Less Than Car Lots Alleged.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.—After nearly two weeks of deliberation the federal grand jury brought in two indictments against the Saginaw Beef company of Saginaw, and the Ann Arbor railroad company charging violation of the interstate commerce act.

It is charged that Swift & Co., of Chicago, would load one of its refrigerator cars with fresh meat and packing house products, containing shipments to 100 or more different parties along the line of the railroad company, and bill the same over the Chicago and Northwestern and Ann Arbor railroads to the Saginaw Beef Co. branch at Owosso.

When the car reached Frankfort it is charged that representative of the Saginaw Beef Co. was permitted to board the car and distribute its contents to his customers at the various stations along the route. In this manner, it is said, less than car load shipments were transported at the full through car load rate, making a saving of from $20 to $50 in tariffs on each carload of meat.

MISSING GIRL RETURNS HOME

Blanche Campbell Was Despondent Over Repeated "Flunks."

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.—Blanche Campbell, the seventeen-year-old student who disappeared March 5 from her boarding house at Ypsilanti where she was attending the Normal High school, is safe at her home in Muskegon. She left here in company with her brother, George G. Campbell, a baseball pitcher.

Miss Campbell came to Grand Rapids March 6 from Ypsilanti and went to the Y. W. C. A. boarding home early that evening and registered under her own name.

When her disappearance was published she was confronted with newspapers and made a clean breast of it to the matron. She was despondent, she said, after she found that she had "flunked" her studies during the second term at school and decided that she would earn her own living.

SWALLOWS GROUND GLASS

Soo Boy Attempts Life During Fit of Despondency.

SAULT STE. MARIE, MICH.—Alvin Dietz, seventeen years old, attempted suicide in the juvenile department of the county jail by grinding a mirror to bits and swallowing the pieces.

An inmate of the same department pounded on the door summoning Sheriff Bone. The lad rallied but may die. Despondency is said to be the "cause."

The explosion was deadened by quantities of clothing piled about the safe. The cracksmen entered through a trapdoor in the roof.

QUAKE JARS JAPAN

Many Persons Reported Killed in City of Akita.

ASAMA-YAMA IS IN ERUPTION

Shaken City Capital of Procinve of Ugo—Environs Noted for Fine Orchards—Village of Kowakubik Reported Ruined with Many Casualties —Volcano 90 Miles from Tokio.

LONDON. — A dispatch from Tokio says there was a severe earthquake in the perfecture of Akita, on the Island of Nippon, about three hundred miles northward of Tokio. Many persons were killed in the city of Kowakubik, which was ruined. The volcano Asama-Yama, ninety miles northwest of Tokio, is in eruption.

Shaken City Is Capital.

The city of Akita is the capital of the province of Ugo. It had a population at the last census of 37,000. It is but five miles from the Japan sea and its port is Tsuchizaki. It stands on the right bank of the Toshima-Gawa and manufactures silk on a large scale. Its environs there are fine peach, pear and apple orchards. A long dynasty of fighting Daimyos dwelt there until the restoration at which time the now ruined castle was held by Lord Satake. The fine garden in the old castle has been converted into a lovely retreat which is known for its splendid cherry trees. Certain branches of native commerce know Akita for a special mat grass which is produced there and which is called Akita-buki.

The Island of Nippon is the most populous one in Japan, containing 35,000,000 of the total population of 49,000,000.

YEGGS GET $15000

Eight Bandits In Auto Raid Chicago Furniture Store.

WATCHMAN IS OVERPOWERED

Pay Envelopes Ready for Distribution to Employes and $6,000 in Currency Receipts Is Secured When Safe Is Blown—Manager and Two Other Watchmen Bound and Gagged.

CHICAGO, ILL. — Eight safeblowers, working with almost clockwork dispatch, made a spectacular raid upon the Hartman Furniture and Carpet company, 3919 Wentworth avenue, early in the day and escaped with $15,000 loot.

They worked systematically in the building during nearly two hours, binding three watchmen and the resident manager, who was pulled out of bed, tied and gagged, and then tackling the safe on the first floor.

This was swathed in valuable rugs and blown open. In the safe were pay envelopes prepared for distribution and $6,000 in currency receipts. Forty thousand dollars in money orders was left scattered about the floor.

The safe blowers approached the building in an automobile. They left their machine standing in a dark passageway in the alley behind the building. Two of the bandits acted as lookouts. The chauffeur remained on guard near his machine.

Five of the men entered the three-story portion of the block-long building through a basement window. First they overpowered Simon Olson, a watchman. He was attacked in the restaurant, bound and gagged and thrown into the "rest room" of the building. An apron tied over his head and partly choked down his throat kept him silent.

The men then went to the first floor of the store and found Martin Urbinek watchman. He was handled in the same manner and thrown helpless into the rest room alongside Olson.

Strip Manager of Pajamas.

The quintet then directed itself to the office of Frank Bermeister resident manager of the business place, who has sleeping quarters in the building. They dragged him from his bed, ripped off a part of his pajamas, and bound and gagged him.

Thus prepared the burglars were free to work on the safe in the first floor office. This was carefully wrapped with rugs, loaded and blown. So skilfully did the safe blowers work that they were not overheard by another watchman, Joseph Goldman, who is assigned to the adjoining seven-story portion of the warehouse.

Failure of Olson and Urbinek to "pull" their reporting box at the regular half-hour interval, aroused the suspicion of the night patrol company which is employed to watch the place. A roundsman made an investigation.

Milton Bendixon is the operative assigned to that section Wentworth avenue. When he approached the building he also was taken by the bandits.

An employe of the firm found the gagged and bound men and reported to the police. Every officer in the district was detailed on the pursuit of the robbers.

FATHER M. J. DORNEY DEAD

He Was One of Best Known and Beloved Priests of His Church.

CHICAGO. — Father M. J. Dorney, rector of St. Gabriel's church, died here. Father Dorney's parish embraced a mile square just east of the stock yards and his participation in affairs of the locality made him one of the best known and beloved priests in the country.

He was born at Springfield, Mass., in 1851 and had been connected with St. Gabriel's since 1880.

YOUTH LOSES THREE YEAR FIGHT FOR LIFE

Drew Bolt into Lung but Survived Operation.

SANDUSKY, MICH. — Although his fight for life was one of the pluckiest attending physicians say they have ever witnessed, Alger Garrett, ten years old, is dead at his home near here after three years of suffering.

Three years ago while playing about the house he drew a small stove bolt into his lung. No bad effects resulted until two years after, when he was treated for abcess on the lung. Later he was taken to Port Huron for an operation, but as the physicians were about to remover the bolt the boy was taken with a severe coughing spell, and the operation was discontinued. Last December he was taken to Chicago and the bolt removed by means of a suction machine.

Alger was brought home and his plucky fight for life began. Although his lung was badly affected physicians thought for a time that because of his nerve he would recover. He seemed to realize the seriousness of his illness. "I don't want to die," he would tell those who were caring for him. The immediate cause of his death was a clot on the brain.

TWINS PLACED FEET TO FEET

Mother Solves Problem of Taking Them on Long Journey.

ST. JOHNS, MICH. — The fact that she has three small children two of them twins three months old, and that she lives in Hampton, Va., did not prevent Mrs. William Judd from attending the golden wedding of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Kelly, of St. Johns.

The problem of how to take care of the twins was a puzzling one, but Mrs. Judd solved it by getting a basket which she padded and lined. In this she placed the twins, feet to feet. They made the long trip comfortably and landed in St. Johns in perfect health, despite the change in climate.

AUNT'S MONEY FREES BOY

Bellhop, Who Stole $295, Is Placed on Probation.

LANSING, MICH. — Martin Richardson, who took $295 belonging to Charles Downey after he had cashed checks for that amount, was released on two years' probation. His aunt came here from Ohio and agreed to settle the case, and the charge against the boy was changed from grand larceny to simple larceny.

Martin was a bellhop at the Downey hotel at the time he took the money. He went from here to Chicago, where part of the money was stolen from him. He then went to Ohio and spent the remainder.

AMUSEMENTS

"THE COMMON LAW"

When A. H. Woods production of "The Common Law" comes to the Bradley Opera House next Thursday, March 26th, Tecumseh will have the honor of being the only "one night stand" this city attraction will play this season. Mr. Donnelly, the business manager of the company was here Wednesday and told Mr. Mark that it seemed strange to him to make a one night stand as this one was the only one the company makes during the entire seasons booking. The company comes here direct from Toledo where they play a four night engagement at the Valentine theatre, starting Sunday March 22nd and go from here to Detroit for a weeks engagement commencing Sunday March 29th. "The Common Law" plays no other towns around here but go to Detroit directly after playing the engagement here.

"The Common Law" is another one of A. H. Woods attractions. Mr. Woods also had "Within the Law" which proved such a big success here earlier in the season. The play is taken from the novel by Robert W. Chambers which is considered the greatest story of New York studio life ever written. The stage settings are arranged after drawing by Chas. Dana Gibson. "The Common Law" carries a complete carload of special scenery and furniture, carrying a special car for the production. The cast, like all of Mr. Woods companies, is composed of A No. 1 artists.

By the way, Mr. Donnely, while in Tecumseh, was looking over the stage and says that we have ample room to to handle the production in good shape. The settings will be made complete and the performance will be given exactly as presented in all of the cities. The car and working crew will arrive here from Toledo at 9 A. M. Thursday but the company does not get in until sometime in the afternoon.

"NOT SO BAD AFTER ALL"

"President Bibbins Comes Back at Helme."

The above are the head lines to an article sent us from the M. A. C. in answer to the charge of James Helme dairy and food commissioner of Michigan who gave his views on the Junior hop of that College, according to his estimate the function cost over $6,000.

By a careful study the real cost of the music, banquet and dance including all expenses, the cost figured $174 00. The members of the class paid $5.50 per couple. The entire ex. was borne by the class not a cent of College money being spent for this hop. This is the one social function that the young men indulge in during the year, and they do not think they deserve such unjust criticism.

In a later editoral of Mr. Helme, he says in a very sarcastic manner: "Just think of the independence of character being developed when a young man who ought to regard agriculture as the most important thing in life in order to play John D. Rockefeller for an idle hour, is willing to swell around in a rented suit of clothes."

He further goes on to ask "what place has football military rifle teams dress suits, powder pencils, cigarette cases, and secret fraternities in real farm life?"

One would almost suppose that Mr. Helme meant the life of a farmer to be the drudgery of years ago, when the fact is the knowledge gained at the M. A. C. lessens the work and gives him a chance to enjoy some of the privilges of the outside world as well.

BLOW SAFE IN DES MOINES

Burglars Overlook Paper Worth Thousands of Dollars.

DES MOINES, IOWA. — Expert safe blowers early in the day made a raid of the Townie Glove company plant here. After sawing the iron bars on the window leading from a fire escape on the third floor they entered the building and caused six explosions.

They escaped with about $20 in stamps, but left private papers worth thousands of dollars lying on the floor.

CHICAGO LIMITED QUITS RAILS

Seven Cars Leave Tracks Near Pierceton, Ind., but Nobody Hurt.

The cars did not overturn and no one was injured. A broken rail caused the accident.

WATERLOO, IA. — The Evening Courier and Daily Reporter, two of the oldest newspapers in Iowa, have been consolidated, and will be issued from the Courier office.

Some Knockers!

An article appeared in an Adrian paper last night in regards to the Sheehan Opera Company which is a [illegible] to the paper as well as to the people responsible for its appearance. The company appeared here Monday night before a good sized audience, and everyone proved to be artists of the best class and gave the best of satisfaction in every way. They played in Jackson, Friday March 13th and the Jackson Patriot the next morning gave them over a half column write-up praising them as one of the best entertainments in Jackson this season and ended up by saying "Grand Opera as sung by Mr. Sheehan and his soloists, is a delight and an artistic feast." Ann Arbor even gave them a better write-up than Jackson, if that were possible. In fact Tecumseh and Adrian were the only two small towns the company were booked into and we do not think that Adrian gets so much better stuff in the amusement line that they can afford to knock something they have never seen when such cities as Jackson, Ann Arbor etc give them the praise they do. If the company did not play in Adrian it certainly must have been some personal trouble. It was not on accout of the company not being capable.

Mr. Wooden is also secretary of the business and will retain both offices for the present. He has been with the company since 1883. Cards and the Calendar.

Playing cards in their makeup are akin to the calendar. The two colors are red and black, which answer to the equinoxes. The suits are four, answering to the four seasons. The twelve court cards answer to the twelve months; the fifty-two cards answer to the number of weeks in the year; the thirteen cards in each suit represent the number of weeks in a lunar quarter.

Bostonians In Good Standing.

"Yes, I had a brother in Boston once," said a Chicago lady to a Bostonian. "He was in some great musical society there, but I forget its name."

"Handel and Haydn society, perhaps," suggested her visitor.

"Well, I guess so. Handel and Haydn were Boston men, weren't they?"—Christian Register.

Placing Him.

Teacher—What is a host, Tommie?

Tommie—I dunno, ma'am.

"Suppose your father gave a dinner to a number of his friends. What would he be?"

"He'd be the 'goat,' I reckon."—Yonkers Statesman.

GOOD ROADS MEETING

A fair audience greeted N. P. Hull at the Opera House Tuesday evening. Mr. Hull was presented to the audience by Atty. Wood and gave a fine talk on the County Road System. Mr. Hull claims that the County System of building roads would furnish funds for building permanent good roads in this county at a cost to the tax payer that would not be a burden to him and if roads were built according to the State plan the county would receive from the State an award of $500.00 per mile.

At the present time the County pays about $16,000 00 per year for the State Highway fund and it is estimated that this year about [illegible] more will be paid to the State as a tax on automobiles making about $31000 00 that this County will pay to the State this coming year. This amount will go to the other counties as a reward for good roads unless the county builds this year good enough to receive the award from the State.

He also claimed that about [illegible] 00 was paid last year into the highway fund of the county by the tax payers for the building and maintenance of roads throughout the county and that the money expended did not build State reward roads. If this County System carries he claims that about two miles of State reward roads could be built in each Township each year at an average cost of about [illegible] per mile which would be reduced to $ 300 00 per mile by receiving the $500.00 award from the State.

A map was shown showing a possible plan outlined for good road building in this County. It is the desire of the plan to build roads throughout the county which will aid the farmer most in getting from his farm to his market.

Mr. Hull said he is a farmer and is interested in this plan of building roads for the benefit of the farmers not for the pleasure seeker who drives an automobile.

After the address he invited the audience to ask him questions about the plan. Mr. Hull gave ready answers to the questions asked and some seemed to be amusing in the extreme.

The Tipton band gave a number of fine selections, which were much enjoyed.

Pump Anchors.

A pump is a queer sort of anchor, but it has been found to be the best kind of an anchor for a sandy bottom. The anchor consists of a heavy piece of metal with a hole down through the center and a tube from this hole to the ship, so that water can be pumped from the ship down through the tube and out of the bottom of the metal mass. When this anchor drops to the sandy bottom and the pump is started it makes quicksand of the material round it so that it sinks in deep. When the pumping stops the sand hardens and holds the anchor. To raise the anchor it is necessary only to start pumping again and loosen the sand.—Saturday Evening Post.

What is Instinct?

Instinct is a generic term comprising all those faculties of mind which lead to the conscious performance of actions that are adoptive in character, but pursued without necessary knowledge of the relation between the means employed and the ends attained. It is hardly necessary to remark that sometimes "instinct" comes so close to "reason" that it is almost impossible to distinguish between them.—New York American.

THE COMING BALL.

Tecumseh has long been [illegible] its splendid dancing parties, and this winter has been no exception.

The furore for the new dances has involved everyone, and the Young Men's Club, and the Young Married People have given frequent dances which have been splendid additions to the social life of the village.

As a fitting climax to the festivities of the waning winter, a subscription dance will be given at Witherell Hall Wednesday, March twenty-fifth.

Mr. Fisher enjoys the reputation of conducting the best dance orchestra in Michigan, and his best corps of musicians will render this music

The numbers will not be confined exclusively to the new dances but will include many of the graceful older movements so that every guest may find something to his liking.

A number of artistic surprises are in store for the dancers during the program,—something which Mr. Fisher is famed for.

Mrs. Mattis will cater, and this insures the success of the dainty supper which will be served in Odd Fellow's Hall, on the floor above dance hall proper.

His Apprenticeship.

"Yes," said Mr. Pater, with ill concealed pride, "my youngest boy makes some smart remarks at times. Only recently he asked me what it meant to be an apprentice. I told him that it meant the binding of one person to another by agreement and that one person so bound had to teach the other all he could of his trade or profession, while the other had to watch and learn how things were done and had to make himself useful in every way possible."

"What did he say to that?" asked one of the audience.

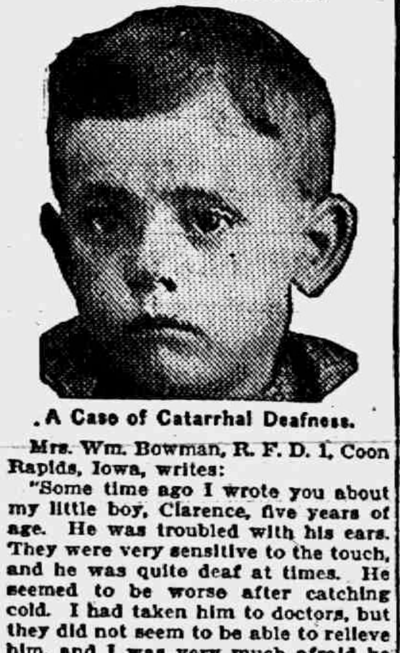
CATARRH OF THE THROAT

Is Liable to Produce Catarrhal Deafness

CLARENCE BOWMAN.



A Case of Catarrhal Deafness.

Mrs. Wm. Bowman, R. F. D. 1, Coon Rapids, Iowa, writes:

"Some time ago I wrote you about my little boy, Clarence, five years of age. He was troubled with his ears. They were very sensitive to the touch, and he was quite deaf at times. He seemed to be worse after catching cold. I had taken him to doctors, but they did not seem to be able to relieve him, and I was very much afraid he would lose his hearing entirely. He was getting more deaf every day.

"I wrote to you for advice, and you prescribed Peruna. I began giving it to him, and can now say that he is entirely cured. He is now well and hearty and can hear perfectly."

Catarrh Causes Many Diseases.

Many diseases are caused by taking cold. A cold is very likely to settle in the nose, causing nasal catarrh. It may settle in the upper part of the throat, called the nasal pharyngeal space. In this space are two little tubes called eustachian tubes, that lead to the middle ear.

If the catarrh settles in the pharyngeal space it may follow the mucous membrane through the eustachian tubes into the middle ear. If it does it will cause noises in the ear, and later on be sure to cause deafness.

Catarrh of the throat may follow the eustachian tubes up into the middle ear without causing much concern on the part of the patient. The partial loss of hearing is apt to be overlooked. A person may lose half his hearing before he knows it.

For instance, suppose a man can hear his watch four feet from the ear. If he loses his hearing to the extent that he can only hear the tick of his watch two feet from the ear he may not suspect it at all. His hearing is good enough for ordinary purposes. He goes on without the slightest suspicion that he is losing his hearing. He may have ringing in the ear, or cracking and snapping sounds in the ear, or a feeling of pressure in the ear, but he is not aware that he is losing his hearing.

Testing the Hearing.

It is a good thing to test your hearing with a watch. First hold the watch against your ear, then move it gradually away from the ear and see how far away from the watch you can actually hear it tick. Try it on the other side and see if both ears are alike. If you find that you are unable to hear the watch on both sides alike and at a distance of four feet from the ear, you may know that deafness has already begun. You should begin taking Peruna at once. Gargle the throat with cold, strong salt water, as directed in the "Ills of Life," sent free by Peruna Co., Columbus, Ohio. Persist in this treatment until a cure is effected.

The Best Way to Gargle.

Sometimes catarrh of the nasal pharyngeal space will cause an accumulation of secretions in the throat, that completely fill the space. Unless these secretions are promptly removed by frequent gargling polypi may be formed. Once formed the polypi or adenoids, as they are sometimes called, will require a long time with the gargling to remove. Gargling according to the proper method will sometimes remove polypi or adenoids, and no surgical operation is required.

In order to understand exactly what is meant by proper gargling send for a free copy of the "Ills of Life."

During the whole course of gargling Peruna must be taken according to directions on the bottle.

People who object to liquid medicines can now obtain Peruna Tablets.

A Close Buyer.

A New York theatrical man was appointed receiver for a small opera house in an up state town in New York. He was anxious to sell it and was willing to take the first offer made.

He advertised the place, and after waiting a week he was delighted when an inquiry came in.

"Say, mister," the prospect asked, "how much do you want for the theater?"

"My friend," the receiver replied. "I am extremely anxious to make a sale and I'll let you have it for your own price."

"Please, mister," said the inquirer, "can't you do a little better than that?"—Saturday Evening Post.

Professor Budlong's case of eczema was known to almost every hospital and physician of reputation throughout the state of Connecticut. His letter is another interesting demonstration of what is being accomplished by the famous specific D. D. D., Prescription. I was covered with eczema from head to foot when I began using your remedies. I could get no relief, although I tried a thousand means. I applied but two bottles of the Prescription; a cure was effected in a very short time, in less than one month."—Prof. C. J. Budlong, South Lyme, Conn.

Ask any druggist today for D. D. D. Prescription. He'll tell you. It allays the itch instantly—and soon there are signs of cure.

We have handled the remedy for years and regard it as the specific for skin troubles of all kinds. Come in or ask us about D. D. D. Prescription, also about D. D. D. soap especially for tender skins.

We offer the first full size bottle on the guarantee that unless it stops the itch at once, it costs you not a cent.

VILLA IS DRIVING FEDERALS BACK

Constitutionalist Coils Tightening About Torreon.

PLACE IS STRONGLY FORTIFIED

The Closer Rebel Forces Get to the Place, the More Difficult the Advance Becomes—Villa Cautious in Tactics—Planning to Cut Off Federal Retreat.

El Paso, March 23.—Pancho Villa and his soldiers drove the federal defenders of Torreon further back towards their final base and at dusk in the evening his advance guard was in Brittingham, a manufacturing town, only six miles from Gomez Palacio, another manufacturing town and suburb of Torreon. This is the location of the advance guard of the main army commanded by Villa himself. The advance guard of the east wing, according to the night's advices, is very close to the eastern suburb of Torreon and has had hot fighting all day.

All Villa's troops advanced some during the day, but the advance was slow and cautious. Villa was none too anxious to take his entire command forward any faster than he could repair the railroad to supply them with water and food, and the generals were putting up more stubborn resistence. The nearer to Torreon the rebels got, the better they find the federal fortifications and the harder it is to drive off the defenders.

To Prevent Federal Retreat.

General Benavides, lately commander of the garrison at Juarez, who com[illegible] the advance guard of the rebels that entered Bermejillo, where Villa made headquarters for the night after moving forward and helping to clear the railroad has taken a southeasterly course to join Maclovio Herrera's command east of Torrean and has almost cut the railroad between Torreon and Saltillo and Monclova. They hope by this to prevent a retreat of the federals to either of these towns in the event of rebel success at Torreon, meantime isolating Saltillo and Monclova to give the rebel bands in that section a chance to make another effort to capture the two places.

A message from Chihuahua said 91 or 92 federals were killed at Bermejillo instead of 106 as wired by Villa.

Report 3,000 Federals Defeated.

Brownsville, Tex., March 23.—The defeat of a force of three thousand federals under General Guardiola near Guerrera last Thursday has been reported to constitutionalist headquarters at Matamores. Attacked from the front by a large body of constitutionalists under General Carranza and then flanked by a force under General Villereal, the federals were completely trapped and retreated in disorder, leaving their dead and wounded on the field. More than three hundred were killed and wounded. The engagement lasted only a few hours. A large quantity of arms and ammunition was captured.

GUNMEN APPEAL TO PUBLIC

Say They Were Convicted on Testimony Declared Unbelievable.

New York, March 23.—From the death house at Sing Sing prison, the four young men who are sentenced to die during the week of April 13 for the murder of Herman Rosenthal sent out a final appeal to the public for aid.

They say they cannot understand how the court of appeals could sustain their conviction on the testimony of Rose, Webber, Schepps and Valon when the conviction of Lieutenant Backer was set aside on the ground that these four men were unbelieveable.

POISON IS HUNTED IN VICTim

Inquest Postponed to Permit Examination of Man's Vital Organs.

Chicago, March 23.—The inquest in the case of Charles Abel, a farmer of Metcalf, Ill., was postponed pending an examination for traces of poison. Dr. F. L. Talcott, who operates out of the drug store at Clark and Madison streets, was questioned by the police concerning Abel and was directed to appear at the inquest.

Abel came to Chicago several days ago. Before leaving Metcalf he drew $700 from a bank. He was found dead in a hotel in Halsted street. A note for $300 signed by Talcott was found in the dead man's pocket. The remainder of the $700 has not been accounted for,

I. W. W. ANARCHY SAYS ITS LEADER

Frank Tannenbaum Welcomes Aid of the Reds.

THEORY AND PRACTICE SAME

Imprisoned Director of Movement Against Churches and Restaurants Declares Socialism Is Political While Anarchy Is Industrial—Thinks Latter Only Effective Remedy.

New York, March 23.—The hand of the anarchist, which is beginning to be seen carrying the banner in the demonstrations of the unemployed, is a perfectly natural development in the situation, according to Frank Tannenbaum, original leader of the movements against the restaurants and churches. Tannenbaum stated in the Tombs, where he is now held awaiting trial on a felony charge of inciting to riot, that there is no sharp line dividing the theories of the anarchists and the practices of the I. W. W.

Socialist Movement Political.

There is a sharp line dividing the Socialists from both of the other movements, he said, and he expressed the difference this way:

"The Socialist movement is a political movement; Socialists believe in petitioning those in power to help the working classes and the unemployed. The I. W. W. believes that the right way to correct present day evils is to get the unemployed to help themselves, and if they lack the power to do it lawfully, help themselves anyhow, regardless of the law.

"The I. W. W. movement and the anarchist movement is industrial and not political; they both believe that the evils to be corrected are economic, and only political as far as legislation and politics affect living conditions."

Emma Goldman Keeps Coin.

So Tannenbaum is not displeased that Emma Goldman and Alexander Berkman and others of that type are coming to the front in the demonstrations of the unemployed. The interview was prompted by the thought that the anarchists have taken possession of the unemployed and that possibly the I. W. W. leaders, particularly Tannenbaum might show a little feeling against Emma Goldman who took up a collection of $44 on Saturday at an outdoor meeting of the unemployed and put it in her pocket and then led the parade up Fifth avenue behind an anarchist flag. But Tannenbaum said he and the other I. W. W.'s are heart and soul with the anarchists, although there is a small difference in the theories of the movements. He doesn't feel so friendly to the Socialists, however, calling them theorists instead of men of action.

"We've passed the stage of asking for anything," he said. "We're not going to be led and clubbed and starved any more. From now on we are going to work on the theory of an eye for an eye, and some times may be we'll take two eyes for one eye."

Throws $300 in Stove.

ALPENA, MICH.—Abraham Abladella, the proprietor of a local hotel, is out $200 and only by good fortune he prevented the loss of $300 more.

Abraham had $500 in one hand and some scrap paper in the other. He intended to throw the scrap paper into the stove but instead threw in the money. He grabbed for the roll and when he counted it $200 had vanished.

SUNDAY CONFABS IN ULSTER CRISIS

Gravity of Irish Situation Indicated in Conferences.

WITHOUT PARALLEL IN YEARS

Ministers Meet Each Other in London and Then Consult with King—Archbishop of Canterbury Confers with Premier—Peace Urged in the Home Rule Negotiations.

London, March 23.—The gravity of the Irish situation was again emphasized on Sunday by a further series of conferences in London between the ministers themselves and between the ministers and the king. Apart from these conferences there were no important new happenings either here or in Ireland so far as can be learned up to the time of sending this dispatch.

It is many years since such conferences have been held on Sunday. Colonel J. A. B. Seely, the secretary of war, Winston Churchill, first lord of the admiralty, and Augustine Birrell, chief secretaty for Ireland, visited Premier Asquith and conferred for some time. After this Colonel Seely went to Buckingham palace and was closeted with the king.

The secretary returned to the war office where for practically the whole day he received visits, among his callers being Field Marshal Sir J. D. P. French, chief of the imperial general staff; Viscount Esher, president of the territorial force association and colonels of regiments whose officers have resigned.

Archbishop and Premier Confer.

The Archbishop of Canterbury visited Premier Asquith and remained for an hour and a half. This is the second long conference that has taken place between the archbishop and the premier in the past few days. Recently the archbishop issued through the press, an appeal for peace and doubtless his visits to the premier have concerned conciliatory aims in regard to Ireland. Immediately after the archbishop left Buckingham palace, Premier Asquith arrived and was soon joined by Field Marshal Sir John French and these three confered for an hour.

Mrs. ficers give for holding him is that they suspect him of being John H. Kline, forger, safeblower and train robber, who escaped from the Missouri penitentiary in 1903.

Friends here will write to the Brunswick police that Patterson was in Tipton until 1904 and could not possibly be the escaped convict.

MARSHALESS' PAY IS CUT, BUT SHE STICKS

Pool Halls and Saloons Forced to Obey the Law.

Chesaning, Mich., March 23.—Miss Blanche Ingalls, editor of the Chesaning Monitor, says she does not intend to resign as village marshal, to which position she was appointed less than three weeks ago. Her pay was cut one-half by the council. Many believe this step was taken in the hope that she would resign.

Miss Ingall's campaign since her appointment has been a vigorous one and she states that it will be continued until the town is reformed. Saloons and poolrooms now have to close at 10 o'clock and a new village jail is under course of construction. Miss Ingalls refused to lock a man in the old place. Members of the council say she will decide today what steps will be taken relative to her pay but is not worrying about it.

Lynn Rogers and F. E. Ager. A ladies quartet with Mesdames Eugene Rosacrans, R. T. Meade and Ell Hodges and Miss Martha Caldwell as members. A solo by Miss Dina Gaston assisted by the male quartet and a solo by Mrs. Eugene Rosacrans during the banquet and program which followed. W. M. Earl Rector in a few well chosen words introduced the toast master Rev. F. Hewitt who in his usual happy manner introduced the speakers of the evening. A constant flow of wit and humor prevailed throughout the evening.

The first speaker was Grand Master Perritt of Detroit who spoke most feelingly and expressed himself as being delighted to meet the Tecumseh lodge as their Grand Master. He was followed by Arthur M. Hume of Owosso, Herbert Montague of Traverse City, John Q. Look of Tecumseh, G. Roscoe Swift of Adrian, Frank O. Lusk of Bay City, George T. Campbell of Owosso, Frank Lodge of Detroit, George Armstrong of Adrian, and John F. Hicks of Tecumseh. In answer to a compliment by Grand Master Perrett for the wonderful success in bringing together such a large gathering of distinguished Masons, W. M Earl Rector made a very happy response.

The conferring of the third degree in Masonry at Masonic Hall followed the banquet and the work was the best, most accurate, and most impressive ever seen in Tecumseh. The work was done by the following Past Grand Masters;

W. M.—G. Roscoe Swift,
S. W.—John Q. Look,

intend to rob the store. Rathman and Abbey were assigned to the job and they stuck to it all night. At 5 a. m. Detective George W. Colby, sent to relieve them, found the store already robbed. The police thought they had both entrances guarded, but the thieves had come in from above, through windows of an adjoining block

AMUSEMENTS

A PERSONAL GUARANTEE

I take great pleasure in announcing the presentation of A. H. Woods production of the "The Common Law" which comes to the Bradley Opera House next Thursday, March 26. I saw this excellent attraction in Toledo, at the Valentine theatre Sunday afternoon and can personally guarantee it to be one of the best dramas we have ever had here with a lot of good clean comedy running through the entire piece.

The first and second acts take place in the studio Louis Naville, the third in the home of Valeria and the fourth in the studio. The entire piece deals with the Bohemian life of the artists of New York and is taken from the famous novel "The Common Law" by Robert W. Chambers. The book is very interesting but the play is more so. The cast is one of extraordinary merit headed by Miss Aileen Poe as Valeria Wess, the model, who is exceptionally clever and very cleever. The entire piece is staged with special scenery, the company carrying a special carload.

"The Common Law" does play one other "one night stand" besides, the one here. They play Monroe the following night, otherwise they are playing all city time. They played Cleveland last week, Toledo this week, then Detroit, [illegible] Toronto, Rochester etc each for a week.

A. H. Woods had the company "Within the Law" here earlier in the season and can say that while this is of an entirely different caliber than "Within the Law" will say that it will give the same satisfaction which that other attraction of Mr. Woods did.

Respectfully,
Ed. L. Mark,
Mgr. "The Bardley"

A BIG TIME IN TECUMSEH.

Many are Invited to be Guests of The Commerce Club, Wednesday April First

Tecumseh, and the rich agricultural community surrounding it, have been complimented by one of the largest corporations in the world, in having The International Harvester Company offer the Tecumseh Commerce Club the opportunity of bringing to this Village their wonderful motion-picture lecture entitled "The Dawn of Plenty."

The expense attendant upon this production is considerable, but the entertainment is so unusual that the Commerce Club has accepted the terms and will present the production as a fitting climax to their Annual Meeting and Banquet, on the evening of Wednesday, April 1st, 1914.

The banquet will be held in Witherell hall promptly at 6.00 p. m. on that date.

The Barrett Bros. have prepared an unusually choice menu for the occasion, and both vocal and instrumental music, combined with other excellent entertainment will amuse the diners.

After a brief business meeting the Club will adjourn at 8 o'clock to the Bradley Opera House, where Professor Stockdale will deliver his wonderfully illustrated lecture entitled, "The Dawn of Plenty."

This lecturer emphasizes the fact that agriculture is the oasis of all progress and prosperity. It deals with the struggle of the nations to supply their peoples with food and graphically depicts how that struggle is conducted in the various countries of the globe, showing the curious methods adopted by various races to attain the same end,-a sufficient supply of food.

Each member of the Commerce Club who attends the Annual Meeting and Banquet, will be entitled to two tickets, gratis, to this instructive lecture, and the Executive Committee have decided to distribute the remained of the admissions to families outside of the corporation,-two tickets to the head of each family, so long as the tickets last.

The tickets may be secured now by calling at either of the local banks, absolutely without charge of any kind. There are no "strings" to this invitation. It is the Commerce Club's treat to the people who help make Tecumseh prosperous, but because of the limited number of seats it must be a case of "First come, first served."

The lecture will be interesting to every member of the family and especially instructive to progressive farmers, as well as a forerunner of the good things in store for all of us during the forthcoming summer Chautauqua.

Don't be afraid to ask for your tickets. You will be the guests of the Club, and thrice welcome, but should you require more than two admissions they will cost twenty-five cents each.

WIT AND WISDOM

A Visit to "Monte Cristo's Cell."

Steamboat excursions run from Marseilles out to Isle d'If, where gaping tourists are shown the Chateau d'If and Monte Cristo's cell with as much impressiveness as if he had really existed. It is a wonderful tribute to the realism of Dumas. They even show you the place where Monte Cristo's body struck the water. It is still wet. TECUMSEH "BIG CHIEF" GARAGE

Makes Healthy Bowels

THIS simple rule of health is daily called attention to by every doctor in the land, whose first question to the patient almost invariably is, "Are your bowels regular?" Yet there's not one person in fifty who takes proper care of the bowels. And the result of this foolish neglect is nine-tenths of all ill-health.

If today you are unable to free your body of waste matter at the usual time, or if the act causes straining, pains and discomfort, don't let that condition occur again tomorrow. Unless your bowels can carry away the waste materials left after food is digested, decay sets in, the poisons of which, taken up by the blood, increase the risk of Typhoid Fever, Appendicitis, and many other serious diseases.

In treating constipation, there is a right way and a wrong way. The wrong way is to take harsh purgatives which even though they do clear the bowels, cause griping and nausea, injure the delicate tissues, and so disturb the normal functions as to cause the return of constipation. The right way is to help Nature to produce natural movement, without pain or discomfort, by using —a gentle laxative in the form of a chocolate-tasting tablet. One of these tablets eaten just before going to bed will help to restore your bowels to normal activity at a time when, your body being at rest, the medicine can do its best work. As a result of taking that tablet (or say two, if your case is obstinate), your bowels will move easily and naturally in the morning. The use of Rexall Orderlies for a few days afterward will restore normal regularity. Even chronic constipation is benefited by them, and it is not necessary to continue the treatment for a long time, because, instead of driving Nature, they simply help her to help herself.

Rexall Orderlies

Sold only at the more than 7,000 Rexall Stores and in this town only by us. In vest pocket tin boxes, 10c, 25c, 50c

More Than One Hundred Million Were Sold Last Year

This enormous quantity was used with good results by busy men who suffered from constipation, due to lack of exercise, or indigestion caused by overwork—by children whose parents realize the harmful effect of common purgatives—by old people whose systems cannot stand anything harsh—by women during pregnancy, and after childbirth, when any medicine with a violent action would be particularly dangerous. Many of these people are your neighbors and friends. Ask anyone who has ever used them—they'll tell you Rexall Orderlies satisfied and helped them.

This Is Our Guarantee—You Risk No Money

If Rexall Orderlies do not make your bowels act right, tell us so and we'll give back your money without asking a single question. There is no red tape to this guarantee. It means just what it says. You sign nothing. We won't hesitate, or ask you any questions. Your word is enough. If Rexall Orderlies do not do all you expect them to—if you don't feel better after using them and find that they are the pleasantest-acting and best laxative you have ever used, we want you to tell us and get your money back.

MASONIC MEETING

Tecumseh Lodge No. 69 F. & A. M. Entertain Past Grand Masters of Michigan.

400 IN ATTENDANCE

Banquet and Work in the Third Degree.

That Tecumseh is the biggest little town in Michigan was proved again last Friday evening when Tecumseh Lodge No. 69 F. & A. M. entertained the Past Grand Masters of the State of Michigan and other important Masons among whom was the present Grand Master William M Perrett of Detroit.

The event is one to be long remembered by the Masons of Tecumseh. The coming together of so many Past Grand Masters and prominent Masons is indeed a compliment to Tecumseh Lodge, to Past Grand Master J. Q. Look and the present Worshipful Master Earl B Rector. Right here it might be of interest to mention that Mr Rector is the youngest master that has ever held the office in Tecumseh lodge.

The following Past Grand Masters of the state were present: F. T. Lodge, Detroit; Herbert Montague, Traverse City; Jas. E. Dillon, East Tawas, G. Roscoe Swift, Adrian, Frank Q. Lusk, Bay City; Arthur M Hume, Owosso, Fletcher E. Tarrell, Detroit; John Q. Look, Tecumseh. Others who were present were George Armstrong, Past Grand High Priest, Adrian; Grand Master W. S. Perrett, Detroit; R. W. Grand Warden John W. Hawks, Lansing, Grand Tyler Jas. F. McGregor, Detroit; J. H. Kingsley, Grand High Priest, Manchester, Past Master Woodsen, Detroit, Geo. T. Campbell, editor of the American Tyler Keystone, Owosso. An elaborate banquet was served at Witherell hall at 6 o'clock. The Masons assembled at the Masonic Temple and marched to the banquet hall in a body four hundred strong. Four long tables beautifully decorated with daffodils and lighted by candles were prepared for the guests.

The banquet was beautifully served by the ladies of the Eastern Star.

Musical numbers were rendered by the Temple male quartette, composed of Messrs. W. S. and Fred Dickinson, Lynn Rogers and F. E. Ager. A ladies quartet with Mesdames Eugene Rosacrans, R. T. Meade and Ella Hodges and Miss Martha Caldwell as members. A solo by Miss Edna Gaston assisted by the male quartet and a solo by Mrs. Eugene Rosacrans during the banquet and program which followed. W. M. Earl Rector in a few well chosen words introduced the toast master Rev. F. Hewitt who in his usual happy manner introduced the speakers of the evening. A constant flow of wit and humor prevailed throughout the evening.

The first speaker was Grand Master Perritt of Detroit who spoke most feelingly and expressed himself as being delighted to meet the Tecumseh lodge as their Grand Master. He was followed by Arthur M. Hume of Owosso, Herbert Montague of Traverse City, John Q. Look of Tecumseh, G. Roscoe Swift of Adrian, Frank O. Lusk of Bay City, George T. Campbell of Owosso, Frank Lodge of Detroit, George Armstrong of Adrian, and John F. Hicks of Tecumseh. In answer to a compliment by Grand Master Perrett for the wonderful success in bringing together such a large gathering of distinguished Masons, W. M Earl Rector made a very happy response.

The conferring of the third degree in Masonry at Masonic Hall followed the banquet and the work was the best, most accurate, and most impressive ever seen in Tecumseh. The work was done by the following Past Grand Masters:

W. M.—G. Roscoe Swift,
S. W.—John Q. Look,
J. W.—Arthur M. Hume,
S. D.—Frank T. Lodge,
J. D.—James E. Dillon,
Sec'y—George L. Lusk,
Treas.—Herbert Montague, assisted by 15 Pastmasters and workers of Tecumseh lodge. The Temple Quartette furnished music throughout the work.

LIFE ON HOLLAND'S CANALS.

Where Spring Cleaning Is the Rule All the Year Round.

I think one may see barges and canal boats in greater variety at Rotterdam than anywhere else. One curious thing to be noticed as they lie at rest in the canals is the absence of men. A woman is always there, her husband only rarely. The only visible captain is the fussy, shrewish little dog which, suspicious of the whole world, patrols the boat from stem to stern and warns you that it is against the law even to look at his property. I hope his bite is not equal to his bark.

Every barge has its name. English suburban villas have not a greater variety of fantastic names than the canal craft of Holland, nor with all our monopoly of the word "home" does the English suburban villa suggest more compact coziness than one catches gleams of through their cabin windows or down their companions.

Spring cleaning goes on here, as in the Dutch houses, all the year round, and the domiciliary part of the vessels is spotless. Every bulwark has a washing tray that can be fixed or detached in a moment. "It's a fine day, let us kill something," says the Englishman; "Here's an odd moment, let us wash something," says the Dutch vrouw.

In some of the Rotterdam canals the barges are so packed that they lie touching each other, with their burgees flying all in the same direction, as the vanes of St. Sepulchre's in Holborn cannot do. How they ever get disentangled again and proceed on their free way to their distant homes is a mystery. But in the shipping world incredible things can happen at night.—From "A Wanderer In Holland," by E. V. Lucas.

The Chrysanthemum.

It is believed that the first specimen of the chrysanthemum known to have been grown in England—perhaps in Europe—was reared at the Botanic gardens, Chelsea, in 1764, and the flower's rise into popular favor in the nineteenth century was chiefly due to the good work done by the Stoke Newington Chrysanthemum society. This society held its first exhibition of blossoms in 1846, and served not only as a model for all similar associations, but also as a school of chrysanthemum culture for the whole world.—London [illegible]

The rigor of discipline at West Point does not leave behind many memories of halcyon college days. There are no week end larks, for, constantly under the surveillance of the officers, the cadets are never permitted to leave except under military orders. If they ride to the adjoining town, Highland Falls, they must not dismount or let their feet touch any soil outside the reservation.

How severe the system of regulating the standard of the several cadets is may be learned from the fact that some 18,000 acts of each appointee are "marked" during his four years' course, any one of which must be passed as good or given one or more demerits. "Late at roll call" insures one demerit; "absence from duty," ten marks; "slight untidiness in dress," one; "inattention at drill or other duty," five, and so on. If in six months out of some 2,000 events a hundred demerits accumulate the unfortunate student is dismissed from the academy.

At half past 10 every Sunday morning the cadets gather in front of the stone barracks, as trimly kept as any Fifth avenue mansion, and form in line, with faultless uniforms, natty white belts and sash, and march up the hill to the chapel service. It is something of a walk, as some of the puffing visitors observed on reaching the summit terrace. Silently and in perfect time and order the cadets change formation and file into the chapel under rows of historical regimental banners, some of which had seen service nearly a century ago. Some of the old stands of colors were threadbare, but the field of blue always remained with its story of a nation's development, bearing constellations of from thirteen to forty-eight stars in their imperishable fields of blue.

The cadet choir marches down the aisle singing "Onward, Christian Soldiers," and the ringing voices of those 500 cadets once heard can never be forgotten. The finale, the Dresden hymn, as sung by the West Point choir is an event that musicians from all parts of the world come to hear. The services throughout were impressive and conducted with military precision.—National Magazine.

TAMED THE PIANO.

An Unmusical Variation In One of Gottschalk's Concerts.

Gottschalk, the pianist, was noted for his enormous physical strength almost as much as for his brilliance as a pianist. On one occasion he gave a practical illustration of his strength which, while it did not display his disposition in the most amiable light, undoubtedly afforded him much satisfaction.

He was in concert playing on a piano that was built on a new model, one of the peculiarities of which was that the lip of the keyboard cover projected farther over the keys than in most pianos when the instrument was open for playing. Gottschalk, who was accustomed to throw up his hands to a considerable height during the performance of brilliant passages and was unused to this new form of keyboard, constantly hit his knuckles against the projecting lip.

This repeated rapping of his knuckles at last began to have an irritating effect on him, as the audience could plainly see. Suddenly after a particularly hard rap he stopped short in the middle of his selection, wrenched the offending cover out of the instrument by main force and hurled it across the platform with great violence. Then, with a smile of the greatest satisfaction, he reseated himself at the piano and continued his playing.—Chicago Record-Herald.

MUSIC HEAD OUSTED ON SPOONY CHARGES

President Not Consulted and Quits Iowa University.

Iowa City, Ia., March 23.—That Professor Gustav Schoettle, head of the school of music in the University of Iowa, was the faculty member whose dismissal by the state board of education caused the differences between President John G. Bowman and that body which culminated in President Bowman's resignation was admitted by university officials.

Professor Schoettle was dismissed summarily from his position at the meeting of the state board at Cedar Falls on March 11 without any advice being asked from the president.

Two specific charges were made against Schoettle. One of these was that he was caught embracing one of the young women teachers in the music school. The second was that he advised Mrs. Marie De Santy Riedel, an instructor in the vocal department, to get a divorce from her husband, Ubo Riedel, another member of the faculty.

Schoettle himself denies these charges and President Bowman expresses his disbelief in them. Both allege that Schoettle was given no chance to be heard before the dismissal order was entered.

Members of the board of education denied that they had intended to slight Bowman by dismissing Schoettle without consulting him, but admitted that there had been friction between the board and the president for some time.

MINERS THREATENING STRIKE OF 500,000

Ohio Law Stands in Way of Peaceable Settlement.

Chicago, March 23.—Difficulties which may lead to a nationwide strike between the coal mine operators and miners developed in the conference at the Great Northern hotel. The miners, who had demanded a 6 per cent increase, acceded to the demands of the operators to sign the existing agreement for another two years. The miners and operators in the conference here are from the bituminous fields of Ohio, Illinois, western Pennsylvania, and Indiana.

After agreeing to sign the old agreement for another two years, a new snag was struck in the Ohio delegations. The men are paid on a mine run basis there under a state law. The operators want that changed so they may pay the men on a screen measure basis.

The representatives of the miners refused to agree to that demand and subcommittees were appointed to thrash out the Ohio difficulties. The conference will be resumed on Tuesday.

"We will call a strike of every coal miner in the country," William Green, secretary of the Unitetd Mine Workers of America, said, "if the negotiations here do not end in the signing of an agreement."

There are 500,000 coal miners in the United Mine Workers' organization.

VILLA AT TORREON

Storms Mountain in Attempt to Take the City.

MANY KILLED AND WOUNDED

Troops Fight Hand-to-Hand in Gomez Palacio, Key to Stronghold—Villa's Horse Shot From Under Him and Bullets Pierce His Coat—Advance Continues.

JUAREZ, MEXICO. — A terrific concentrated attack was made upon the eastern and southern sides of Torreon early in the day by 3,500 Constitutionalists under Generals Benavides and Hernandez. Fierce fighting is going on between rebels and federals in the irrigated plains between Gomez Palacio and Torreon on the west. The northern outposts are being bombarded. News of the general assault was received by telegraph from Bermejillo.

Bloody Fight for Gomez Palacio.

BERMEJILLO, STATE OF SONORA—(Constitutionalist base.)—A desperate battle is being fought between the Constitutionalists and federals for possession of the strategic key of Gomez Palacio, a few miles northwest of Torreon.

Throughout the greater part of the night the conflict raged, with the Constitutionalists victorious in the first hours of the fight. The federals were driven from their trenches, but upon receiving fresh reinforcements from Torreon they made a fierce assault upon Villa's army.

According to dispatches from the front, brought here by automobile from the battle line, the Constitutionalists occupied the suburb of Gomez Palacio after thirty hours of long-range fighting with artillery.

The artillery under General Felipe Angeles, chief artillerist of the rebel army, succeeded in silencing the heavy guns of the outer works of the federals and the order was given for an advance. With shells screaming over their heads, the Constitutionalists started forward in the darkness. Behind and before them the blackness of night was pierced by the continuous lightning of the artillery. Shouting the rebel yell, the Constitutionalists poured over the fresh earthworks on the outskirts of Gomez Palacio.

Federals Give Way.

Once in the town proper, however, the engagement gained in violence with hand-to-hand fighting in all the streets. From the nearby hills troops poured a hot fire into the town, apparently careless whether they killed friend or foe.

The superior forces of the Constitutionalists finally gained them a victory and the federals gave way in the direction of Torreon.

Horse Shot Under Villa.

General Villa was on the firing line in person all during the battle, having a horse shot under him. Several bullets pierced his coat.

When the federals began to give way Villa send word to all his generals that a general assault would be made on Torreon from all sides. He said he expected to be in Torreon Wednesday.

Early in the day Villa came here by automobile and talked over the telegraph wire with Chihauhau City ar Juarez, later returning to the fro

ASSERTS CRIPPLE ADMITTED MURDER

Cell Mate of Harry Winney Accuses Him of Crime.

JACKSON, MICH. — That Harold Winney, the twenty-year-old cripple, who is charged with the murder of Mrs. Caroline Sryrock, confessed that he had killed the aged woman in her lonely farm home in Spring Arbor township, was a part of the testimony of Dwight Stiles, a cell-mate, during the examination of Winney before Justice Tarbox.

Stiles testified that Winney told him that he and a companion whom he called "Muggins" had stolen a horse and cutter in Jackson late on the afternoon of February 26 and had driven to the Sryrock home and that he, (Winney), had killed the old woman and robbed her of $5. Stiles said Winney showed him a revolver which the officers had not found when they searched him before locking him up. This gun was found hidden in the cell block.

Stiles said that Winney also told him that he and his partner robbed the J. H. Lourin drygoods store in this city on the night of January 27 and secured about a thousand dollars' worth of silks and velvets which his pal afterwards sold in Toledo. He said that Winney informed him that he and his companion robbed the Finch & Bower hardware store on the night before the murder of Mrs. Syrock.

Although Stiles did not so testify, he is said to have informed officers that Winney told him of a plot to murder Claude Brown, who resides at Haire's, a station, south of Jackson.

NEW U. S. TERROR

Dreadnaught Oklahoma Floated at Camden, N. J.

FIRES 1400-POUND PROJECTILE

Warship Is Greatest Now in U. S. Navy—Carries Ten 14-Inch Guns, Three to a Turret—Will Use Oil for Fuel and Is Capable of Twenty and One-Half Knots Per Hour.

PHILADELPHIA. — The dreadnaught Oklahoma, launched early in the day from the yard of the New York Shipbuilding company at Camden, N. J., will be one of the largest and most powerful ships that has yet been floated for the American navy.

Only the Pennsylvania, building at Newport News, and the still nameless battleship No. 39, the keel of which was laid last week at the New York navy yard, will outstrip the Oklahoma in tonnage, displacement, length or the power of her great guns.

Monster of the Seas.

The length of the new giant sea fighter is 583 feet and her displacement will be 27,500 tons, or 500 tons greater than the largest American fighting ship now afloat.

In both armament and armor the Oklahoma will be far ahead of present American ships. Its principal weapons will be ten 14-inch guns, capable of firing sells weighing 1,400 pounds. A feature of the armament will be the placing of three of these great guns in one turret. One of the three-gun turrets will be on the forecastle deck along with a turret of two big guns. Another two-gun turret will be on the quarterdeck and astern of this will be another turret with the remaining three 14-inch guns.

About the big warship will also be distributed twenty-one 5-inch guns and some minor armament consisting of three - pounders, one - pounders, three-inch field pieces and machine guns.

Ship Well Protected.

The armor belt is especially heavy. It is 13 1-2 inches thick and will extend 400 feet along each side of the hull from eight and one-half feet below the water line to nine feet above the water. There are two protective decks to guard against plunging fire, one three inches thick and the other of one and one-half inches.

The Oklahoma will burn oil, and the engines will have 24,800 indicated horsepower, sufficient to develop a speed of twenty and one-half knots an hour. The supply of oil fuel will be carried in the double bottom of the ship, which eliminates the necessity of coal bunkers.

The gift of the state of Oklahoma to her fighting namesake is a splendid silver service.

Pool Halls and Saloons Forced to Obey the Law.

CHESANING, MICH. — Miss Blanche Ingalls, editor of the Chesaning Monitor, says she does not intend to resign as village marshal, to which position she was appointed less than three weeks ago. Her pay was cut one-half by the council. Many believe this step was taken in the hope that she would resign.

Miss Ingall's campaign since her appointment has been a vigorous one and she states that it will be continued until the town is reformed. Saloons and poolrooms now have to close at 10 o'clock and a new village jail is under course of construction. Miss Ingalls refused to lock a man in the old place. Members of the council say she will decide today what steps will be taken relative to her pay, but is not worrying about it.

China Brigands Loot Cities; Slay 300.

PEKING, CHINA — Outrages by brigands in central China are assuming alarming proportions. Several bands associated with the noted outlaw, White Wolf, are ravaging various sections of the country, ruthlessly murdering and robbing the people, and burning their property.

The latest exploit of the bandits was the massacre of 300 townsfolk who were resisting their entrance into an important market town close to Siang-Yangfu, province of Hopeh. Seven-tenths of the town was burned and the population ruined financially.

RALPH BRADFORD

"The Dawn Of Plenty"

GIVEN BY RALPH BRADFORD. PROJECTIONS BY WILLIAM G. ULLREY

Ralph Bradford, who gives "The Dawn of Plenty," is the youngest lecturer on the platform. He is only 2[illegible] years old, and he says that he started to lecture the day he started to talk. "Long before he could get an audience to listen to him he would go out into the woods, stand on a stump, and lecture to the trees. This was in Pennsylvania. Then he set his parents to Texas, and proceeded to lecture to the co[illegible]. Finally, he took up "The Dawn of Plenty." Frequently when Mr. Bradford arrives in a town and the local committee meets him at the train, he is asked, "Where's your father?" At first glance, he does not look old enough to be a real lecturer, but after he begins lecturing everybody forgets all about size, age, father, and everything else.

A story of facts and things, illustrated with beautiful views and motion pictures.

This is a story which should have been told years ago, but somehow it was neglected until now. It is a big subject, but entertaining.

"The Dawn of Plenty" has to do with the struggle for enough to eat—the struggle for bread. It traces how plenty finally was obtained, how less work and more for it changed the whole scheme of civilization, and how all this helped to give us the great industrial and commercial age in which we live.

This story is interesting as the popular little book "The Story of Bread," distributed by the I. H. C. Service Bureau, Chicago This book is widely read, and it furnished the idea for "The Dawn of Plenty," just as it has furnished ideas for editorials essays and what "The Dawn of Plenty" pleases all classes—city and country folks, children and grownups. It is a different sort of entertainment. That is, the pictures illustrate the story; the story is not made to fit the pictures.

NATURE DOES EXCLUDE WOMAN FROM THE WORLD BUILDING PROCESS

This was written by Request of Mrs Carrie Barone, Suffragette

Nature in her infinite wisdom
Made all spheres with opposite poles,
An equatorial belt betwixt them
Which the two extremes controls.
Neither bold monopolizes
The life sustaining kiss of sun,
Those kisses cometo them alternately
Ever since those worlds begun.
The little drops of rain are spherical
That in the clouds have had their birth,
Drenching both the Saints, and Sinners
Who dwell upon fair mother earth.
Males and females all are aqual
Before the laws which nature sent;
To all rotating circling planets
In this vast, unfathomed firmament
Men have striven many centuries
To solve problems which mankind enthrall.
But in the air they've always builded
Castles that were doomed to fall.
We must keep pace with evolution
And expand our mental girth,
Build upon a rock foundation
On the breast of mother earth.
Men have no sign of nature's making
Proving they were made to rule.
For sisters oftimes prove superior
To their brothers while at school.
We're confronted with grave problems
That woman's aid may help to solve
We're all in economic slavery
From which we're striving to evolve
Men and women in the future will be equal at the polls,
They'll steer the ship of State like pilots
And carefully avoid the shoals.
All the lands will grant their women
Equals rights from day of birth,
For Democratic institutions
Are destined to girdle mother earth.
This earth maintains its equilibrium
In its orbit round the sun.
So do all its sister planets
Move in one grand unison.
Nature's laws will stand forever
They alter not from year to year.
But man made laws are ever changing
All over this material sphere.

Didn't Need the Hoe.

Some time ago a hobo meekly tapped on the back door of a suburban home and asked for something to eat. The good housewife responded that she would feed him on the back step along with Fido provided he was willing to earn the meal by cleaning out the gutter.

The tramp agreed, and when he had eaten his way through several sandwiches the housewife came out with a reliable looking hoe.

"You needn't have gone to that trouble, madam," said the hobo. "I never use a hoe in cleaning out a gutter."

"Never use a hoe!" said the woman. "What do you use, then, a shovel?"

"No, madam," sweetly replied the hobo, starting for the back gate, "my method is to pray for rain."—Boston

Shortest Charge to Jury.

If brevity is the soul of wit, Judge Taylor, K. C., has not many rivals among his judicial brethren. Summing up a case which lasted several hours, says the Liverpool Post, he said no more than this: "Gentlemen, you have heard both sides. It is for you to say which you believe." Even this does not represent Judge Taylor's best effort in the way of saving his breath. A few years ago he delivered himself of what is supposed to be the shortest summing up on record. He turned to the jury, raised his eyebrows inquiringly, and remarked: "Well, gentlemen?" The art of brevity could no further go.

Noises and Cancer.

Muffle all unnecessary noise, brilliant lighting, disagreeable odors and touch not. Last and most important, eat and drink no poison, even though it should savor of the nectar and ambrosia of Olympus. With the revivifying of the sensory nerves all the rest will sail in and become strong again. And then we may expect to find eyeglasses, ear trumpets and all such aids cast upon the trash heap. There will be nothing to cause irritation, and so we shall have no cancer.—Dr. J. A. Guthrie in Medical Journal.

Food Habits.

"Food habits have queer boundaries," commented ex-Assemblyman Charles Sutherland at luncheon. "In Massachusetts peaple eat baked beans Saturday night, but not west of Worcester. Along the Connecticut shore an oyster stew is the regular Sunday morning breakfast dish. In Vermont they eat pie for breakfast—always apple pie. The scrapple habit is found only within fifty miles of Philadelphia.—New York World.

Neck Shaving an Old Custom.

A study of the many necks to be seen on the walls of the National Portrait gallery enables one to state that the custom of neck shaving, although said to have been imported from America, was undoubtedly known and most likely popular in the days of Agincourt. The portrait of Henry V. shows quite clearly that his neck was shaved, and, if the king did it, it must have been fashionable.—London Cor. New York Sun.

An Absorbing Case.

"Old Soak says he never drank until after he was operated on for appendicitis."

"His must be one of those peculiar cases where the doctors sewed up a sponge in the patient."—Houston Post.

GUNMEN APPEAL TO PUBLIC

Say They Were Convicted on Testimony Declared Unbelievable.

NEW YORK. — From the death house at Sing Sing prison, the four young men who are sentenced to die during the week of April 13 for the murder of Herman Rosenthal sent out a final appeal to the public for aid.

They say they cannot understand how the court of appeals could sustain their conviction on the testimony of Rose, Webber, Schepps and Valon when the conviction of Lieutenant Backer was set aside on the ground that these four men were unbelieveable.

CATARRH OF THE PHARYNX.

Clearing out your throat every day, all day. That is what you have been doing for months. Possibly years. A little mucus covers the pharynx.

If you were to go to a doctor he would tell you that you have pharyngitis. If you were to look into your own throat you would find just back of the soft palate a red, lumpy, granular appearance of the back part of the throat. Pharyngitis the doctors call it.

Perhaps he would call it, follicular pharyngitis. It causes you constant annoyance. You are always making slight disturbances when seated in an audience. Can't hold your throat still. Stringy mucus bothers you. Worse in the morning.

A-hem! A-hem! A-hem! That is the way you are going nearly all day. Sometimes in the night when you wake up. You ought to gargle your throat with salt water every morning. Cold salt water. That clears out the throat perfectly and makes it ready for treatment.

Peruna is the treatment. Begin with a teaspoonful before each meal and at bedtime. Try it for a week. You will be convinced. Of course, Peruna will not entirely relieve you in a week. That is too much to expect of any remedy. But it will benefit you so much you will be convinced. Yes, it will. It has done this many times.

Follicular pharyngitis. Big words. Almost as bad as the disease. But if you take Peruna for one month regularly you may forget that you ever had such a disease. Then you will have a perfect right to forget the big words too.

People who object to liquid medicines can now obtain Peruna Tablets.

The Test of Greatness.

There is no man who has ever sacrificed his selfish desire for the sake of some other person who has never felt a pleasure in undergoing some loss or trouble because it pleased somebody else. It is a truth that man is not a detached being, that he has a universal aspect, and when he recognizes this he becomes great.—From "Sadhana—The Realization of Life," by Rabindranath Tagore.

THOUGHTS AND THE MAN.

Thoughts make the man. Habitual thinking determines the character. And thoughts may be as fatal as crime to the development of a lofty manhood. Regulate your thoughts and you regulate the direction and the measure of your growth. Think of sinful gains and sinful pleasures and your character will lose its warmth and color. Think of duty, righteousness and God, and the beauty of holiness will be reflected in your face.—J. Sanders Reed.

BREAKING ICE BARRIERS.

Dynamite and Little Tugs Lead the Assault on the Great Lakes.

Up on our great lakes winter holds those waters in a stiffened grip for several months, substantially putting an end to well nigh all traffic, but even so, it is the mission of certain of the big car ferry steamers to maintain something of an approximate schedule. However, every now and then the gathering ice packs catch and hold them despite the best the steamers can do, and it is only by using dynamite that they then succeed in breaking through these frigid barriers. Occasionally it is a veritable battle between titanic forces, and it takes courage for officers and crew to maintain the struggle. Success is not always the fruit of these strenuous efforts, because it is still fresh in the minds of many how gallant Captain McLeod and thirty others perished aboard the Marquette when that ship foundered in December, 1909.

What strikes one most forcibly, if he has seen winter conditions upon the great lakes, is the manner in which little tugs are used to break a passage clear for large steamers when their big kin are quite incapable of working their own way through the ice, notwithstanding their greater bulk and far more powerful engines. The secret lies in the fact that the tugs are able to roll about after poking their noses into the floe, and in this manner they attack the ice in a direction where it is least capable of offering effective resistance. Instead of assaulting the ice edge on where it is supported by hundreds of yards—if not, indeed, by several miles of solid pack—the small craft bear down upon a thickness of so many inches, and by sheer weight and the rapid shifting of this by a rocking motion, they force it asunder.

The big steamers upon the great lakes, especially the large car ferries, could do this very thing for themselves, and do it upon a greater scale, if they could be given the needful rolling motion, but the difficulty lies in finding a way to effect this.—Technical World Magazine.

FICKLE FORTUNE.

Romance of a Discredited Gold and Copper Mine.

When the great mineral wealth of this nation has been finally developed a chronicler will write the "American Arabian Nights of Mining." One of the tales, all of which will be true, will run somewhat as follows:

Once upon a time there was a poor man of the name of Billy Harris, who lived at Spokane, Wash. He was a horseman, among other miscellaneous activities, and had acquired a considerable block of stock in a certain Leroi Mining company, having taken most of it in payment from those who owed him money and who had no other assets more tangible. This stock had kicked about without a sponsor for two years and was nominally quoted at around 10 cents a share.

One day a friend came along with a handsome stallion, and Billy looked upon the animal with covetous eyes. Dickering began and ended by his paying over $5,000 of the stock for the stallion. The seller, on sober reflection, became dissatisfied with his bargain and brought suit to recover the horse. He won, and Billy, with a sigh, took back his stock and bade the animal a fond farewell.

Eighteen months later Billy sold the same stock for $250,000 and the remainder of his holdings for as much again. The Leroi mine was taken over by Whitaker Wright and an English syndicate and produced $40,000,000 in gold and copper. It is not on record what the original owner of the stallion said or thought—and perhaps it is just as well.—Wall Street Journal.

Example of British Humor.

The late Lord Salisbury had a pretty wit. At the beginning of the South African war both his private secretaries volunteered, and they were followed, says the London Express, by the Duke of Norfolk, who asked to be allowed to resign his post of postmaster general and go to the front. "I suppose you may," said Lord Salisbury, "but I do hope Cross won't want to go." Lord Cross was then lord privy seal and was nearly eighty!

They Learn Early.

Bessie was sitting on the hotel veranda one afternoon when another child, gaudily dressed, began to parade up and down before her, flirting her fan and swishing her skirts airily. Bessie stood it as long as she could, but finally burst out:

"Dresses an' fans does not make ladies."

"But they helps," the other flung back over her shoulder as she sauntered away.—Delineator.

Source of His Love.

"Do you like your new mamma, Harry?"

"Yes; I like her awful much."

"That is nice. Do you like her because she is pretty?"

"No. I like her 'cause I broke her nicest vase yesterday and she blamed it on the maid."—Judge.

Getting It All.

"What can I bring you today, sir?"

"I hardly know. The doctor says I must have carbohydrates and proteids, and I want something nitrogenous, I think."

"Yes, sir. How about an order of hash?"—Pittsburgh Post.

CLARK'S ADDRESS CAUSES CONCERN

Democratic Harmony Involved in Speaker's Attitude.

SPEECH CAREFULLY PREPARED

Notwithstanding Conciliatory Message from White House, Factionalism Has Crept Into Democratic Organization Is Belief—"Second Tier" Statesmen to the Fore.

Washington, March 30.—Democratic leaders, who are anxious to compose the differences that have been aroused in the party organization in congress over the Panama canal tolls bill, look forward with concern to the address on the question that will be delivered in the house on Tuesday by Speaker Clark. Fear is expressed that if Mr. Clark attempts a vigorous arraignment of President Wilson for his espousal of the repeal bill that the administration will at once be forced to declare war on the Missourian.

It will be for Mr. Clark to determine on Tuesday whether the party fight now brewing shall break out early or late. Despite the conciliatory message sent out from the White House it is generally conceded that factionalism has crept into the Democratic organization and that the time is not far distant when an anti-administration group will be found doing business within the majority in congress.

Clark Has Been Advised.

So far Speaker Clark has taken none but his intimates into his confidence concerning the tenor of the address that he will make on Tuesday. It is known that he has sought counsel and advice on this particular speech. There is good reason to believe that he has conferred with former Senator Fred T. Dubois of Idaho and former Senator Frank R. Pettigrew of South Dakota, who managed the Clark candidacy in the Baltimore convention. Messrs. Dubois and Pettigrew, sored by their defeat at Baltimore, are regarded as enemies of the administration. To the blunders committed by Dubois and Pettigrew at Baltimore was attributed in part at least the defeat of Mr. Clark by Mr. Wilson.

A good deal of significance is attached to the recent arrival here of Mr. Pettigrew who saw the speaker and Mr. Dubois shortly after he reached Washington.

Friends of Mr. Clark who would regret a break with the administration take some comfort from the fact that the speaker is carefully preparing his address on the tolls question.

Second Tier After Clark.

There is a group of administration leaders in the house who are in a rather churlish mood over the peace talk that came from the White House Saturday. These are the "second tier" leaders such as Palmer of Pennsylvania, Sherley of Kentucky, Adamson of Georgia, Covington of Maryland and Sims of Tennessee. Some of these members insist that whatever happens now, Speaker Clark's head must be put on the block in the next congress.

The speech will have no effect on the measure itself. The bill is assured of a majority of from 50 to 90 votes.

CONVICTED GUNMEN ASK FOR CLEMENCY

Ten of the Jurors Who Tried Them Sign Petition.

New York, March 30.—The petition for executive clemency in the case of the four young men now under sentence to die during Easter week for the murder of Herman Rosenthal has been handed to Governor Glynn.

Ten of the jurymen who heard the evidence and returned the verdict of guilty have signed a petition asking that the death sentence be stayed until after the second trial of Police Lieutenant Charles Becket. Their signatures to the petition were obtained by Mary Cirofici, sister of "Dago" Frank. One of the jurors refused to see her and another is out of the state and could not be located.

The gunmen are Harry Horowitz called Gyp the Blood; Louis Rosenberg, alias Lefty Louie; Frank C. Cirofici, alias Dago Frank, and Jacob Seidenshiner, alias Whitey Louis.

SUPREME CHIEF REACHES JUAREZ

Gen. Venustiano Carranza Arrives at Northern City.

ALL BUSINESS HOUSES CLOSED

People of El Paso Turn Out and Greet Gray-Bearded Old Man Styled "Supreme Chief of Mexican Constitutionalists"—Two Trains of Wounded from Torreon.

El Paso, March 30.—Not a word had come to Juarez from the rebel front up to the hour of the arrival of Venustiano Carranza in the afternoon. The last message prior to that time was received at 11 o'clock Saturday night and was sent by Pancho Villa himself, declaring that the matter of the surrender of Torreon to his force is but a matter of minutes.

Throughout the early hours of Sunday morning the rebel officials in Juarez lingered at the telegraph office expecting the news of the taking of Torreon. The operators said they could not get anything south of Chihuahua and Chihuahua made no explanation of the absence of news from the front.

The officials in Juarez heard from Chihuahua that two trains of wounded had already arrived there and that two more were on the way with three hundred wounded still left in the field hospital at Bermejillo, far to the south. This indicated that the fighting had been of a severe character.

Big Greeting to Carranza.

To meet Carranza, a special train bearing all the officials of Juarez of prominence ran out of Juarez to Bauch, a station on the Mexican Northwestern, fourteen miles south west of Juarez. Every store and gambling house in Juarez was closed in honor of the rebel chief by order of Governor Chao. El Paso joined with Juarez in the welcome to Carranza and after 4 o'clock the streets of El Paso were deserted of people from the American side mingling with those on the Mexican side about the Juarez monument to cheer the graybearded old man who calls himself "Supreme Chief of the Constitutionalists."

The official ceremonies of welcome arranged for the monument were suspended and the former governor of Coahuila and his party soon made their way through the decorated streets to the custom house which is the provisional capital. The crowds cheered him as he pased beneath the tri-colored lights strung along the streets.

Consistent to the last in his declaration that he would ride on horseback into the town, Carranza refused the train that went south to meet him in the afternoon and plodded his way on his big gray horse every foot of the journey into Juarez.

This delayed his arrival and disappointed the crowds. Most of his cabinet members accepted the train and came into the city ahead of their chief, but Carranza and his military staff and escort rode in on horseback.

MAC BRIDE UNIVERSITY HEAD

Iowa City, Ia., March 30.—Professor Thomas R. MacBride, head of the botany department, was elected acting president of the Iowa State university by the state board of education.

The board previously had formally accepted the resignation of President John G. Bowman. Mr. MacBride will assume his duties April 1.

PRINCE HENRY IN SOUTH AMERICA

Kaiser's Brother Gets Notable Reception at Buenos Ayres.

PRINCESS ACCOMPANIES HIM

Trip Ostensibly Made for Benefit of Consort's Health—Significance Seen in Coincidence with Visit of American Commercial Representatives—Big New Liner to Make Impression.

Buenos Ayres, March 30.—Prince Henry of Prussia, brother of the kaiser, and the princess arrived here on the new Hamburg-American liner Cap Trafalgar of 18,700 tons, which sailed from Hamburg on March 10. The prince and princess were officially welcomed on the arrival of the Cap Trafalgar at her dock in the morning. In the afternoon they attended a regatta and were the guests of the German minister at dinner at night.

It is generally understood that the object of the visit of the prince is to promote German commercial interests in South America and with this object in view, he will visit parts of Brazil, Chile and Argentine and possibly some other countries.

The official version of the reason for the visit is that the princess is not in good health and her physicians advised a sea trip. The prince decided that South America would be the best place to visit because of the long ocean voyage and also for the reason of his personal interest in the country which he has not visited in many years.

Significant Coincidence.

It is regarded as significant, however, that the visit should be made at the same time that several American commercial bodies are sending excursions for commercial purposes to South American countries and others are in preparation. American financial interests, too, are just now seeking or obtaining commercial concessions on this continent.

It is also said that the trip was made on the big new liner in order to impress South Americans with the greatness of Germany's mercantile marine service.

SAY PETRAS IS EX-CONVICT

Aurora Murder Suspect Alleged to Have Served Time in Austria.

Aurora, Ill., March 30.—Aurora police allege Anthony Petras who was suspected of the Teresa Hollander murder several weeks ago, was once convicted in Austria on a white slave charge, and on the strength of the information they hope to press their case against him.

The information about Petras' past came from the Vienna police. Their letter included photographs for identification purposes. He was convicted, according to the letters, of taking two young girls out of a restaurant and placing them in a dive at Pressburg, Hungary, and served a term for it.

TYLER RELATIVE LOSES JOB

Personal Appeal to White House Fails to Save Ex-President's Kin.

Washington, March 30.—Miss Mattie R. Tyler, aged seventy, granddaughter of former President Tyler, who appealed personally to White House officials to continue her as postmistress in Courtland, Va., will be succeeded by B. A. Williams, it is announced by First Assistant Postmaster General Roper.

Failure on the part of Miss Tyler to take the recently ordered civil service examination was the department's explanation of its action.

TURMOIL LET LOOSE BY PINCHOT SPEECH

U. S. Senatorial Candidate Stirs up Fellow Diners.

Philadelphia, March 30.—Turmoil broke loose at a meeting of the Frivolous Five O'Clock club in the Bellevue Stratford when Gifford Pinchot, Progressive candidate for United States senator, declared that the only way that workers in this country could obtain justice was in combine against big business. Members shouted angrily, "No, No, you are wrong," when Mr. Pinchot asserted, "The only possible way the little men can meet on equal terms with men like you is to line them up on one side and you on the other."

Among those who made objection to Mr. Pinchot's remarks were Colonel John P. Wood, president of the National Wool Manufacturers' association; Frederick T. Chandler, ex-president of the Philadelphia Stock Exchange, and James M. Beck, an old corporation lawyer of New York. The audience that heard Mr. Pinchot included judges, members of congress and leaders in the city's political, financial and business circles. Attorney Beck was selected by President J. S. W. Holton to reply to Mr. Pinchot's address.

HOW LECTURES ARE MADE.

About a year ago Edwin L Barker was taking lunch with a friend. The friend asked, "Did it ever occur to you that today bread is so cheap that restaurants and hotels forget to charge for it? And what a long step this is from the time when bread was a luxury and only the richest could afford it?

"That's a great idea" said Barker—"The Story of Bread" and he made a note of it.

A little later he heard a well known teacher say that one of the things needed in the public schools is literature which will teach the children importance of agriculture and what it has done for the world. Immediately Mr. Baker thought of the ideas started at luncheon, and so a little later he wrote "The Story of Bread." This was published by the I. H. C. Service Bureau, Chicago, and it is being widely read, and used as supplementary reading in the public schools.

In writing this story, Mr. Barker found so much that he could only touch upon, that the idea of a lecture occurred to him When others read the story they also thought of a lecture.

There was the idea, waiting to be whipped into shape, but building a big, illustrated lecture is something like putting up a sky-scraper with the men on a strike. First was the name—what should it be called? After discussing perhaps fifty names, "The Dawn of Plenty" was finally decided upon.

Then the lecture had to be written—a big task in itself. Next came the search for pictures, and this was the hardest job of all.

"we searched high and low, in artists' studios and in dusty garrets," explains Mr. Barker. "We went out with a camera and took all sorts of scenes. Sometimes a dozen pictures were taken before we got one which seemed just right for the lecture. In taking the moving pictures, we traveled several hundred miles and went to a great expence. During rehearsals we often experimented for hours in order to produce a certain effect, which, like as not, the audience never remembers. But all the work was worth while, for in "The Dawn of Plenty" we are able to present a story few people know very much about. Every person who hears the lecture will more truly realize what is meant by 'Give us this day our daily bread.'"

This is the great illustrated lecture which the Tecumseh Commerce Club brings to the Bradley Theatre, Wednesday evening April 1st. It will prove a notable event to all those fortunate enough to secure admission.

Winter's Chills Breed Kidney Ills

Chilly, damp, changing weather is hard on the kidneys. Even more irritating are colds, grip, pneumonia, tonsilitis, quinsy, and other infections. The kidneys get congested and inflamed, and this causes backache and disordered kidney action. Though serious in its latter stages kidney disease is not hard to conquer if a good kidney remedy is used when the first signs of kidney trouble are noticed.

The best recommended kidney remedy in the world is Doans Kidney Pills. You hear it everywhere. Get a box.

"Every Picture Tells a Story"

Spring is Breaking; Backs are Aching

Backache is often the first sign of some form or Kidney disease that has been coming for months. Look for the signs:—lame back, sharp pains when stooping or lifting, dizzy spells, nervousness or despondency, with irregular, painful or distressing action of the kidneys; if these signs exist, decide that the kidneys need attention, ere the trouble turns to gravel, dropsy or Bright's disease.

Read this home testimony and then give Doan's Kidney Pills a trial.

TECUMSEH PEOPLE TESTIFY

TECUMSEH CASES SELF-TOLD

PEARL STREET

Mrs. Sarah E Austin, Pearl St. Tecumseh, says: "I suffered from distressing symptoms of kidney complaint for more than a year. When someone told me that Doan's Kidney Pills were good in such cases, I got a supply at Wright & Son's Drug Store. They helped me immediately and I continued using them until well. I have had no need of Doan's Kidney Pills or any other kidney medicine since. I can still recommend them highly."

KILBUCK STREET

W. W. Shurtz, Kilbuck St. Tecumseh, says: "I have taken Doan's Kidney Pills at different times during the past ten years and they have always given me relief from distressing symptons of kidney complaint I have procured my supply of Doan's Kidney Pills from Wright & Son's Drug store and my experience has been so satisfactory that I willingly give this public account of it."

A WILLING RE-ENDORSEMENT

Later Mr. Shurtz said; "I am only too willing to endorse Doan's Kidney Pills, for I know that they act as represented You may continue to use my name as a reference."

WYANDOTTE STREET

Mrs C. Stevenson, Wyandotte and E. Potawatamie Sts., Tecumseh; says; "The first symptom of kidney complaint in my case was a sharp, shooting pain across the small of my back which made it almost impossible for me to lie down. Someone advised me to give Doan's Kidney Pills a trial and I did so, procuring my supply at C. A. Wright & Son's Drug Store. After I had taken this remedy a short time, the pains and aches and gravel that had been a source of constant suffering no longer troubled me, in fact, I felt like a different person. I have since recommended Doan's Kidney Pills to a number of my friends and shall continue to do so."

N. DEMOCRAT STREET

E C. Brisbine, farmer, N Democrat St., Tecumseh, says; "I began to suffer from kidney complaint 20 years ago and the medicine I took brought me only temporary relief. Often my back ached intensely and the secretions from my kidneys were irregular in passage and highly colored. Doan's Kidney Pills went to the seat of the trouble and did me so much good that I am seldom without a supply on hand. You may continue to use my name as a reference for the Doan's Kidney Pills. Whenever I feel in need of a kidney medicine, I take this remedy and it acts promptly and effectively."

W. POTAWATAMIE STREET

Mrs. George Burroughs, W. Potawatamie St., Tecumseh, says; "My whole body ached and my strength and energy left me. Knowing several people in Tecumseh who had been helped by Doan's Kidney Pills, I got a supply of this remedy at Wright & Son's Drug Store and began using it. In a few weeks I improved in every way and the pains and aches were a thing of the past. I cheerfully endorse Doan's Kidney Pills again, for the benefit they brought me has been permanent."

E. CHICAGO STREET

J. B. Smith, E. Chicago St, Tecumseh, says; "I was caused a great deal of suffering by pains in the small of my back. When the attacks were present, it was all I could do to work When stooping, I became very dizzy and spots of fire seemed to flash before my eyes. I rested poorly and in the morning when I got up, was unrefreshed. I doctored and used remedies of various kinds, but got no benefit until I began taking Doan's Kidney Pills, They made me feel like a different person, ridding me of the trouble. I gladly confirm my former endorsement of Doan's Kidney Pills."

MADE THEIR ESCAPE

John Rombad sentenced for 15 years from Grand Rapids Sept. 10, 1913, for burglary and larceny, and Henry Y. Breehong sentenced for 15 years from Berrian Co. for crime and larceny, made their escape from Jackson State prison some time Sunday night. These men were trusties, and were working on the farm. Deputy John B. Smith was notified by the Jackson authorities to be on the watch for them.

OLD TIME PARTY

There is a time to dance, the Scriptures say:
The Lord's command we must obey.
And if I reason right, as runs my rhyme,
The 27th of March must be the time.
And Witherell's Hall must be the place
Where we can display that courtly grace
That charms the eye and wins the heart,
And bids all troubles thense depart.

In answer to the above invitation issued by our townsman George Harriott about forty-five couple met at Witherell hall Friday evening for an old-time dance.

Quadrills, contra dances, waltzes and the schottesche were mingled with the new dances and everybody entered into the spirit of the occasion.

Dainty refreshments were served during the evening, Coller's five piece orchestra furnished the music. Dancing was prolonged into the small hours.

As a host Mr. Harriott certainly proved himself all right and can congratulate himself on the success of his Old Time dancing party.

Miss Phoebe Wagner and Mrs. Jas. Watson and son Clare spent last Friday in Clinton the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Hoyt and family.

STAGE GHOSTS.

Kean's Contrivance to Make the Shade of Banquo Realistic.

I think it was Charles Kean who first resorted to illusion to make a stage ghost a little transparent, says a writer in London Tit-Bits. When he produced "Macbeth" at the old Princess' theater he manufactured a contrivance which allowed Banquo's ghost to appear through a transparent column.

Later on, when Mrs. Ann Radcliffe's "Romance of the Forest" was staged at Covent Garden theater, those responsible for its production arranged that the spook in the piece should be seen by the audience through a gauze of bluish gray color, so that the too corporeal effect of a live actor might be removed.

When the old playhouse in Drury lane opened, in 1794, with a performance of "Macbeth," Banquo's ghost was omitted. Although Mr. Kemble's acting was fine enough to make the audience almost believe that they really did see the ghost, yet the people were not satisfied until the system they had been used to was readopted and Banquo's shade allowed to trot bodily across the boards.

Reflecting mirrors and the cinematograph are coming in general use at the theaters, and with them it has been found possible to manufacture ghosts capable of striking terror into the hearts of all followers of the occult.

Rudeness About Doors.

Never mind if you do not happen to know the person who is coming behind you. Hold the door or gate open for him just the same. Of course the next in order may be several steps behind, or you may be obliged to save two seconds to catch your train. You may in cases like these feel compelled to slam a door or gate in the face of an innocent fellow being. But in scores of instances recently observed doors and gates have been slammed in the faces of those following by boorish men and women, apparently out of sheer clownishness. Sometimes the person thus insulted may happen to be one whom you may wish to please. It pays to be a lady or a gentleman, even when you think you are among strangers.—Kate Upson Clark in Leslie's.

M'GLYNN DENOUNCED BY PRESIDENT'S AID

Collector Malone Says Governor's Appointments Bad.

New York, March 30.—"In my judgment from the point of view of efficient government and from the point of view of clean, progressive democracy, the greater number of Governor Glynn's appointments are hopelessly bad. It is now quite clear that the state administration is dominated by the Murphy influence.

"Governor Glynn has chosen his political alignment and association as he had a perfect right to do. And Murphy, McCooey, and "Packy" McCabe must be eminently satisfied with the governor's plan for his party's 'uplift.' But the men of the rank and file of the Democratic party in New York state are as progressive as in any state of the union, and notwithstanding present untoward conditions they are worthy of, demand and will get real progressive leadership in their party."

The foregoing statement was given to the press by Dudley Field Malone, collector of the port, and spokesman in this city for President Wilson and Wilson Democrats.

Unqualified and drastic as it is there can be no doubt that the denunciation of the long deferred and important appointments and of the governor himself is the voice of the president speaking through the lips of his young leader in New York.

TEACHER'S SLAYER A FIEND

Conclusive Evidence 16-Year-Old Youth Slew Girl Friday.

Utica, N. Y., March 30.—Jean Gianini, the sixteen-year-old French lad, held in the county jail at Herkimer, as the murderer of his former school teacher, Miss Lida Beecher, twenty-two years old, has made admissions to District Attorney Farrell and Coroner Huyck which in the opinion of the authorities brand him as the slayer of the girl, who was lured to the outskirts of the little village of Poland Friday evening and beaten and stabbed while fighting for her life and honor.

A piece of cloth from Gianini's overcoat has been found on the barbed wire fence through which the girl's body was dragged. A button from the boy's overcoat was picked up near the spot where she fell under the rain of blows and finally District Attorney Farrell secured a sworn statement from Gianini's companion, Branard Wilt, aged eighteen, that Gianini was plotting to attack the girl and that Gianini had invited him to participate in the attack and also aid him in a plot to blow up the safe in the Poland Union store.

PURSUE NEW M'CARRICK CLEW

Detectives Are Looking for Colored Couple Seen March 13.

Philadelphia, March 30.—Detectives are pursuing the latest clew in the search for Warren McCarrick. This clue was furnished by the motorman and conductor of a trolley car. On March 13 a colored man and woman accompanied by a little white boy rode on the trolley manned by the two men.

The boy in many details tallies with the McCarrick boy, the men told the detectives. The colored guards and the little boy left the car only four blocks from the McCarrick home.

Nice Distinction.

He stopped before a blind pedler and bought a pencil, putting 5 pennies into the man's hand. "How do you know these are cents I've given you?" asked the purchaser.

"Well, sir, I can distinguish the touch of cents by my sense of touch," was the blind man's prompt reply.—Boston Transcript.

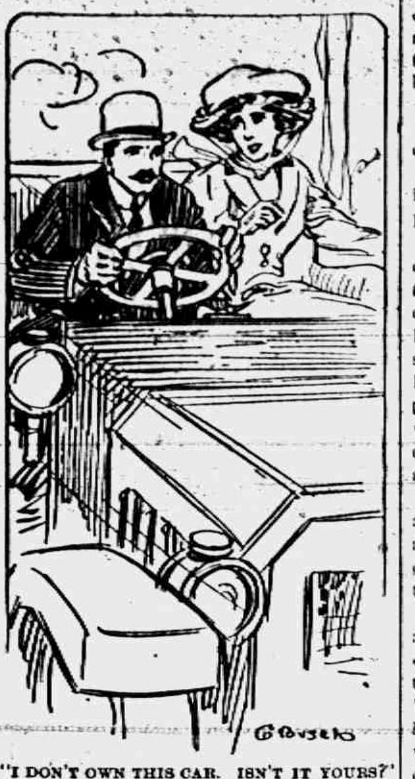
The New Automobile

Its Demonstration Trip Was an Eventful One

By F. A. MITCHEL

I was shopping and had been looking at some laces. Leaving the store, I went out on to the sidewalk, intending to go home, but it was such a bright spring morning that I was loath to do so. Beside the curb stood a new spick and span automobile, the sun glistening on it and the cushions looking so comfortable that I wished I might have a spin in it. My husband was at the time trying automobiles with a view to buying a new one, and I wished he would select one exactly like the car before me. While I was coveting it Charlie Forsyth came along and after greeting me joined me in admiring the machine.

"I'd like a spin this morning," I said to him. "I haven't been out for a week. Our chauffeur has been laid up, and I'm afraid to go out into the country alone, for if my machine should break down I wouldn't know what to do."



"I DON'T OWN THIS CAR. ISN'T IT YOURS?"

"I'll take you out," he said. "Get in."

I knew that Charlie was fond of motoring, but was surprised that the car should be his. However, he owned several cars, and I expressed no surprise. The truth is I was thinking that I should decline his invitation. My husband was not at all jealous and permitted me to accept any attentions I saw fit. But I was quite sure that if he would be displeased at my motoring with any one that person was Charlie Forsyth. This was what occupied my mind as I stepped into the car.

"Only a short ride," I said. "Tom said he might be at home at noon today with a new car he is trying and take me out with him after luncheon."

"Just as long or as short as you like," he replied.

I knew Charlie to be a fine driver, and I was therefore surprised that he had some difficulty in getting under way, but I supposed that, his machine being a new one, he had not yet become familiar with it. However, we finally got out from the crowd of vehicles that frequented that part of the city, and it was not long before we were moving on a country road regardless of the speed limit. We had been out about half an hour when I asked Charlie how long he had owned the auto.

"Owned what auto?"

"Why, this one."

"This one! I don't own this car. Isn't it yours?"

"Mine! No. I never saw it before today."

"Well, I'll be jinged! We've stolen an auto."

I began to laugh.

"It's no laughing matter," he added. "The owner can make a lot of trouble for us if he likes."

"I wonder who the owner is?"

"I don't know, but I do know that I'm going to take it back from where I got it as soon as possible. I only hope—no, that cannot be expected—the fellow has been detained so that we can get it back before he misses it."

"For heaven's sake!" I exclaimed. "Turn around and go back as fast as you can!"

"It would be better to return by another road. We'll strike a crossroad presently. I'll take it and in a mile or so reach an asphalt paved way that will take us back to the city."

We kept on, but in a few minutes I heard an ominous buzzing behind. I turned and saw an auto coming like the wind.

"My goodness gracious!" I cried. "Suppose it should be the owner of the car coming for us!"

"Quite likely it is," said Charlie grimly.

I can understand the temptation of persons running autos when they knock down or run over some one to try to get out of the scrape by flight. The impulse to make a race for concealment is very strong. The almost certainty of final detection is lost sight of. This is the way I felt, and I fancy Charlie was tempted in like manner. But he never said a word, nor did I. I knew by the sputtering of the machine as he turned on more power and opened a valve to let out gas that he was going to run for it.

But both Charlie and I were fools not to turn about and, if we met the owner of the car we had taken, explain the mistake and throw ourselves on his mercy. As I have said, it was that desire inborn in humanity, and in the brute creation for that matter, for the excitement of a race.

"Don't look back," said Charlie.

I knew by this that my doing so would indicate that we were trying to escape by flight, whereas if we paid no attention to those behind us it would appear that we were simply going at high speed. But despite the caution I could not help turning my head. I could not see who was in the car behind us on account of the dust, and by other evidences of a breakneck speed I had little doubt that the driver was trying to catch us.

"I think they're gaining just a little," I said.

Tom pushed the speed gauge a trifle farther on—not to the limit, for we were already going at a tremendous gait. The telegraph poles flew like the spokes of a revolving wheel. Fortunately the road was good, but Charlie dare not turn when we reached the crossroad without slowing down, and this he did not wish to do. So we shot by it like a cannon ball.

Looking ahead, I saw what teams were in the road turn and as far as possible on the side. When we reached one of them the astonished face of the driver flashed upon me and vanished.

Looking back, I saw that we had gained on our pursuers. They were still under full speed, but they surely could not have as swift going a machine as ours. But at this moment something underneath our car began to rattle. Charlie instinctively moved back the speed gauge.

"I'm afraid we're beaten," he said.

"Oh, go ahead!" I cried. "Take the chances."

"If anything should break while going at this speed we'd be mashed into pulp."

Possibly, added to this view of the case, Charlie had had time to consider the folly of our course. The rattling continued, and he took off more power. I looked back and saw that our pursuers were rapidly coming up with us. I think I would have renewed the pace if I had known we should be wrecked, but Charlie had got some discretion into him and [illegible] reducing instead of putting on speed.

"When they come up," he said, "don't appear as if we had been trying to get away from them. Brazen it out. I'll declare, till otherwise convinced, that the machine is mine."

So we prepared ourselves for a bluff, and our pursuers, coming near, shouted to us to stop. Charlie obeyed, and the other car slowed down beside us. When I saw what it contained the heavens grew black, all about me whirled, and I sank back on the leather cushion.

I had been flying from my husband. I didn't quite faint away. I was sufficiently conscious to see on Tom's face the look of a man who had caught his wife running away with a rival. The first words I heard came from Charlie, and it was evident that he had not lost his presence of mind.

"Hello, Tom!" he said. "What are you doing out here at this time in the morning?"

Tom made no reply. He was too appalled to speak.

"I met your wife," Charlie continued, "in front of Waterman's store looking at this auto. I thought it was hers, and she thought it was mine. I proposed a spin, and it was only a few minutes ago that we discovered our mistake."

I saw a look of mingled relief and doubt come over my husband's face. He seemed to wish to believe the story, but found it hard to swallow. Presently he said in a reserved tone:

"You are in a car I have been thinking of buying. I left it awhile ago before Waterman's, going in to buy a pair of driving gloves. When I came out the auto was gone. A policeman told me he saw a man and a woman get into it and drive off in this direction."

By this time I had recovered sufficiently to take my part in the conversation.

"We discovered our mistake," I said. "Just as we heard you coming for us. Not knowing who you were, but supposing you were the owner of the car we had taken, we thought we would race you for it. Flying from my own husband—ha, ha!"

Tom didn't seem to think it funny a bit, the reason being plain. The idea that was uppermost in his head was that I was eloping with his rival. However, the fact that we had taken the automobile he had been using convinced him. If we had intended an elopement we should not have been likely to take that particular car. The fact of having been pursued by Tom began to strike Charlie as very ludicrous. The corners of his mouth began to quirk up. Tom's scowl also broke into a smile.

"We've got to get back to town," said Charlie. "Do you want your wife in your car, Tom, or will you trust her to me? I promise solemnly not to run away with her again."

Tom's smile broadened into a grin, and, starting his auto—he had borrowed it for the pursuit—he left us to go where we pleased. We followed him home, and I invited Charlie into luncheon. We found Tom opening a bottle of wine, and before the party broke up we were in a gale of laughter at our stealing an automobile, being chased for thieves and finally my being considered an eloper by my own husband.

"SHE IS NOT MRS. GUNNESS"

One Glance at Canadian Woman Satisfies Laporte, Ind., Deputy.

Neville, Sask., March 30.—Deputy Sheriff Clinton Cochrane of Laporte, Ind., arrived here, and in company with Sergeant Vogt and a number of newspaper representatives went to the homestead of Joseph Wisner, to see the woman who is suspected of being Mrs. Belle Gunness, the murderess. On arrival at the ranch the woman was brought before him. The first glance was enough.

"She is not Mrs. Gunness," he said. The party then returned to town.

FEAR CLARK'S IRE

Democratic Harmony Involved in Speaker's Attitude.

SPEECH CAREFULLY PREPARED

Notwithstanding Conciliatory Message from White House, Factionalism Has Crept Into Democratic Organization Is Belief—"Second Tier" Statesmen to the Fore.

WASHINGTON. — Democratic leaders, who are anxious to compose the differences that have been aroused in the party organization in congress over the Panama canal tolls bill, look forward with concern to the address on the question that will be delivered in the house on Tuesday by Speaker Clark. Fear is expresed that if Mr. Clark attempts a vigorous arraignment of President Wilson for his espousal of the repeal bill that the administration will at once be forced to declare war on the Missourian.

It will be for Mr. Clark to determine on Tuesday whether the party fight now brewing shall break out early or late. Despite the conciliatory message sent out from the White House it is generally conceded that factionalism has crept into the Democratic organization and that the time is not far distant when an anti-administration group will be found doing business within the majority in congress.

Clark Has Been Advised.

So far Speaker Clark has taken none but his intimates into his confidence concerning the tenor of the address that he will make on Tuesday. It is known that he has sought counsel and advice on this particular speech. There is good reason to believe that he has conferred with former Senator Fred T. Dubois of Idaho and former Senator Frank R. Pettigrew of South Dakota, who managed the Clark candidacy in the Baltimore convention. Messrs. Dubois and Pettigrew, sored by their defeat at Baltimore, are regarded as enemies of the administration. To the blunders committed by Dubois and Pettigrew at Baltimore was attributed in part at least the defeat of Mr. Clark by Mr. Wilson.

A good deal of significance is attached to the recent arrival here of Mr. Pettigrew who saw the speaker and Mr. Dubois shortly after he reached Washington.

Friends of Mr. Clark who would regret a break with the administration take some comfort from the fact that the speaker is carefully preparing his address on the tolls question.

There is a group of administration leaders in the house who are in a rather churlish mood over the peace talk that came from the White House Saturday. These are the "second tier" leaders such as Palmer of Pennsylvania, Sherley of Kentucky, Adamson of Georgia, Covington of Maryland and Sims of Tennessee. Some of these members insist that whatever happens now, Speaker Clark's head must be put on the block in the next congress.

The speech will have no effect on the measure itself. The bill is assured of a majority of from 50 to 90 votes.

EX-U. S. MARSHAL ARRESTED

William Richards, Just Out of Penitentiary, Is Taken Again.

DES MOINES, IOWA. — William Richards, popularly known as "Big Bill Richards," who for twenty years was a deputy United States marshal for the southern district of Iowa, is in jail here facing possible return to the penitentiary at Fort Madison as the result of a charge of attempted robbery. Richards, who is fifty-nine years old, recently was released from an eighteen year term on a parole.

Richards was arrested on the charge of Mrs. H. B. LaFore, that he was one of three masked men who entered her home and at the point of a pistol compelled her to be silent while his two companions searched the place. Mrs LaFore broke away and notified the police and Richards was captured as he was trying to get away.

U. S. TREATY STAND AROUSES

Failure of Senate to Ratify Pact Causes Comment in Denmark.

COPENHAGEN, DENMARK.—The refusal of the United States senate to ratify the Danish-American arbitration treaty, of which the rigsdag has already been notified, has made a bad impression here.

The objection that the Danish West Indian islands might be sold to some great power is regarded as being entirely without force, such sale being out of the question. The failure of the treaty is deeply regretted.

STUDENTS WAR ON EXPULSION DECREE

Jump "Exams" to Aid Expelled Basketball Team.

HOLLAND, MICH. — Three hundred Hope college students jumped their examinations when it was learned that seven members of the basketball team had been expelled from the institution by President Vennema for participating in a game with the Muskegon High school team at Muskegon last week. The rules forbid any athletic organization of the college leaving the city without permission of the president.

The students were denied the use of the college chapel for a massmeeting and they marched to the city hall. Resolutions were adopted demanding the reinstatement of the players or at least the lifting of the expulsion order until the examinations are over.

President Vennema acquiesced in allowing the players to take their examinations, but refused to reinstate them at once.

READ CLAYRE CORD

Relics Reveal Nebuchadnezzar's Own Story of Life.

TOLD IN CYLINDER DECIPHERED

Inscription Relates Rebuilding of Tower of Babel—Potentate Speaks Of Ancestor of 3,000 Years Earlier—Subdued Nine Armies in Year—Translated at Yale University.

NEW HAVEN, CONN. — Inscriptions on clay cylinders in the Babylonian collection at Yale university have been deciphered, it is announced and much information for students of biblical chronology has been obtained.

One cylinder inscribed for Nebuchadnezzar, who reigned B. C. 605 to 561, recounts his deeds with reference to the restoration and enlargement of the walls and moats of Babylon and of temples and sanctuaries thereabouts. He records the rebuilding of Marchuk, recognized as the ancient tower of Babel of the Book of Genesis.

Nebuchadnezzar Tells Story.

Nebuchadnezzar adds, according to the translation: "I sought and found the foundation stone of the temple of Lugal-Marada, my diety, and laid it upon the foundation stoneof Naram-Sin, king, my ancient ancestor."

This ancestor presumably lived 3,000 years before Nebuchadnezzar. Naram-Sin was the builder of Babylon and perhaps the greatest builder of all history.

The nebuchadnezzar cylinder was found near Nippur, on the Euphrates. Another cylinder, found by Arabs at the same site, bears an inscription of Naram-Sin, and is probably one of the actual foundation stones of the temple of Lugal-Marada in Murad.

Subdued Nine Armies in Year.

The inscription says that Naramsin subdued nine hostile armies in a year and carried three of their kings bound before the god Imlil. The record ends:

"Whoever alters this inscribed stone, may the gods, Shamash and Lugal-Marada destroy his estate and exterminate his seed."

FLAYS CARNEGIE IN DEBATE

WASHINGTON. — "If Andrew Carnegie, who continually asserts the cause of Great Britain, were the citizen of any other nation he would be charged with treason," declared Senator Chamberlain, in the course of the Panama tolls debate. "He has never hesitated to spend his millions in endeavoring to inculcate a reciprocal feeling for Great Britain in the minds of the people of the United States."

Mr. Chamberlain's attack on Mr. Carnegie came as a climax to an hour of hot argument, during which Senator Jones, who also opposed a repeal of the tolls exemption, had read, under protest, several letters attacking the contention of President Wilson.

JUSSERAND STORY IS DENIED

It Is Believed Generally, However, French Ambassador Is to Retire.

WASHINGTON. — Despite denial from the French embassy, reports of the prospective transfer of Ambassador Jusserand from his post at Washington found general acceptance here.

The ambassador authorized the statement that he had not been informed by his government of any intention to transfer him and Secretary Bryan said that the state department had not been informed of the change.

CASE IN COURTS 20 YEARS; WIDOW LOSES

Michigan Supreme Court Upsets $20,000 Verdict.

LANSING, MICH. — Nicholas J Andrews was killed in the Tamarack mine, Houghton county, Nov. 14, 1893. His widow and six little children were left.

Mrs. Grace Andrews, the widow, as administratrix, as soon as possible, brought suit for $20,000 damages against the Tamarack Mining Co. The supreme court of Michigan has just passed a final decision on her case.

Mrs. Andrews has waited more than twenty years to learn, that although she has won two victories in the lower courts, she has nothing coming from the mining company, the highest court in the state after careful consideration of the evidence, has said so.

When the body of her husband, crushed to death by a fall of rock, was brought into the little upper peninsula home, the youngest baby had seen but six months of life; the oldest but ten years. Today the children are men and women, while the mine captain and the mine superintendent are both dead.

BOY IS CARRIED OVER DAM

One Youth Loses Life While Companion Is Barely Saved.

YPSILANTI, MICH. — As a result of the attempt of two small boys to cross the swollen Huron river in a canoe, Cyril Nellis, ten years old, is dead and his companion, Aden Benedict, thirteen years old, is suffering from exposure.

The boys shoved the canoe into the stream at the north end of the city and pushed out. They had proceeded but a short distance, when a terrific current seized the frail craft and, after whirling it around a few times, carried it swiftly down stream. As the craft passed under the footbridge at Forest avenue Cyril stood up and seized a beam. Aden, frightened, sat quietly in the center of the boat as the current carried it toward the dam below Congress street.

A section foreman rescued Aden with difficulty but Cyril fell off into the stream and was drowned.

BEATS CRAWFORD IN DAKOTA

Congressman Burke Nominated at South Dakota Statewide Primary.

PIERRE, S. D. — Senator Coe I. Crawford, the Republican majority faction candidate, went down to defeat before Congressman Charles P. Burke, minority candidate, who was nominated for United States senator in the statewide primary election.

Although the minority Republicans do not concede the defeat of their candidate for governor, H. B. Anderson, returns indicate the renomination of Governor Byrne, the majority state ticket leader. P. O. Richards, the Independent Republican candidate for governor, polled a surprisingly large vote.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustahian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

BARN SIDING

We have just received a large shipment of White Pine Barn Siding from Minnesota, it is much better quality than we expected.

It comes in both 6 and 8 in all lengths. Some of it is clear without a knot, what knots they're are are all small and solid.

It will be impossible for us to duplicate the shipment without charging more. It will pay any farmer to drive miles to get some for his barn.

Shingles have gone up in price, we willha ve to advance the price soon. Suppose you call and look at the shingle and siding and have us save what you need and draw the same later.

Sturgis LUXURY CARRIAGE

Many baby carriages have no springs at all or springs so stiff that a weight ten times heavier than baby's is required to bend them. Either way, baby's delicate, growing body is subjected to a jolting and jarring that is liable to injure him permanently.

That's why we particularly want you to test out the famous

How to Detect the Alum Baking Powder

"Which are the alum baking powders; how can I avoid them unless they are named?" asks a housekeeper.

Here is one way: take the can of a low-priced powder in your hand and read the ingredient clause upon the back label. The law requires that if the powder contains alum that fact must be there stated. If you find one of the ingredients named alum, or sulphate of aluminum, you have found an alum baking powder.

There is another and a better way. You don't have to know the names of the alum powders. Use Royal Baking Powder only; that assures you a cream of tartar powder, and the purest and most healthful baking powder beyond question.

ANNUAL COMMERCE CLUB BANQUET

BUSINESS MEETING. BOARD OF DIRECTORS CHOSEN.

Entertainment at Bradley Opera House, the gift of the Commerce Club.

That the Commerce Club is alive and "on its job" was demonstrated Wednesday evening when about 125 of its members and friends assembled at Witherell Hall for their Annual Club Banquet and business meeting.

A feeling of fellowship and unity of spirit prevailed which if nourished is bound to produce results.

"Tecumseh the biggest little town on the map" is a big thing to say of this town but we believe that a body of citizens such as gathered at the Commerce Club Banquet pulling together will keep this town what we call it, "The Biggest little Town on the Map" and we believe further that its citizens will live up to the mark

At six o'clock the hall was thrown open and a few minutes after about 125 men were seated to three tables prepared for them. Two long tables arranged along either side of the hall for the members and friends and a smaller one in the center for the speakers and Board of Directors

The hall was beautifully decorated and Coller's Orchestra of six pieces furnished music during the Banquet.

A five course Banquet was served Barrett Bros., catering. Artistic menu cards and paper napkins provided by Uncle Sam's Macaroni Co. were used:

After the Banquet Vice-President J. H. Smith called the meeting to order and with a few well chosen words stated the object of the meeting. Invocation by Rev. W. A. Rex.

A committee of three was chosen to nominate a Board of Directors for the ensuing year with the following result:

P. W. A. Fitzsimmons
F. S. Anderson
W. L. Jones
J. J. Belcher
Dr. W. B. Hartzog
C A. Wright
C. A. Williamson

The Treasurer, C. A. Wright gave his report, which showed the Club in a healthy condition.

Addresses were given by P. W. A. Fitzsimmons, Dr. W. B. Hartzog and Rev. W. A. Rex

Mr. Fitzsimmons kept the Banqueters in good humor and told a few things which the Club hoped to accomplish and which were needed to keep Tecumseh a live town.

Such as better schools, better condition of village streets and stimulated a feeling for better country roads. He also stated that the American Embassy Association of New York had communicated with our Club asking our support in urging upon Congress the necessity of providing foreign residences for our foreign councils. The Club went on record as favoring the movement.

Mr. Fitzsimmons was followed by Dr, Hartzog who told of the summer Chautauqua which the Commerce Club are arranging for Tecumseh to be held beginning Aug. 16. Cards were circulated among those present and were liberally signed by those present pledging themselves as willing to take some 250 tickets.

Rev. Rex followed with a few remarks along this line boosting the Chautauqua.

The Commerce Club was dissappointed in not being able to produce the lecture "Dawn of Plenty" as they read a telegram stating that the lecturer was unable to be present but some quick work was done by the committee in charge and a four reel picture was secured from Detroit "Judath of Bethulia" taken from the Apocrytha. This proved a happy substitutefor the "Dawn of Plenty." It was a wonderful picture and very much appreciated by a well filled house at Bradley Opera House.

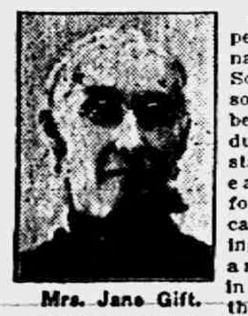
FOR THE GRIP

Peruna Is Sometimes Used With Good Results



Mrs. Jane Gift.

A great many people use Peruna for the grip. Some use it as soon as the grip begins, taking it during the acute stage of the disease, claiming for it great efficacy in shortening the disease, and especially in shortening the after stages.

Many people take it after they have had the grip. Their convalescence is slow. They have suffered along for a month or two, without any signs of complete recovery. Then they resort to Peruna as a tonic, with splendid results.

Mrs. Jane Gift, R. F. D. 1, Athens, Ohio, whose portrait appears above, writes: "I think I would have been dead long ago if it had not been for Peruna. Six years ago I had la grippe very bad. The doctor came to see me every day, but I gradually grew worse. I told my husband I thought I would surely die if I did not get relief soon.

"One day I picked up the newspaper and accidentally found a testimonial of a woman who had been cured of grip by Peruna. I told my husband I wanted to try it. He went directly to the drug store and got a bottle of Peruna. I could see the improvement in a very short time and was soon able to do my work. I continued using it until I was entirely cured."

Mr. Victor Patneaude, 328 Madison St., Topeka, Kas., writes: "Twelve years ago I had a severe attack of la grippe and I never really recovered my health and strength, but grew weaker every year, until I was unable to work.

"Two years ago I began using Peruna and it built up my strength so that in a couple of months I was able to go to work again. This winter I had another attack of la grippe, but Peruna soon drove it out of my system. My wife and I consider it a household remedy."

Those who object to liquid medicines can now obtain Peruna Tablets.

Most men are capable of eternal devotion—to pleasure; of a pure, sweet, changeless love—for themselves, and of exalted moral ideas—for their wives.

There isn't a new sorrow in the world—there're all old ones—but we can all find new happiness if we look for it in the right way.

Sometimes it seems as though a man can only be constant to the kind of girl who keeps him constantly on the ragged edge.

A Human Churn

WHEN the food reaches the stomach it is subjected to a peculiar churning movement by the muscular walls of the stomach"—(See Dr. Pierce's Medical Adviser, page 45). In the liver, kidneys and skin, the blood is purified of its waste materials—these organs act as human filters, leaving the blood pure and clear—unless liver, digestive tract and kidneys are clogged.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is a stomach, liver and kidney tonic—by assisting the stomach to assimilate, the liver to filter, the kidneys to act—the poisons are removed, the red blood corpuscles are increased and one feels light, fresh and active instead of logy, dull and heavy. The "Discovery" stimulates the stomach, increases action of heart and arteries and is a most satisfactory alterative in blood-taint of any character. The refreshing influence of this extract of native medicinal plants has been favorably known for over forty years. Everywhere some neighbor can tell you of the good it has done.

Vera Nicholaevna

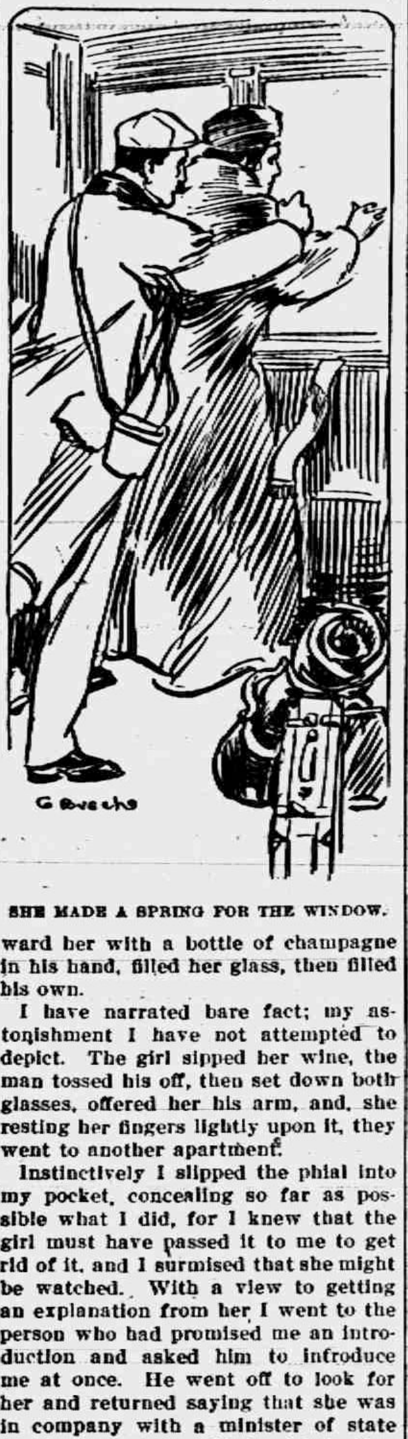
A Story of the Russian Revolution

By DONALD CHAMBERLIN

When I was a young man I was sent to St. Petersburg by my employers to establish a depot for the sale of the chemical goods they manufactured. I had letters to the American ambassador and, desiring to see something of Russian society, accepted such invitations as he secured for me. Society in Europe is different from ours in America in this, that the sovereign is its recognized head as well as the head of the government. In order to see society in St. Petersburg I must see the Court Circles. The ambassador was very good to me and put me on his list for an invitation whenever there was a function of importance coming off.

One evening at a ball at the Winter palace I was in the refreshment room partaking of the delicate viands there when I saw a girl whom I had noticed for her beauty of form and face, her vivacity and general attractiveness. I had asked for an introduction to her and had been promised one later in the evening.

We were all standing in the supper room, some eating, some drinking, and since it was crowded I was pushed very near the object of my admiration. She stood with her back to me pledging an elderly man whose many decorations marked him for an important personage. Each held a glass containing wine. Feeling something touch me, I looked down and saw the girl's left hand. In her right she held her glass, while her left hung beside her. In the crush it had been pressed against me. The man emptied his glass and turned to a table near him to replenish it. While he was doing so the girl turned her head, gave me an appealing glance and lowered her eyes to her hand. Partly catching her meaning, I looked down and saw something between her thumb and finger. I dropped my hand against hers, and she placed a tiny phial within my fingers. This had scarcely been accomplished when the gentleman turned toward her with a bottle of champagne in his hand, filled her glass, then filled his own.



SHE MADE A SPRING FOR THE WINDOW.

I have narrated bare fact; my astonishment I have not attempted to depict. The girl sipped her wine, the man tossed his off, then set down both glasses, offered her his arm, and, she resting her fingers lightly upon it, they went to another apartment.

Instinctively I slipped the phial into my pocket, concealing so far as possible what I did, for I knew that the girl must have passed it to me to get rid of it, and I surmised that she might be watched. With a view to getting an explanation from her I went to the person who had promised me an introduction and asked him to introduce me at once. He went off to look for her and returned saying that she was in company with a minister of state and he would not think of intruding upon her at such a time. Unfortunately very soon after this she left the palace.

Before leaving myself I inquired who she was and learned that she was the daughter of a colonel in the Russian army, one of the nobles who in Russia stand between the imperial family and the common people, a class that have no voice in public affairs and that are as much opposed to the autocracy of the czar as those who are beneath them. Her name was Vera Nicholaevna.

I went to my lodgings, and as soon as I had entered and locked the door of my bedroom I took out the phial I had received to have a look at it. It contained a colorless liquid. I was tempted to touch my tongue to the contents, but dare not. Being a chemist, I resolved to analyze the liquid and the next day did so. It was lucky that I had refrained from touching my tongue to it, for it was a deadly poison.

I was for some time a prey to conflicting emotions. Had it not been for the personality of the girl and its effect upon me I would not for a moment have been tempted to meet her with the likely result of being drawn into a dangerous position. Visions of dungeons, of Siberia, of the scaffold haunted me. On the other hand, I could not banish her from my mind. I was horror stricken that one so young, so beautiful, should be implicated and longed to prevent her going a step further and becoming an assassin. I thought of her working in the mines at Kara or dragged to the scaffold, and while doing so I considered making her acquaintance and using the secret I possessed to compel her to desist from political crime.

Nevertheless I did nothing at the time and would have done nothing had not fate thrown a second and a much greater temptation in my way. Months passed, and, having finished my work in St. Petersburg, I applied for my passport and started for America. At the railway station I climbed into a compartment of a car, taking a seat by the window on the opposite side from which I had entered. There was but one other person in the compartment, and the light was insufficient for me to see him or her distinctly, for I could not make out whether I was looking at a man or a woman. A long ulster reaching from the chin to the ankles concealed the figure, but I thought I saw a slight adornment to the felt hat indicating that the wearer was a woman.

The passenger was looking out of the window, apparently watching for some one. Presently the guard shut the door. But my fellow traveler did not cease to watch. The train was moving out of the station when I heard a gasp more like that of a woman than a man, and, looking out, I saw a man running to catch the train. The train gathered speed, but from my position I could not see the man chasing it. The passenger put her head out the window, but soon withdrew it and fell back on the cushion.

"Did he catch it?" I asked.

There was no reply for a few moments; then suddenly the other person, starting up, threw open the ulster and revealed the figure of a woman.

Great heavens! She was the girl who had handed me the phial at the Winter palace.

"He is on the footboard. When the train stops he will come to arrest me. That means for me the mines. Death is far preferable. I am going to die."

She made a spring for the window but I caught her.

Sacrifice—very great sacrifice—rarely comes when we are in our sober senses. It takes us by impulse. Looking backward, I wonder how I could have done what I did then, and I shudder. I defied the czar of all the Russias. I persuaded the girl to give me her ulster and her hat, while I transferred to her my fur overcoat, my traveling cap and a steamer rug for a lap robe. With these articles, the cap drawn down over her eyes, she was well covered and, sitting in a far corner, could not be told from a man. I put on her ulster and her hat and when the train stopped was sitting by the door, while Vera Nicholaevna sat where I had been, pretending to sleep. When the train stopped I knew a search was being made, and presently the door of our compartment opened, and an officer of police looked in.

"I am lost!" I cried in a falsetto voice.

The officer wanted no better evidence that I was his quarry. I was ordered to get out of the car, the door was closed, and my captor told the guard that the train could go on.

My object was to deceive the officer as to my identity as long as possible, and this was not an easy matter, since I was a man and he was looking for a woman. I wrapped my ulster about me and kept my hat well down over my face. It was night, and this helped me. Luckily I wore no beard. I was taken to the jail of the town in which I was captured and locked up. As soon as the key was turned on me I muttered:

"Thank heaven, she may be saved!"

The next morning the mistake was discovered. I was sent to St. Petersburg charged with assisting a political prisoner to escape. I wrote to the American ambassador to help me, but had little expectation that my letter would be given him. It was not, and I languished in a dungeon.

I wrote again to the ambassador, but my letter was not permitted to reach him. Some unknown person informed him of my condition, whereupon he worked hard for me. He would have failed had he not made personal application to the czar. The emperor was at the time asking for a concession on the part of the United States in a matter pending between the two governments, and a bargain was finally struck by which the concession was made on the one side, while I was granted a pardon on the other. After several months spent in captivity I was released, given my passport and told to leave Russia by the first train.

From my parting with Vera Nicholaevna, when I was arrested, till the present I have never seen her nor heard of her except indirectly. One day long after I reached America a Russian came to see me and told me that for the sacrifice I had made to the cause of freedom in Russia, if I had any favor to ask of him, it would be granted so far as possible. I told him that I desired no recompense except to know where Vera Nicholaevna was. To this he replied that it was the only impossible favor I could ask, for Vera Nicholaevna was lost to the world, her identity had been buried.

STORY HARD BLOW TO ROBERTS' CASE

Man Indicted with Mayor Confesses Registration Frauds.

Terre Haute, Ind., April 6.—By far the most damaging evidence produced by the prosecution thus far in the trial of Donn M. Roberts, accused of conspiracy to commit election frauds, was the confession of John Roper, indicted jointly with Roberts as a co-conspirator.

Roper, who was a member of the regular Progressive city committee during the last campaign, told the court and jury that he was elected precinct committeeman on the Progressive ticket at the instigation of Donn Roberts in order that Roberts could get a "pipe line" into the Progressive camp.

In Precinct H of the First ward, Roper told how the registration board, of which he was Progressive clerk, registered at one time a bunch of twenty-five fictitious names from registration applicants already filled out that were brought to the precinct by Sydney Onyet.

Another large bunch of "phoney" registration applications, Roper declared, was brought to the registration place by Donn Roberts and given to Earl Harkness, the inspector of registration in that precinct. Registration books of that precinct were identified by Roper as those that he, Earl Harkness, Henry Raeber and Carney Chess "padded" with false registrations on the last night of registration day, when the crooked work necessitated holding the session until early in the morning of the next day.

TO "DELIVER" THREE VOTES

Mrs. Dunne and Daughter to Accompany Governor to Polls.

Chicago, April 6.—Governor Dunne will "deliver his delegation" at the polls Tuesday morning in the Twenty-fifth ward, he says. His family voting strength consists of himself, Mrs. Dunne, and Miss Eileen Dunne.

"We will be here bright and early Tuesday morning," Governor Dunne said at the LaSalle hotel. "Mrs. Dunne and Eileen are registered, and it will be one of the most enjoyable moments of my life when we start for the polls."

WONDER IF IT IS THERE YET?

Life Savings of Suicide Go With Her to the Grave.

Columbus, Ind., April 6.—When the body of Miss Kate Shaner, who drowned herself in Haw Creek here a few days ago, was buried $350 and her few jewels were buried with her.

The money was the savings of her life, and just before she committed suicide she tied it up in an old sleeve of a dress and hid it. The money was not found until just before the funeral and just in time to place it in the casket.

BURROUGHS READY TO SAIL

Famous Naturalist, 77, Soon to Start for Africa.

Atlanta, Ga., April 6.—John Burroughs, the famous naturalist, celebrated his seventy-seventh birthday "by eating three meals and walking five miles." He is now spending a vacation in Atlanta, but is preparing to leave shortly for South Africa, where he will conduct extensive researches. He is in remarkably good health for a man of his age.

Though he has written text books on nature study and is a world recognized authority on nature, Burroughs was until about fifty years of age a clerk in a department at Washington, and knew little of outdoor phenomena.

BENTON REPORT ACQUITS VILLA

Carranza's Commission Finds His Aid Innocent.

GEN. FIERRO IS GUILTY MAN

Court Martial Story Was at First Opposed by Villa, but Rebel General Was Finally Persuaded to Accept It —Benton Killed Miles Away from Juarez.

El Paso, Tex., April 6.—William S. Benton, the British subject and rancher in Mexico, was not murdered by Pancho Villa. He was not executed by a court martial's order and he was not killed by a knife stab. He was not even kiled in Juarez.

This was the report of the commission appointed by Venustiano Carranza, "First Chief of the Constitutionalists," to make an investigation. The report wil say that Benton was killed at Samalayuca, thirty-two miles south of Juarez, and Rodolfo Fierro, late rebel major and superintendent of railways for Pancho Villa, will be held responsible.

The body was first buried in the soft sand at Samalayuca, but was later taken up by Villa and transported to Chihuahua and buried. This, the report will also say.

Villa to Be Exonerated.

Villa will be completely exonerated and the killing will be laid entirely at the door of Fierro, who is now and has been for several weeks in jail at Chihuahua. He was stripped of his authority as superintetdent of railways shortly after the Benton incident and a few days later he was placed in prison in Chihuahua. At the time it was given out that his arrest was in connection with the death of a woman a Chihuahua.

It has just become known positively that the commission has completed its investigation and is ready to report. It has become known that Carranza has known the facts for weeks without waiting for the official report and that the official report will in every way confirm that Villa told Carranza regarding the affair when the rebel general first took Carranza into his confidence.

Lawyer Suggested Story.

The name of the lawyer who suggested the court martial report and the explanation of the Britisher's death will be divulged in the report, it is said. Villa is declared to have been opposed to the court martial idea but several of his advisors insisted that if the report of a supposed court martial were given out, the world refused to acept it as a fact. The world refused to accept, however, and then Villa got frightened.

Advertising.

"There goes a business man who was ruined by advertising."

"Impossible! How could that happen?"

"He let his competitors do it all."—Boston Transcript.

POOLE IS BELIEVED DYING

He Is Young Man Who Convicted His Father of Murder.

Lafayette, Ind., April 6.—Emory Poole, the young man whose testimony three years ago sent his father, John Poole, to the state prison under life sentence for the murder of Joseph Kempner, is dying of spinal meningitis in a hospital at Oxford, Ind., near here.

Poole played detective and dug up Kempner's body on the Poole farm. He was the principal witness for the state in his father's trial.

"DRY" NAVY IS AIM OF DANIELS

Grape Juice Diplomacy to Have Right Arm.

ENFORCES TOTAL ABSTINENCE

Secretary of Navy Issues Order Prohibiting Taboced Beverage on Vessels, in Navy Yards, in Officers' Homes or Clubs, on Naval Reservations—Grape Juice for Banquets.

Washington, April 6.—A "dry" navy is now to take its place as the right arm of grape juice diplomacy in the scheme of the Wilson administration. Secretary of the Navy Daniels has signed an order which absolutely prohibits the use or introduction of alcoholic liquor upon any vessel of the navy or within the confines of any navy yard or shore station. This order will be issued to the service at once and will become effective on July 1, 1914.

Enforces Total Abstinence.

Besides abolishing what is known as the officers' wine mess on board ship and the sale of liquor at the officers' clubs on shore, Mr. Daniels' order is so sweeping as practically to enforce total abstinence upon naval officers for extended periods. It will henceforth be a vielation of this order for any officer or guest upon any naval vessel to have in his possession any alcoholic beverage.

Officers living on shore will be prohibited from having any liquor in their private homes, if their duties require their residence on naval reservations. Wives of officers so situated will be prohibited from serving punches or any other form of liquor at their social functions.

Commanding officers by the terms of the order are made personally responsible for its enforcement and it is Secretary Daniel's determination that it shall be rigidly observed.

Grape Juice at Banquets.

If no exception is made to the order by Mr. Daniels it will mean that the high officers of the navies of the world which send fleets to the opening of the Panama canal will be entertained on board American vessels at wineless banquets and toasted perhaps with grape juice.

50,000 WOMEN VOTE TUESDAY

Issue of "Wet" or "Dry" Will Be Settled in 300 Towns.

Springfield, Ill., April 6.—Fifty thousand downstate women, voting in 300 townships, hold the balance of power to decide the fate of 3,000 saloons. The 50,000 are the newly enfranchised voters, who for the first time have the chance to vote under the township local option law.

The 300 townships include the 285 present "wet" townships at which the direct question will be submitted on Tuesday as to whether the territory in question shall become "dry." The remaining fifteen are "dry" townships, where the "wets" are seeking to regain territory voted "anti-saloon" or townships physically "dry," which the anti-saloon interests are seeking to safeguard with the legal restrictions imposed by the local option statute regarding local option territory.

Feud Jury Disagrees.

Winchester, Ky., April 6.—The jury in the case of Thomas Davidson, charged with complicity in the murder of Edward Callahan, former sheriff of Breathitt county, reported to Judge Benton that it could not agree and was discharged. Judge Benton immediately set the case for a second trial on June 29.

REVENUES LESS UNDER NEW LAW

Record for the First Half Year Shows Large Drop.

IMPORTS AND EXPORTS FALL

Underwood-Simmons Tariff Measure, After Six Months, Meets with Decreased Business of All Kinds of Which Custom House Is Barometer —Beef Imports 60,000,000 Pounds.

Washington, April 6.—The first half year's record of the new tariff law presents a spectacle of falling revenues, increased deficits, reduction of industrial activities and smaller exportation of manufactures.

The new law ended its first six month's record at the close of business April 3rd, and the report of the treasury receipts tells the story of the full period so far as relates to revenue while other official reports just issued cover in detail the commercial operations of five months and furnish a basis for an estimate as to the sixth month of the period.

Fall in Customs.

The actual figures for the six months shows a fall of over $25,000,000 in customs receipts when compared with the corresponding period of the preceding year. Not a single month in the entire period shows as large receipts from customs as that of the corresponding month of the preceding year when the Payne-Aldrich law was in operation, and in but one of the five months for which details of imports are available are the imports of manufacturers' materials as large as in the corresponding month of the previous year.

For the five months for which detailed figures of trade under the new law are now at hand, the imports of manufacturers' raw material amount to but $253,000,000 against $280,000,000 in the same month of the preceding year and those of manufactures for further use in manufacturing are but $122,500,0006 against $149,500,000 in the preceding year.

Export Records as Bad.

Meantime the export records are equally bad so far as relates to forcing our manufactures into foreign markets. The official record of the five months ending with February, 1914, shows but $315,750,000 in exports and of manufactures for further use in manufacturing $149,000,000 against $162,000,000 in the corresponding period last year.

As to the increased food supply under the removal of duties the quantity of beef imported in the five months for which a complete record is at hand shows a total of but 67,000,000 pounds and the reports for the sixth months from current publications which present a weekly record indicate that the total for the full half year will amount to considerably less than one pound per capita.

SERIOUS RIOTING IS FEARED

Houghton Sheriff Increases His Force of Deputies.

Houghton, Mich., April 6.—A special force of deputies has been secured to do duty in Adams township, which includes the South Range strike district, in anticipation of serious difficulties during the election.

The Western Federation of Miners and the Socialists are backing a ticket nominated in opposition to the regular ticket, which represents the anti-strike party. The regular ticket is headed by Supervisor A. D. Edwards, chairman of the county board and member of the state legislature. Jacob Speigel, manager of the Western Federation store at South Range, is the opposition nominee for supervisor. In all of the mining townships complete or partial Socialist tickets have been named.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustahian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by Catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free

The Use of Slang.

Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler declares that the widespread use of slang is threatening the purity of English speech. The president of Columbia university has uttered a timely warning that all thinking persons should heed. Slang springs from the uneducated classes and, like disease and other unwholesome things, is contagious. Evil communications corrupt speech as well as manners. It is only by reading good literature and associating with the cultivated classes that we can become masters of good English. Our educators should labor for the maintenance of the highest standards of diction in order that the English language may be preserved pure and undefiled.—New York Herald.

Bending Metal Pipe.

In order to bend metal pipe without buckling, it is necessary to fill it with some substance which can be easily removed after the bending is accomplished. Sand or rosin is commonly used, but in Germany a new method has been originated which consists in filling the pipe with water under pressure. Not only does the water keep the pipe from buckling, but a test of water tightness and pressure resistance is thus applied at the same time.

TRAVELS OF COLUMBUS.

His Record Dead May in Time Outdo His Record Alive.

The proposal to take the body of Christopher Columbus to Panama for exhibition recalls to mind that this would be the pioneer's sixth resting place since he died in 1506. He is more traveled in death than in life.

Columbus was buried in Valladolid, Spain, his body being exhumed a few years later and recommitted to earth at the Chartreuse convent, Seville. Here it was only allowed to rest a very short period, being taken across the Atlantic—then, of course, many months' journey—in 1536 and buried for the third time in the cathedral of Santo Domingo.

After a lapse of 250 years, in 1795, part of the island passed to France, so once again the patriotic Spaniard interrupted the national hero's rest to rebury him at Santiago. Then when Cuba was lost to Spain the body was taken back to Seville, where it now lies in the cathedral.

If Columbus is taken across to Panama this year be will have beaten his own Atlantic record in life.—Madrid Cor. New York World.

An Editor's Easy Life

It is easy to be an editor, the Normal Bulletin says. To run a newspaper successfully a man has merely to be able to write poems, discuss the tariff and money questions, umpire a base ball game, report a wedding, saw wood, describe a fire so that the readers will shed their wraps, make $1 do the work of $10, shine at a dance, measure calico, abuse the liquor habit, test whiskey, subscribe to charity, go without meals, attack free silver, wear diamonds, invent advertisements, sneer at robbery, overlook scandal, appraise babies, delight pumpkin raisers, minister to the afflicted, lead the disgruntled, fight to a finish, set type, mould opinion, sweep out the office, speak at the prayer meeting, and stand in with everybody. And in addition to the above essentials the poor editor has to print a paper once a week.—Publishers' Auxiliary.

Of Interest to Orchard Owners

Orchard owners would do well to inspect the trunks of their trees without delay, for evidence of injury by rabbits or mice, Now is the time to repair this injury. It is not difficult and a little work may save a valuable tree. Full directions as to how to do this work are given in a circular issued by the Michigan Agriculture Experiment Station that will be sent free upon request.

Now is the time to graft over undesirable varieties of fruits to good sorts. The work is easy to do. Circular 14, Michigan Agricultural Expersment Station, gives plain directions. It is sent free on request to R. S. Shaw, Director, East Lansing, Michigan.

HAVE YOU SEEN A FLY?

Have you?

Of course you killed him!.... You didn't!.... You don't kill flies until they begin to bother you!

Well that is just the reason why there are so many flies around in the summer to make your life miserable. Let me tell you a public secret.

Only a few flies live through the winter, and when they first come from their hiding places a Vigilance Committee composed of every man, woman and child, could soon kill the majority of them.

Will you take your share of the responsibility of exterminating this pest? Will you make it a principle to swat each fly you see and to enlist your neighbors as members of this Vigilance Committee?

A fly in time saves billions!

Screech Owl in Church.

A fine specimen of the screech or barn owl was seen in Castleacre Parish church in Norfolk, England, one Sunday morning, perched on one of the beams of the nave, just before the service began. While the officials were wondering how to get rid of it the owl alighted on the hat of a lady in the congregation, whence it was carried to the open air and set free. It is supposed that the bird descended the belfry stairs while an official was winding the church clock.

BLACK SILK

STOVE POLISH

Keeps Your Stove

"Always Ready for Company"

A bright, clean, glossy stove is the joy and pride of every housekeeper. But it is hard to keep a stove nice and shiny—unless Black Silk Stove Polish is used.

Here is the reason. Black Silk Stove Polish sticks right to the iron. It doesn't rub off or dust off. Its shine lasts four times longer than the shine of any other polish. You only need to polish one-fourth as often, yet your stove will be cleaner, brighter and better looking than it has been since you first bought it. Use on your parlor stove, kitchen stove or gas stove. Get a can from your hardware or stove dealer. If you do not find it better than any other stove polish you have ever used before, your dealer is authorized to refund your money. But we feel sure you will agree with the thousands of other up-to-date women who are now using Black Silk Stove Polish and who say it is the "best stove polish ever made."

BLACK SILK STOVE POLISH

LIQUID OR PASTE
ONE QUALITY

Be sure to get the genuine. Black Silk Stove Polish costs you no more than the ordinary kind.

Keep your grates, registers, fenders and stove pipes bright and free from rusting by using BLACK SILK AIR-DRYING ENAMEL. Brush free with each can of enamel only.

Use BLACK SILK METAL POLISH for silverware, nickel, tinware or brass. It works quickly, easily, and leaves a brilliant surface. It has no equal for use on automobiles.

BARN SIDING

We have just received a large shipment of White Pine Barn Siding from Minnesota, it is much better quality than we expected.

It comes in both 6 and 8 in all lengths. Some of it is clear without a knot, what knots they're are are all small and solid.

It will be impossible for us to duplicate the shipment without charging more. It will pay any farmer to drive miles to get some for his barn.

Shingles have gone up in price, we will have to advance the price soon. Suppose you call and look at the shingle and siding and have us save what you need and draw the same later.

The BANK of PERSONAL SERVICE

Remember the 3%

In starting a Savings Account, one is apt to underestimate the importance of the 3% compound interest which this Bank pays on Savings.

On a dollar or two, 3% interest looks small, but as the total amount saved grows to fifty, a hundred or perhaps five hundred dollars,—then the 3% adds materially to the Saver's bank balance twice a year.

Remember, the first deposit of $1. or more also earns 3% interest.

RESULTS OF YESTERDAY'S ELECTION

COUNTY GOOD ROADS QUESTION LOSES BY 1828 VOTES

Adrian City Goes Largely Democratic While Townships Give Mostly Good Republican Majorities.

Latest returns from the County Road Plan gives a majority against it of 1828 votes. The city of Adrian votes for New Charter giving a majority of 139 for it thus making commission government an accomplished fact. The Democrats will control the council and have elected Dr. Chase mayor, also by a majority of 46 votes in favor of Sunday Theatres.

Total vote in Tecumseh township at yesterdays election was 591 against 700 a year ago

Republicans elected every officer on the ticket except Justice of the Peace and Treasurer, Lynn Hardenburg having no opposition.

The Progressive vote seemed a little light with the exception of Constable E N. Satterthwaite who received a complimentary vote of 133 This might seem as if the 'old Republican mother hen' is gradually gathering her wayward chicks back under her protecting wings.

GIGANTIC SEA WAVES.

Force of These Raised by Earthquakes or Violent Storms.

The term tidal wave is erroneously applied to almost any unexpected wave that inundates the seacoast or the shore of a great lake. These waves are rarely if ever due to the tides since the real tidal wave is a phenomenon admitting of exact calculation and prediction, but they may be traced usually to some distant earthquake or violent storm.

When an earthquake occurs beneath the sea the vertical movements of the sea bed generate a great wave, which is propagated outward from the center of the shock and reaches the land after the arrival of the earth wave. In the open sea this wave is so broad that it cannot be perceived, but when it reaches shallow water near the shore it rushes forward as an immense breaker, sometimes sixty feet or more high and overwhelming everything in its course.

The sandy beach deposits and loose bowlders are swept away, while inland the surface is strewn with debris. The velocity of these great sea waves is greater than the ordinary waves raised by the wind. A submarine earthquake near the coast of Japan in 1854 gave rise to sea waves which traversed the whole breadth of the Pacific at a rate of about 370 miles an hour. At Smoda, Japan, the waves were thirty feet high, while at San Diego, Cal., they measured only six inches. Such an earthquake wave near the coast of Peru once lifted a gunboat of the United States navy and landed it a mile inland.—Kansas City Star.

WEALTH IS OVERESTIMATED

Reported Weyerhauser Owned Only Part of Enterprises Bearing Name

Pasadena, Cal., April 6.—Frederick Weyerhauser, Minnesota lumberman, died at his winter home at Oak Knoll aged seventy-nine. The body was placed aboard a train later and sent to Rock Island, Ill., his old home for interment. Mr. Weyerhauser caught a cold a week ago while attending church. The final sinking spell came when it was believed Mr Weyerhauser would recover.

It is said the wealth of Mr. Weyerhauser, placed by men to exceed J. D. Rockefeller's, is vastly overrated. It is said he owned really about fifteen or twenty per cent of the stock in the enterprises bearing his name.

"BILLY" SUNDAY IS A SUICIDE ANTIDOTE

His Work Is Acknowledged In Pennsylvania University.

Philadelphia, April 6.—Provost Edgar Fahs Smith's purpose in having "Billy" Sunday address the students at the University of Pennsylvania was to put an end to the possibility of more suicides at that institution. This was the declaration made in an interview by Provost Smith.

He decided that if the minds of youths, depressed because of scholastic failure or for other reasons, could be diverted to things spiritual, their melancholy would have its outlet in religious expression rather than in self destruction.

Accordingly he asked "Billy" Sunday to come to the university and speak to the students. The fervor shown by the students at meetings addressed by Sunday is taken by Dr. Smith as an indication that there has been a religious awakening at the university. Bible classes are being organized in all departments of the institution. The fraternities—among them Provost Smith's own fraternity—are inaugurating classes for the study of the scripture. For all this Smith gives the credit to "Billy" Sunday.

BEATEN BY OLD NEWSPAPER

Race Woman Rode In 1863 Defeats Claim to Estate.

Ottawa, Ill., April 6.—A little account in an Ottawa paper of how Mrs. Edward Harney took first prize as equestrienne at the Ottawa county fair late in the summer of 1863 prevented Edward O. Youngblood from getting the estate of Edward Harney, worth approximately $100,000. Youngblood claimed that he was the son of Edward Harney. He said he was born in Ohio and that his father had gone to the Civil war before he was born.

A copy of the Ottawa paper and the army records showed that Harney was married at Ottawa, Ill., in 1862, went to the war in the spring of 1863, and that the boy was born in 1864.

The Black Opal

It Brought Good Luck After All

By CLARISSA MACKIE

"So you are going to marry Craveth?" asked Robert Delmore with a note of pain in his voice.

Ina Standish turned her beautiful gray eyes upon the young man and spoke coolly enough, although her heart was wildly beating.

"Yes," she said deliberately, "I am engaged to marry Anthony Craveth. Won't you wish me happiness, Bob?"

"Of course I will, Ina, although you may not need my good wishes. You have attained your ambition—you have made a brilliant match."

"You are unfair—you have no right!" flared the girl hotly. Then, as if reading something in his frank eyes, she drooped her head and murmured: "Forgive me, Bob. You are right, as usual. I am horrid, but I've been poor all my life, and you don't know how I hunger for the good things of the world."

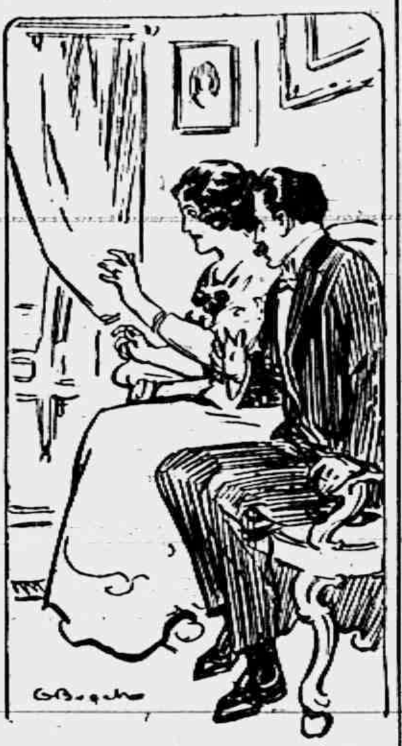
"The luxuries you sigh for are not the really good things of the world," said Delmore gravely. "I know that, for I am a rich man, yet I am supremely unhappy."

"Yet"— She was beginning swiftly when the door opened and a servant announced Anthony Craveth.

He entered, a tall, dark man, with a long, sallow face ornamented by a jetty black mustache and imperial. His shining black hair was brushed smoothly down over his high, narrow forehead in a deep curve.

Anthony Craveth was of French parentage, and he was called fabulously rich.

Now, as he came into the room he darted a sharp glance at Robert Delmore and gave him a cool greeting. Delmore tendered his congratulations on the approaching marriage with Miss Standish, bent low over Ina's white hand and then took his departure.



"I'M AFRAID OF IT!" SHE SHUDDERED.

Ina was very white when she was left alone with her betrothed. Craveth was an ideal lover, and even Ina, who cared little for him, felt the romantic charm of his ardent wooing.

At last he brought from his pocket a small tortoise shell ring case and, opening it, took out a beautiful black opal ring, the stone surrounded with small diamonds.

"This," he said tenderly, taking her left hand in his own, "is the traditional betrothal ring of the Craveths. It was brought from Australia many years ago by an ancestor of mine, and since then it has always been worn by the brides of my house. It is said to bring happiness and good luck to all true lovers."

He slipped the beautiful ring on her slender finger and then kissed her rosy finger tip and the black opal.

"Until you permit me to touch your lips," he murmured reprovingly.

Ina did not appear to hear him. She was staring at the ring with horrified eyes.

"I am afraid of it, I am afraid of it!" she shuddered as she held her hand toward him. "Take it off, Anthony. I cannot wear it."

"Nonsense," laughed the lover, patting her hand. "You are superstitious, as most people are where opals are concerned and especially black opals. They bring good luck to our family."

So, finding that Anthony was so bent upon her wearing the black opal ring, Ina stifled her prejudices and said no more, but that evening when she sat alone in her room she looked at the opal for a long time.

"I am afraid—afraid—afraid!" was her last thought as she went to sleep.

That night Ina had a vivid dream. She thought that she was walking in the fields and that she wore the opal ring on her finger. A shadow darkened the sky, and she looked up to see a great eagle descending in sweeping circles.

She dreamed that he attacked the opal ring on her finger and carried it away with him, leaving her finger torn and bleeding.

Ina awoke, with a little scream, to find that the early morning sunlight was breaking through her east window and that part of her dream had come true, for the opal ring was gone from her finger and the finger was cut slightly, as though the jewel had been roughly torn away.

It was a moment of intense excitement when Ina faced Anthony Craveth and told him about the loss of the black opal ring.

The incredulous smile on his countenance when she described her dream and told of her awakening to discover that the ring had really disappeared brought a strange terror to her heart.

"What is it, Anthony?" she cried sharply. "Why do you look at me like that?"

"Because I am interested in your story," he replied dryly.

"But—but you look as though you scarcely believed me," persisted Ina nervously. "Of course I know that some one must have entered my room and stolen the ring from my finger, but—but you must understand that the entire transaction appeared as a dream to me and nothing more!"

"Of course I never doubt a lady's word," said the man, with a mocking smile. "But, mademoiselle, you understand that as the black opal engagement ring has vanished, so our betrothal is dissolved!" With a deep bow he vanished from the room, leaving Ina heartbroken over his cowardly insinuations.

Ina's father instituted a close inquiry into the matter of the vanished open ring, and, unknown to the girl, he consulted Robert Delmore, who had long been a friend of the family. Robert had long loved Ina and wanted to marry her, but the girl's ambitious nature had chafed against his slow wooing, and she had accepted the more brilliant Craveth, whose courtship had been as brilliant as it was brief.

Both Mr. Standish and Delmore agreed that it would be an easy matter for a thief to steal the ring from Ina's finger, for her bed was drawn close to an open window, which, although heavily barred, was always open at night. It would have been easy for an interloper to have stood on the little balcony outside the window, thrust his arms between the iron bars, taken Ina's hand and removed the ring.

They decided that that had been the course pursued, for they found muddy footprints on the floor of the balcony and deep indentations on the flower beds beneath, where some one had jumped to the ground.

A few days afterward Ina sat listlessly regarding the advertisements in the daily newspaper. Suddenly a familiar name caught her eye:

> LOST.—Stolen from the residence of Anthony Craveth of Sydney, Australia, a valuable ring set with a large black opal surrounded by diamonds. Large reward and no questions asked for information concerning jewel. Address
> MESSRS. LINN & HODDY,
> Counselors, Wharf Street, Sydney.

"How strange!" cried Ina. "Why, the ring was stolen from my hand! What does Anthony mean? Has the loss of the ring driven him out of his senses?"

She put all these questions to her father, who confessed himself bewildered. In turn he showed the clipping to Robert Delmore.

"I'll take this home with me and study it out," said Delmore gravely, and his first visit was to the nearest cable office, where he sent off a long message to Linn & Hoddy at Sydney. While he waited for a reply he made what investigations he could concerning Anthony Craveth and his family history.

To his surprise, he found that the only Anthony Craveth who was known to be living was a native of Australia and had never visited America. The New York Craveths repudiated any acquaintance with the man who had engaged himself to Ina Standish.

Inquiry at Craveth's hotel revealed the fact that the man had paid his bill and departed four days before. No one knew where he was or the reason for his sudden departure. Robert Delmore asked permission to examine the rooms he had vacated, and there he found a pair of mud stained shoes which proved to fit exactly the footprints around the Standish residence.

Two days after he sent the cable message to Sydney Robert Delmore called upon Ina Standish and her father.

"At last I have uncovered the mystery surrounding the disappearance of the black opal ring," he said gravely, "and I must say, Ina, that the ring certainly brought ill luck to you as well as to its real owner."

"Its real owner!" echoed the girl. "Didn't it belong to Anthony Craveth after all?"

"Yes, it belonged to him safe enough, and the tradition concerning it was authentic, but it happens that the man you knew as Anthony Craveth was not that gentleman at all, but a thief who stole the ring from Craveth's home in Australia. The real Anthony Craveth is married and has a family."

Ina shuddered. "I was afraid of it," she sobbed. "But it served me right for being such an ambitious wretch! I didn't really care for Craveth, and"—

Delmore's arms went around her. "I know you didn't, Ina. I knew you loved only one man in the world, and if you had waited another day he would have asked you! But it's all right now, and I'm sorry, dear, that Craveth's black opal brought you such ill luck"—

"Ill luck!" cried Ina, with shining eyes, as she drew away and looked at him adoringly. "To find out my mistake, to be prevented from making a lifetime blunder, to find out that you love me—why, Robert, that's the best luck in the world!"

"So the black opal brought us good luck after all," laughed Delmore tenderly.

FLORIDA AND HER VETERANS.

State's Confederate Pension Allowance the Largest—Next Reunion.

Interesting in connection with the twenty-fourth annual reunion at Jacksonville, Fla., May 6, 7 and 8, is the fact that Florida pays out more money per capita for the support of dependent ex-Confederate soldiers than any other southern state. Florida's allowance for this purpose has been $600,000 a year, but the legislature has passed a still more liberal pension law, which will authorize additional payments of approximately $150,000 a year, making the total $750,000 per annum paid to Confederate pensioners by the state.

Florida is not only caring for the living, but the memory of the dead is also kept green. Throughout the state Confederate monuments have been erected by both public and private means. All told, there are twenty, or possibly more, and others are yet to be erected. A home for ex-Confederate soldiers is maintained at Jacksonville. Last year the state appropriated $5,000 to the Confederate soldiers' home at Jacksonville. Two Confederate monuments have been erected at Jacksonville, and a monument will be dedicated to the women of the Confederacy during the coming reunion. This monument is a companion to the handsome state memorial unveiled last May on the battlefield of Chickamauga.

3 KILLED IN WRECK

Train Plunges Through Bridge at Attica, Ind.; Many Hurt.

WABASH EXPRESS WRECKED

Continental Limited Drops to River When Structure Collapses—Steel Cars Avert Horrible Catastrophe—Few of the Injured Are Believed to Be in Serious Condition.

ATTICA, IND. — Three persons were killed, another fatally injured, and fifty others less seriously hurt when the Wabash River bridge collapsed and hurled the Continental Limited train of the Wabash system into the ditch and partly into the river.

Wrecking crews had just cleared away the debris caused by a wreck earlier in the day. Passengers from the former train were transferred to the Continental Limited, and, arriving at the bridge, the train started over very slowly.

The engine had nearly cleared the last span, about 150 feet from the extreme end of the bridge, when the crash came. Down went the engine, and down went the bridge clear back to the first pier in the water, and down went the cars on these spans.

The dead are: Tim Hull, engineer, Peru, Ind., married; Jacob Miller, fireman, Peru, Ind., married; J. A. Thomas, Wells-Fargo express messenger, Huntington, Ind.

The engine, tender and three cars plunged through the broken span, all falling a distance of about thirty feet to the bank of the river, and one car was partly submerged. Only the breaking of the couplings prevented the remainder of the train from falling, and only the fact that the cars were of steel averted terrible loss of life.

Engineer Dies in Cab.

Tim Hull, the engineer, died at his post, and was probably killed instantly. The engine turned over backwards and Hull was crushed. Fireman Miller was flung out of the engine cab, but caught by falling fragments of the bridge.

Express Messenger Thomas was killed in the combination express, baggage and smoking car by some heavy express packages, or possibly his own safe, falling on him as the car plunged through the opening in the bridge.

The Injured.

The injured are: Walter C. Rush, Georgetown, Ill., head hurt; Charles Slescher, Catlin, Ill., right leg twisted, accompanied by wife and two children, but they were uninjured; Jacob Johnson, Williamsport, Ind., back sprained; Mrs. Fred L. Gemmer, Indianapolis, Ind., shoulder broken and badly bruised; Lorenz Gemmer, Indianapolis, Ind., skull fractured, left side of face paralyzed, chin bruised; fourteen-year-old son of Mrs. Gemmer; Miss Marie Kramer, West Lafayette, Ind., right leg sprained and badly bruised; Warren C. Scott, Attica, Ind., right knee wrenched; Rev. A. W. Wood, Lafayette, Ind., superintendent of the Northwest Indiana District Methodist Episcopal church, back wrenched; W. E. Squier, Quincy, Ill., neck strained; Walter Mathes, Williamsport, Ind., back hurt; Mrs. Tom Powell, Williamsport, Ind., back badly hurt; Vans Pollen, Keewanna, Ind., two ribs broken; J. E. Webb, Peru, Ind., negro brakeman, caught between coaches, leg and arm smashed, back wrenched and bruised; J. W. Shaw, Lima, O., back wrenched; C. D. Dumbond, Maywood, Ill., chest bruised; Frank Warlin, Detroit, Mich., flagman, hip hurt; Ray Wright, Lafayette, Ind., shoulder and arm hurt, rib cracked; H. O. Black, Danville, Ill., chest hurt; Earl Lincicum, Homer, Ill., back bruised and wrenched; Ed Riggle, Peru, Ind., car repairer, hurt in head chest and abdomen, serious, may die; Frank Bliss, express messenger, Detroit, Mich., leg fractured below knee; A. B. Adams, Legro, Ind., chest and right leg hurt; George Blair, Peru, Ind., both legs sprained and bruised; Leonard C. Gorton, Perry City, Ind., right lobe of ear torn off and head bruised; Edward Susanka, 338 Concord street, Detroit, back badly wrenched and suffering from nervous shock; Frank Krause, Wheeling, W. Va., head hurt badly; William Moss, St Louis, Mo., right leg fractured below knee; Charles Grace, 214 West Seventy-fourth street, Delphos, Ohio, broken ankle, head and face bruised; Herman Baumgart, 516 Bryan avenue, Danville, Ill., scalp wound, ear torn and back wrenched; J. E. Price, 4247 St. Louis avenue, St. Louis, Mo., pitched through window, body cut and bruised, not serious; Mrs. George Taylor, Clinton, Ill., bruised internally and suffering from nervous shocks; Samuel Wheeler, negro, Indianapolis, Ind., sprained knee; J. C. English, Danville, Ill., mail clerk, shoulder blade fractured; Charles Grace, Fairmont, Ill., left foot smashed; H. Palmer, St. Louis, news agent, scalp wound.

REVENUE IS LESS

IMPORTS AND EXPORTS FALL

Underwood-Simmons Tariff Measure, After Six Months, Meets with Decreased Business of All Kinds of Which Custom House Is Barometer—Beef Imports 60,000,000 Pounds.

WASHINGTON. — The first half year's record of the new tariff law presents a spectacle of falling revenues, increased deficits, reduction of industrial activities and smaller exportation of manufactures.

The new law ended its first six month's record at the close of business April 3rd, and the report of the treasury receipts tells the story of the full period so far as relates to revenue while other official reports just issued cover in detail the commercial operations of five months and furnish a basis for an estimate as to the sixth month of the period.

Fall in Customs.

The actual figures for the six months shows a fall of over $25,000,000 in customs receipts when compared with the corresponding period of the preceding year. Not a single month in the entire period shows as large receipts from customs as that of the corresponding month of the preceding year when the Payne-Aldrich law was in operation, and in but one of the five months for which details of imports are available are the imports of manufacturers' materials as large as in the corresponding month of the previous year.

For the five months for which detailed figures of trade under the new law are now at hand, the imports of manufacturers' raw material amount to but $253,000,000 against $280,000,000 in the same month of the preceding year and those of manufactures for further use in manufacturing are but $122,500,0000 against $149,500,000 in the preceding year.

Export Records as Bad.

Meantime the export records are equally bad so far as relates to forcing our manufactures into foreign markets. The official record of the five months ending with February, 1914, shows but $315,750,000 in exports and of manufactures for further use in manufacturing $149,000,000 against $162,000,000 in the corresponding period last year.

As to the increased food supply under the removal of duties the quantity of beef imported in the five months for which a complete record is at hand shows a total of but 67,000,000 pounds and the reports for the sixth months from current publications which present a weekly record indicate that the total for the full half year will amount to considerably less than one pound per capita.

REA ASKS RATE INCREASE

President of Pennsylvania Presents Some Interesting Arguments.

WASHINGTON. — Samuel Rea, president of the Pennsylvania railroad system, who submitted interesting arguments to the interestate commerce commission in an effort to show the necessity for an increase in freight rates on the railroads east of the Mississippi, said in part:

"Our company is owned by over 89,000 stockholders. Fully forty-eight per cent of this number is made up of women, and two-thirds of the stockholders do not hold over $2,500 each of the stock. No return on many of our lines has been earned, and on almost all of them the return has been inadequate."

CHARGES UPLIFTERS HATCHED EVIL PLOT

Trouble Grows Out of Raiding Negro Club.

ANN ARBOR, MICH. — Charging that the movement of local reformers to prosecute the proprietors of the Maple Leaf club, a Negro organization, is the result of an alleged conspiracy to discredit the administration of Sheriff William H. Stark. Attorney A. J. Sawyer charges that Rev. H. L. Rotzell, assistant pastor of the First M. E. church agreed to furnish two students to spring the trap and Dr. Mummery, a prominent churchman and Y. M. C. A. worker, agreed to furnish a detective to obtain the evidence necessary to convict.

Eli A. Gallup, a junior literary student from Brockport, N. Y., and Howard G. Cooper, a junior student from the same city, were the men chosen to purchase liquor at the Maple Leaf club. Gallup testified that he approached Ronald Becks, a negro, who is employed in the taxicab stand of Sheriff Stark, and went with him to the Maple Leaf club, where Becks sold him whisky. Detective Beck, of the Burns agency, in Detroit, who is alleged to have been interested in the case, failed to show up.

Attorney Sawyer says he will ask for warrants for alleged conspiracy to compound a felony as the result of the testimony so far adduced.

The Maple Leaf club is a successor to the notorious Huron club, a negro resort which has frequently caused trouble for students at the university. Recently the club was put out of business. Following the issuing of warrants for Ronald Becks and two other negroes the police raided the place and seized whisky and poker chips and other gambling paraphernalia.

MADDEN IS IN PRISON AGAIN

He Violates Parole Second Time; Once Made Escape.

JACKSON, MICH. — Clarence Madden, one of the most notorious prisoners ever held at Jackson prison, has been returned to that institution for violating his parole. He frequented saloons and became intoxicated. Madden escaped from the prison in June, 1912, having been shipped out of the prison yard in a box car. He was captured in August of the same year and was paroled last December.

Madden was sentenced from Ingham county in 1907 and ten years for assault to do great bodily harm. He was given a parole in 1910 but violated it soon after being released.

PIONEER MINISTER IS DEAD

Rev. J. S. Sutton, Methodist, Expires in St. Clair at 94.

He was for many years a Methodist clergyman and held pastorates at Lexington, Ruby, Grand Blanc, Milford, Petersburg, Stevenson, Dearborn, Brighton, and Marysville. Since 1878 he had been living in retirement.

WOMAN ATTACKED BY A COW

Mrs. Charles Reeths Owes Her Life to Quiet Horse.

MUSKEGON, MICH. — Attacked by an infuriated cow in the barn on a farm in Muskegon township, Mrs. Charles Reeths owes her life to the fact that the animal, after goring her about the face, neck and upper part of the body threw her under a horse and could not reach her.

IS RESORT KEEPER A MISSING HEIRESS?

Believed Bessie Clark, of Detroit, Is Weaver Legatee.

DETROIT, MICH. — Is Bessie Clark, keeper of a questionable rooming house on Macomb street and former owner of a disorderly house in Detroit's underworld, the heir to $100,000, left by Frank Weaver, of Manton, Mich., to an adopted daughter by that name, and the woman for whom the authorities have been searching for nearly a year?

The story of the former woman of the demimonde, told after an anonymous letter had been received, saying that she was the missing heiress, corresponds in general details to the facts in the case at Manton.

The woman said she could prove her identity, if she was the right party, through her mother, who is still living. She was rather skeptical, however, that the Frank Weaver, whom she says adopted her, was worth $100,000.

"He had a nice home," she said, "but I never thought he had that much money."

Frank Weaver, of Manton, Mich., left $100,000 to a daughter known as Bessie Weaver, but whose real name was Bessie Clark. He adopted the girl in 1887 from a New York state foundling home. The girl was later in a Grand Rapids home. It is believed by the authorities that she was taken from there to Coldwater and thence to Detroit. All trace of her was lost years ago.

Weaver died last July. He ordered that every effort be made to find her. Several women have claimed the estate, but their claims have not been substantiated.

CHARGED WITH INFANTICIDE

St. Joe Police Arrest Woman as Slayer of Her Babe.

ST. JOSEPH, MICH. — Annetta Potter, a divorcee, thirty years old, was arrested here charged with the murder of her infant child, whose body was found three weeks ago wrapped in newspapers at the race track in Benton Harbor. The baby, a girl, was less than a week old. Mrs Potter's paramour, and the alleged father of the child, Charles Fairbanks, a young Benton Harbor business man, has fled from the city.

The officers believe the baby was strangled or smothered to death and its body cast away. Mrs. Potter comes from a well known family in this city, and at one time was prominent socially. She formerly resided with her husband in Illinois.

J. H. P. Hughart Heads G. R. & I.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by Catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

THE BOYS' CORN GROWING CONTEST,

The Boys' Corn Growing contest promoted by the county organization of the Y. M. C. A.'s promises to be quite an attractive affair this year. Heretofore the boy with rich soil has had the advantage over his competitors But by a new scheme of scoring the contestant may excell along four different lines (1) Yield of the acre plat (2) Profit on investment. (3) Written history on how the crop was grown. (4) The ten exhibit years. He may go high in any one or all of these and be so recognized.

The committee has endeavored also to make the contest democratic and general. There will continue to be the champion of all champions but he must surpass all his competitors in the above named points, at least in general average. But any boy growing corn of a given quality, showing a good profit yield and written an account of the same will be considered a champion corn grower and will receive an award.

Among the prizes to be offered are the following: trip to Lansing to the State Round-up; pair of full blooded chickens; a trophy for the first champion to be kept as long as he retains the honor. All boys entering the contest are to be members of the Boys' Growers Club and will probably have some distinctive badge.

Any Lenawee County boy between the ages of twelve and nineteen may enter by signing the enrollment blank and paying the fee of twenty-five cents. For the rules of the contest and further information, write or see E. J. Arnot, County Y. M. C. A. Secretary, Adrian, Michigan.

To Those Interested in Birds or Bird Study

On looking at the moon through a telescope, one may see numbers of birds cross its surface. From such observations it is computed that migrating birds fly at a height of from one to three miles. This is a very interesting study as one sees birds that nest in the arctic region and winter in the southern part of the southern hemisphere. On favorable nights one may see a great variety of large and small birds coming north to their summer homes.

ADRIAN COLLEGE

May Soon be a Thing of the Past.

It is with regret that the friends of Adrian Protestant College hear of the possibility of its closing. Pressing financial difficulties now face the present administration and the resignation of President Anthony adds to the general regret.

In the report of President Anthony he states that the funds have become so depleted that it will be impossible to continue unless funds are raised at once. The situation is much to be deplored as this is the oldest co educational institution in the middle west.

Good Advice.

An unprepared man went to address a Sunday school. Thinking to be funny, he asked this question: "What would you do before so many bright boys and girls, who expected a speech from you, if you had nothing to say?" "I'd keep quiet," replied a small boy.

When Roasting Meat.

When meat is being roasted, and there is danger of its becoming too brown, place a basin of water in the oven. The steam will prevent scorching, and the meat will cook better.

At the Opera.

"Wasn't this girl in the ballet once?" "Yes, for 20 years; then she was ten years in musical comedy, and now she just sings."

You Can't Afford to Buy Any Car Until You Have Seen The Master "Six"

We claim there is no car—either "four" or "Six"—within $500 of its price that is the equal of the Chalmers Master "Six" in quality of materials, performance or good looks. On the truth of this claim we stake our business reputation, and the capital we have invested in Chalmers cars.

If what we say is true you want a Master "Six" in perferance to any other car under $3,000. That's only business sense.

Make Us Prove our Claims

Now, we don't ask you merely to take our word for it. But we do ask you to prove for yourself whether our claims are true. Yes, we even go so far to say you can't afford to buy any car at any price until you have seen the Master "Six" and make us prove its worth.

The Chalmers Standard Road Test is the proof we offer.

This is not the ordinary kind of demonstration ride. It is a real test which shows you in deeds—not words—what the Master "Six" can do.

You see with your own eyes how this Master car will creep along on high gear at two miles an hour and at a touch of the throttle speed away like a hare.

You feel with your own body the absence of vibration which only such a "Six" can give; the comfort of the 132-inch wheel base, the big tires and the underslung rear springs.

Non-Stallable; We Prove It

This test shows you the simplicity and power of the Chalmers-Entz one motion electric starter. It proves to you that the Master "Six" motor is non-stallable. By actual performance it demonstrates the safety in giant brakes that will stop the car in its own length.

If you are a driver, take the wheel yourself. Actually experience the flexibility of a car that will start "on high" without a jerk or jolt; that will go from a standstill to 25 miles an hour in ten seconds

Challenge Other Makes

These and a dozen other wonderful features of performance that no car can surpass and few can equal, the Chalmers Road Test will prove to you. Then look at the Master "Six" and see for yourself if any other car is more beautiful.

So let us take you out on the Chalmers Test Ride. Then challenge any other car in the class of the Chalmers to duplicate its silence, smoothness and flexibility; challenge any other car in any class to show equal value at the price. You are under no obligation except to yourself—and you do owe it to yourself to buy the best dollar-for-dollar value you can get in a motor car.

Chalmers Master "Six"—2, 4, or 5 Passenger	$2175
Chalmers Master "Six"—6 Passenger Type	$2275

It will be impossible for us to duplicate the shipment without charging more. It will pay any farmer to drive miles to get some for his barn.

Sturgis LUXURY CARRIAGE

Many baby carriages have no springs at all or springs so stiff that a weight ten times heavier than baby's is required to bend them. Either way, baby's delicate, growing body is subjected to a jolting and jarring that is liable to injure him permanently.

That's why we particularly want you to test out the famous

STURGIS
Luxury Springs

by pressing lightly with fingers outspread on the Luxury Seat and Back of the carriage. Then you will see why these fine springs afford absolute protection to the infant from all jars and jolts.

Sturgis Luxury Carriages are light, strong, collapsible with one operation. Have interchangeable quick detachable wheels, perfect balance, handsome nickeling and finish and many other features.

The BANK of PERSONAL SERVICE

Remember the 3%

In starting a Savings Account, one is apt to underestimate the importance of the 3% compound interest which this Bank pays on Savings.

On a dollar or two, 3% interest looks small, but as the total amount saved grows to fifty, a hundred or perhaps five hundred dollars,—then the 3% adds materially to the Saver's bank balance twice a year.

Remember, the first deposit of $1. or more also earns 3% interest.

HIS FIRST RUN

In response to an alarm of fire Wednesday morning Floyd Bryan, our new village teamster, with half a dozen men made a rapid run to the home of Clark LeBaron in the southwest part of town. On arriving they found everything peaceful and quiet. Enquiring of the people they were told that an alarm was sent in but they had extinguished the fire themselves. A hole through the ceiling showed where the fire had been. The fire department returned to the council building at a more leisurely pace than when they started out,

Police Asked to Find Boys.

The authorities, it is said, knew that the Cone boys were not implicated in the fight, but sensational publicity heaped insinuations upon them until they left the country.

You Have Nasal Catarrh Not Very Bad, But--- It Bothers You a Good Deal.

Some people have nasal catarrh and know it. Not only the patient knows it, but all of his friends know it. Many people know it that are not his friends. Just those people who happen to meet him in the street car or on the public square.

That sort of a nasal catarrh need not be described. Everybody knows the symptoms without their disgusting recital.

Peruna helps such cases every day. Thousands have attested to this fact unsolicited. Peruna benefits even the worst cases of old nasal catarrh.

But there are cases of nasal catarrh not so evident. One nostril is stopped today. The other nostril is stopped tomorrow. Cannot breathe freely through the nostrils. Easy to sneeze. Mucus in the nose too thick. Sometimes forms brownish lumps. Catch cold easily. Never quite free of a cold. These symptoms describe a case of subacute nasal catarrh. Many people have it, and some who would not admit they have nasal catarrh.

He knows he must blow his nose freely. He remembers that he does not breathe easily through the nose. He recalls the fact that he snores some now, whereas he did not previously.

Subacute nasal catarrh! Or we might call it incipient nasal catarrh. Or, still better, nasal catarrh just beginning and becoming chronic.

Now is the time to take Peruna. A little Peruna will do wonders at this stage of the disease. Snuff a little weak salt water every morning (see "Ills of Life," sent free by Peruna Co., Columbus, Ohio), just enough to clear out the nose. Take a dose of Peruna before breakfast Hold it in the mouth. Let it trickle down slowly and breathe the fumes of it out through the nose as you swallow it.

This will stop an incipient case of nasal catarrh in a few weeks. Stop it entirely. The nose becomes clear again. The breath is sweet. The breathing free. No more snoring, or snuffling, or sniffling, or catching cold easily. All of these things are in the past.

An army of men and women have been benefited by Peruna. You might as well become one of the benefited ones as to allow it to go on any further.

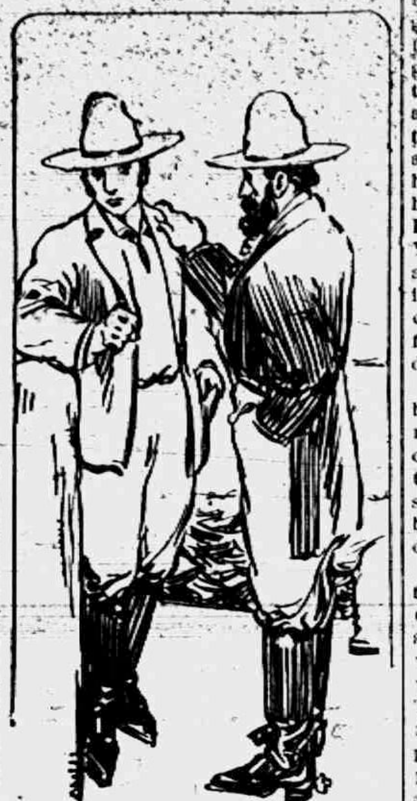
Story of a Man Who Was Believed a Thief

By WILLIAM CHANDLER

Among those who went to California when gold was discovered there in 1849 was Joseph Griffin. He was a married man with one child, a girl of ten.

Griffin decided to make the land journey. He went from Buffalo to St. Joseph, Mo., traveling most of the way by stage, and there outfitted with one of the "prairie schooners" of that day, a wagon with a canvas top, drawn by horses, which he filled with provisions, cooking utensils, bedding and such other articles as would be needed on the journey. When all was ready and he was about to start a rawboned country boy stepped up to him and said:



MR. GRIFFIN TOLD ZEB THEY MUST PART.

"Say, mister, won't you take me along?"

"What's your name?" asked Griffin of the boy.

"Zeb."

"Zeb what?"

"I don't know. Father and mother were killed by Indians on the plains. I was picked up by buffalo hunters."

"Have you any home?"

"No."

Little Molly Griffin stood by the wagon listening to this dialogue, and her big blue eyes were filled with pity. She said nothing, but remained intent on what her father was saying.

"Have you no clothes but those you have on?" he asked the boy.

"No."

Griffin remained silent a few moments, deliberating. Then he said:

"I want a boy about your age to help with the horses and anything else there is to be done on the way. I'll give you your grub, but I've nothing else for you. If you want to go with us on those terms you may."

"I do."

"Well, come along with me. Those clothes wouldn't last you halfway. You'll need an overcoat when we get to the mountains, and I must have another blanket. Reckon we have buffalo robes enough."

Mrs. Griffin called her husband aside and expressed a doubt as to the propriety of taking with them a waif who was entirely unknown to them, but Griffin said he would need some one.

Zeb proved a valuable acquisition. He soon learned to harness and unharness the horses and was very useful in unloading and loading the wagons when the party camped under the stars. When Griffin was obliged to make repairs the boy proved very handy as an assistant. It was the first time in his life that he had been a member of a family, and he seemed delighted with the association, the duties and the experience of traveling all day and camping at night with the others.

A recital of the adventures of the party would fill a volume. There is only room here to say that after many mishaps and dangers they reached the mountains and after many more mishaps and dangers passed over them and finally struck the region of the gold diggings. By this time Zeb had become a fixture in the family. It would have been cruel to send him away; none of them wished to part with him.

Griffin had brought some money with him, which he invested in mines that had been partially developed. But for a long while none of these investments turned out to be very profitable. Meanwhile Zeb grew to be a young man and gave indications of having sprung from parents above the average in the social scale. He had outgrown doing chores for the Griffin family, but had not outgrown his interest in them. Mr. and Mrs. Griffin were the only parents he had ever known, and, as for Molly, he would at any time have given his head to gratify a whim of hers. But as he grew older he took his pick and shovel and started forth to try his luck as a prospector.

When Griffin had been in California six years he struck a bonanza. He bought a partly developed mine for a song and sold it for a fortune. The amount he received for it was 420 pounds of gold.

It must be remembered that California was still an inaccessible country. To reach the Atlantic coast by land the same perilous journey the Griffins had taken to reach the Pacific must be taken again. To go by sea meant something, though less dangerous, at any rate more tiresome. They desired to return to their home in New York state and carry their fortune with them, but dreaded either of these routes. After much deliberation it was decided that they would go southward by sea to Panama and there attempt to find transportation across the isthmus to Colon and thence by sea again to New York. They would avoid the necessity of a journey down the west coast and up the east coast of South America.

They made preparations for the journey, putting their gold in a box to take with them. It was carefully weighed, showing that there were exactly 420 pounds of gold, exclusive of the box. Just before the ship sailed on which they had taken passage Mrs. Griffin was taken suddenly ill. After deliberation Mr. Griffin decided to send Zeb in advance with the treasure that he might investigate the means of getting across the isthmus. If he found it too difficult to warrant their going by that route he was to write the fact and they would make other arrangements. Zeb sailed on the ship that was to have taken the whole party and in due time reached Panama. He had been instructed by Griffin that if he found it best to turn in the gold at Panama and take a draft on New York he was to do so. As soon as he arrived he made inquiries as to crossing the isthmus and found it practicable, though dangerous, principally from the liability to contraction of disease.

He wrote Mr. Griffin the result of his inquiries, but the latter did not receive his letter, for Mrs. Griffin recovered as quickly as she had been taken ill, and, finding a ship about to sail that would touch at Panama, her husband, worrying about his gold, decided to follow Zeb to the isthmus.

When the party reached Panama they found Zeb in trouble. He had decided to buy a draft for the gold and had taken steps to do so. But on weighing the metal instead of its weighing 420 pounds, it weighed 416. This was a sad blow to Zeb. So fearful had he been that some one might purloin some of it that he had had it placed in his stateroom on the ship and kept it there during the whole of the journey. He scrutinized the box to see if he could find a gimlet hole, a loose nail or any other evidence of an outlet for the gold, but none appeared, and his heart sank within him at the imputation that must necessarily rest upon him of having stolen the missing four pounds of gold himself.

When the Griffins arrived Zeb confessed the shortage which he was unable to account for. Loath as was Mr. Griffin to believe that Zeb had appropriated the missing four pounds of metal, he was forced to believe that the young man had lost the money gambling or in some other way and had been obliged to take the gold to save himself. Possibly he had hoped he might replace it. Mr. Griffin reverted to the time when they had taken Zeb in without any one to vouch for him and admitted that that had happened which might have been expected. Molly, now a girl of seventeen, was the only one of the three who in spite of the indisputable evidence believed in Zeb's innocence.
